lidge or a deadlock—that is the ect of the outcome of the presi- al election, as the contest is today—as it is viewed alike by ublican, Democratic, and La Follette campaign managers.

Republicans expect to win with east and the middle west, in the with perhaps only a handful of toral votes in the old time banner ublican territory west of the Mis- sippi. In that quarter the outcome he election will be determined, with contest narrowed down to Coolidge La Follette.

If the La Follette strength in the west turns out to have been over- ated and Coolidge wins the er portion of the trans-Mississippi ory, the President will be elected he polls by a large majority in the oral vote, according to present in- tions. If La Follette sweeps the west, the projection of the election o congress, which would be dead- thereon indefinitely, may be ex- ed. This is the view of the more ervative Republican managers.

"Coolidge or Chaos."

It's a question of Coolidge or os, they say, adopting George entious phrase.

That it will be either Coolidge or a deadlock is the admission of the ocratic managers. They do not ect the election of Mr. Davis at the polls. They virtually have abandoned west and are now concentrat- on New York, New Jersey, Ohio, ana, and to some extent on Illi- . But they cannot figure out a vic- for Davis unless he should carry one of these states, and then in addition to hold the solid south der states. That would be a phe- al accomplishment, and conse- ntly veteran hard-boiled campaign agers on the Democratic side are fooling themselves or their candi- . The fact is that nothing would rise the Democratic leaders more the election of Mr. Davis on Nov.

Then, with the election thrown into ress, there will be an opportunity make a deal with the Republicans he choice of Davis for President Dawes for Vice President, or of ther over Charley Bryan for Vice ident with the help of La Follette in the senate and making him ident in default of an election by house by March 4.

What La Follette Folks Expect.

Coolidge or a deadlock is also the ctation of the La Follette man- ers. They never have entertained serious idea that the Wisconsin can win a majority of the elec- votes—266. But they are su- ly confident that La Follette will Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Da- , Iowa, Montana, Nebraska, Colo- Idaho, Washington and Califor- with a total of 90 electoral votes, cient to deprive Coolidge of a ma- and to throw the election into ress. AFTER LA FOLLETTE—WHAT?

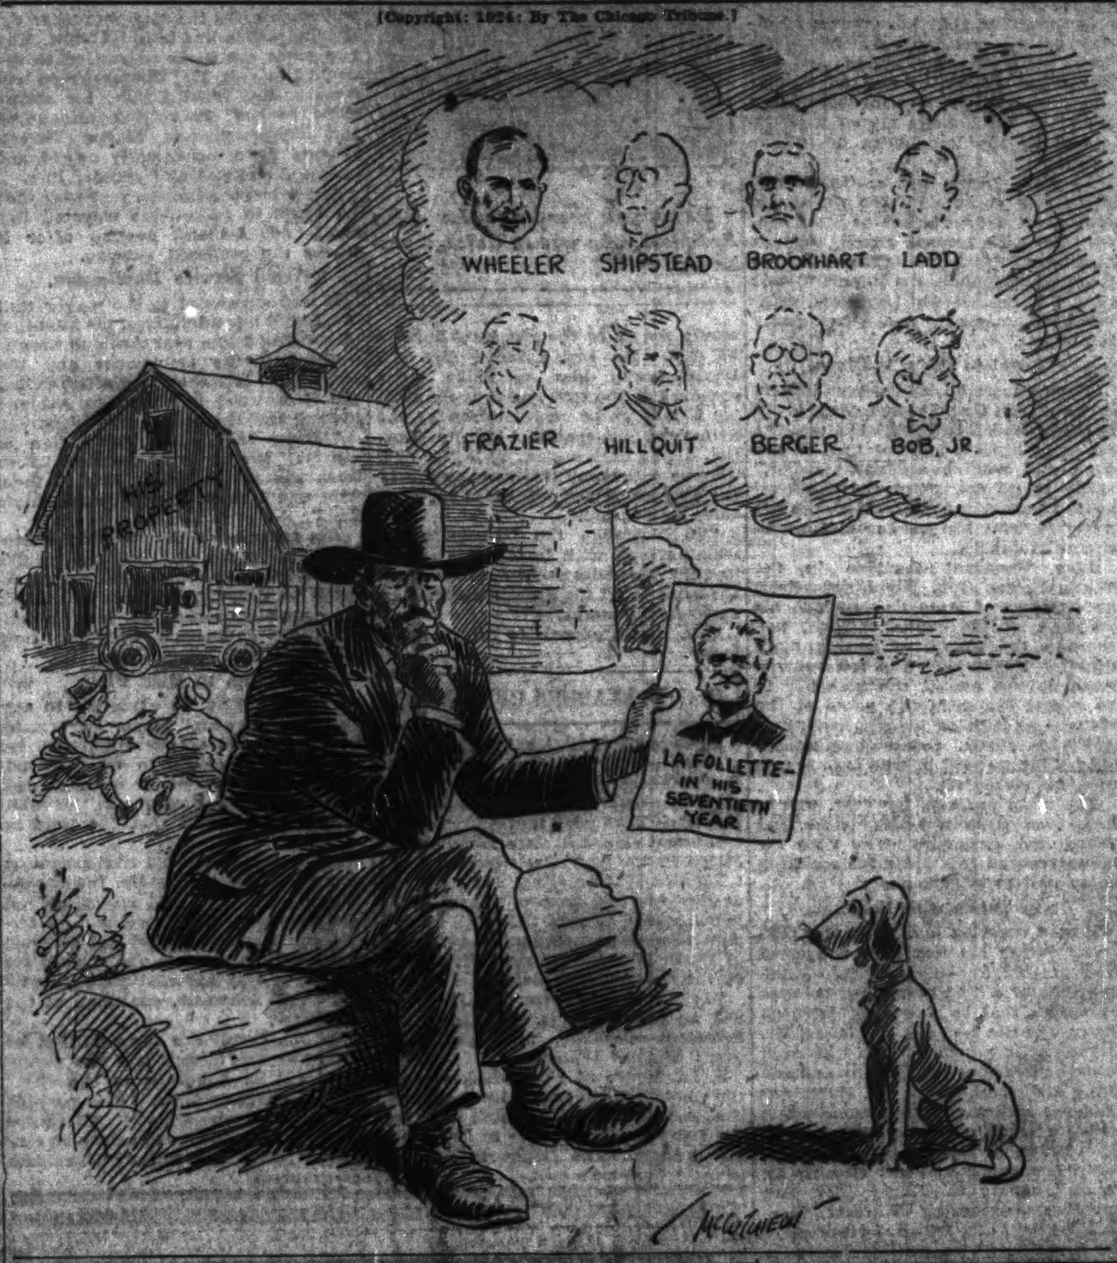
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]



CLOCKS SET BACK 1 HOUR AT 2 A. M.

Daylight Saving Is All Off for 1924.

Daylight saving passed into the discard early this morning and the hour lost last April was retrieved at exactly 2 o'clock. This morning if you didn't forget to set the hands of your clock back, you awoke to Central Standard time.

Confusion as to railroad time and all that sort of thing is ended, at least until next spring. Signs around the various depots announcing the difference between railroad time and daylight saving, were taken down and stored for the winter.

Suburban trains reverted to the old schedules at 12:01 a. m. As usual, many persons forgot to turn the hands of their clocks back with the result that they were at church an hour early, cut on the streets wondering what was wrong, and then feeling very foolish when they learned they were just an hour fast.

FIRE DESTROYS PART OF FAMOUS DEL MONTE HOTEL

Del Monte, Cal., Sept. 27.—The main building of the Hotel Del Monte, famous resort for sportsmen and tourists, was destroyed by a fire of undetermined origin early today, with a loss estimated at $3,000,000. The fire was pronounced under control at 6:30 o'clock, and both wings of the building, containing 300 rooms, had been saved.

The hotel management estimated the value of the structure and furnishings of the main building at $2,000,000, of which $1,000,000 was covered by insurance. A check among guests and members of the hotel staff indicated that the loss of personal effects would reach $1,000,000 additional. As far as could be learned no one was injured.

There were 200 rooms in the main building. The power plant was saved, and with a temporary kitchen and dining room set up, the management continued to care for the guests in the wings.

N., flying in a Curtiss navy seaplane racer, averaged 227½ miles an hour for thirty minutes here today, exceeding his own previous world's record by more than fifty miles an hour. Lieut. R. K. Jones, in charge of the flight, said that Rittenhouse had at one time attained a speed of 242½ miles an hour.

FINDS ESKIMOS WHO HAD NEVER SEEN WHITE MAN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 27. — Peter Freuchlen, member of Knud Rasmussen's expedition to investigate white Indians in arctic North America, arrived home today after having charted the entire arctic archipelago between America and Greenland, which territories have not been charted for 200 years.

Mr. Freuchlen declares Baffin is one of the world's richest animal territories, with thousands of whales, reindeer and seals, the rivers full of trout and salmon, and the entire territory rich in foxes and ermines.

The Eskimo tribes are friendly and honest. The tribes had never seen white men before. They can write and have a language of their own, consisting of hieroglyphics.

Auto Gas Kills E. J. Knabe Day After His Wife Dies

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 27.—Ernest J. Knabe, former president of the Knabe Piano company, was found dead today in his garage here. The engine of an automobile Mr. Knabe had been repairing was found running, and Coroner Horton ascribed his death to carbon monoxide gas.

Mrs. M. Nellie Knabe, Mr. Knabe's wife, died yesterday after several weeks' illness. Mr. Knabe retired from active business [illegible] a year ago. A double funeral will be held Monday afternoon.

HEIR IS BORN TO COUNTESS SALM

May Inherit Rogers' 40 Million Dollars.

[Copyright: 1924: By The New York News.]

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Mary Millicent Rogers, the Countess Ludwig Salm Van Hoogstraeten, this afternoon gave birth to an eight pound baby boy. Mother and son are reported doing well at the Lippincott sanitarium, 667 Madison avenue.

The stork which finally descended upon the sixth floor of the gray sanitarium building bore perhaps an heir for the $40,000,000 which Col. Henry H. Rogers Jr., had sworn should never go to his daughter, Mary Millicent, because of her betrothal to Salm.

Arrival Held Peacemaker.

Its arrival brings peace to the troubled waters of the Salm romance, society, which romped with Millicent at Southampton, L. I., and elsewhere through several seasons, believes. For Col. and Mrs. Rogers were at the sanitarium when Salm's baby was announced. And each of them displayed all the solicitude of a grandparent for the new member in the family.

When Dr. Painter, family physician, made the official announcement, Col. Rogers had been pacing the floor of a room adjoining his daughter's for many minutes. "Yes?" he demanded, and when told he was jubilant.

Wedding Astounded Society.

Society, it was said today, will not be so greatly surprised when it reads this exclusive announcement of the birth of Salm's baby boy. But it certainly was astounded when it learned that the beautiful and famous Mary Millicent Rogers had married the unknown count.

It attempted to trace his parentage, but discovered that this was somewhat obscure. It did learn, however, that he had come out of Austria in search of a fortune.

Again society was knocked off its heels when it became apparent that Millicent had left Salm—evidently for good—and had returned to live in her apartment at the Ritz-Carlton.

Count Salm, by last reports, was roaming about southern France playing tennis.

9 DAY CRUSADE KEEPS POLICE PULLING 'EM IN

One Violator Is Sent Up 60 Days.

Last night at 10 o'clock there had been 2,216 persons arrested by the Chicago police for violation of the traffic laws since a general arrest order was sent out nine days ago.

These 2,216 were arrested by policemen under the authority of Chief of Police Collins. It is estimated that more than 1,000 were arrested in the same period by the police of the various park districts and by motorcycle deputies of the sheriff's office.

One Death for Day.

County officials were hopeful, as the figures were summed up, that the day might pass without auto deaths. But two Chicagoans were killed and six injured last night when two cars struck head on in Roosevelt road one mile east of Geneva. And a little later in Chicago John Atibaina, 2715 West 24th place, was killed at Marshall boulevard and 25th street while he was walking with his wife and daughter.

Mrs. Mary Arbeton, 2807 South Union avenue, and her daughter, Mary, 14 years old, were those killed in the Geneva accident. They were driving with William Arbeton, son of Mrs. Arbeton, when their car was struck by one driven by Philip Hendrickson, 3518 Seminary avenue. All those in Hendrickson's party were hurt.

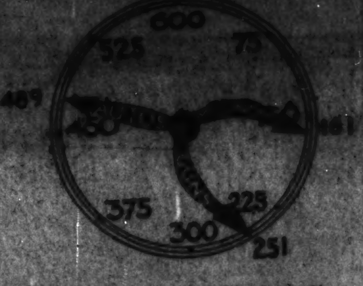
Collins Describes Work.

In spite of repeated fatalities, however, Chief Collins was sanguine of success in his drive against speeders and other violators in Chicago. He presented the following tabulation of arrests by days:

Date.	Arrests.	Date.	Arrests.
19	49	24	340
20	100	25	296
21	341	26	290
22	263	27	286
23	251

Scenes of Most Arrests.

The total of arrests yesterday, Sept. 27, was taken at 10 o'clock. The star stations for the number of arrests were Irving Park and Burnside on the northwest and far southern sides of the city. More than a dozen violators were sent to the Bridewell for serious violations, among them a woman.



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

TWO TO CELLS

Two more motorists, convicted of driving while intoxicated, were sentenced to the Bridewell yesterday, one of them for the maximum penalty.

Alfred Bogacs, 35, 2518 South California avenue, was sentenced by Judge Joseph Schulman to serve sixty days' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $200. Policemen testified Bogacs was so drunk that he had to be carried from his automobile when it collided with another at Fullerton and North avenues.

Given Shorter Term.

Edward Lynch, 38, 853 West 47th street, who was charged with driving while intoxicated, speeding, and failing to stop at a boulevard, was let off by Judge George A. Curran with a Bridewell sentence of five days and a fine of $50 and costs.

Charged with having driven his motorbus at thirty-four miles an hour, Edward Zimmerman, 1231 Newport avenue, a driver for the Chicago Motor Coach company, was fined $50 and costs yesterday by Judge Philip J. Finnegan.

Speeders who appeared before Judge Finnegan were asked, "Would you like to join the 'Twenty Miles an Hour club'?" When they replied in the affirmative, light fines were imposed.

Judge David yesterday refused to free Miss Ollie Clark, cabaret entertainer, from the Bridewell, where she was sent for driving while intoxicated. He dismissed a writ of habeas corpus, filed in her behalf by Attorney David T. Alexander, and suggested that the attorney present his plea to the municipal judge who sentenced the girl to fifteen days' imprisonment.

Typhus Rages in Leningrad as Flood Ebbs

[Copyright: 1924: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Sept. 27.—Details reaching Moscow today from Leningrad show that the flood, which swept in from the Baltic sea, was of a more serious character than was at first supposed. Eyewitnesses are relating gruesome stories of great suffering and terrible hardship of the people, who also sustained enormous losses of property.

The Moscow soviet has assigned $50,000 for relief work among the laboring classes. The trade union council appeals to the unionists for voluntary contributions, and the press has opened subscriptions for funds. The council of commissars has appointed a special commission, including President Kalinin, Kameneff and Zinovieff, to ascertain the total property losses and the sums necessary for relief work.

Typhus Fever Breaks Out.

Typhus fever has broken out in Leningrad, adding to the sufferings of the population, a great number of which are as yet unable to return to their homes, which are still flooded. More than 100 cases are registered daily.

The flood entered the cemeteries and washed away all the newly made graves, causing the coffins and bodies to float out.

Museums Suffer Big Losses.

Of the many museums which sustained damage, the museum Alexander III. suffered the heaviest loss. Valuable paintings, ethnographical collections, rare tapestries and other articles, which were stored in the lower floors and in the basements, were damaged. Fully 250 cases of antiques have been picked out of the water, but fifty cases are still soaking there.

EXPECT U. S. ZEP TO START OCEAN VOYAGE OCT. 5

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Sept. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Preparations for the trans-Atlantic flight of the ZR-3, the Zeppelin built for the American navy, are to begin immediately in anticipation of beginning the journey to Lakehurst, N. J., on Oct. 5 or 6.

One of the first tasks in equipping the airship for the trip will be the taking aboard of thirty tons of gasoline and 800 pounds of food for the crew and the Americans who will be aboard.

During yesterday's rain, when the ZR-3 was returning to Friedrichshafen from its successful trip over Germany, the huge envelope absorbed several tons of water. Several days will be required for the envelope to dry.

GLOBE GIRDLERS AT EUGENE; MAKE LAST LAP TODAY

Eugene, Ore., Sept. 27.—The army around the world fliers completed next to the last hop of their historic flight when they landed here this afternoon at 2:17:05 from Crissy Field, San Francisco.

The three world cruisers landed at the municipal aviation field and were greeted by the largest crowd ever assembled here for any event.

Leaving San Francisco at 9 a. m., they encountered perfect flying weather, and reached here half an hour earlier than they had anticipated.

They will leave here early tomorrow on their final hop to Seattle.

SPAIN BATTLES INCH BY INCH TO SAVE MOROCCO

Rebels Hidden Amid Crags Fight Hard.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TETUAN, Morocco, Sept. 27.—A detachment of Spanish cavalry, whose horses were dying of hunger and thirst, attempted to leave Chechaouen and cut their way through the Riffians barring the high road toward Tetuan, but were forced back last night.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TETUAN, Morocco, Sept. 27.—Fighting inch by inch an almost invisible but deadly shooting foe, the Spanish troops today are slowly advancing southward to relieve the beleaguered garrison at Chechaouen.

For two weeks, thousands of Spanish troops have been cut off from all supplies by the Moroccan rebels. Facing starvation and shortage of water, the garrison seemed doomed until the troops of Gen. Primo de Rivera, the Spanish dictator who is here personally directing the campaign, succeeded yesterday in crushing the main forces of Abdel Krim around Gorgues mountain.

Rebel Chief Tries to Rally Army.

Aviation observations and spies' reports indicate that Abdel Krim is making a desperate effort to rally the war weary tribesmen for another attack against the Spaniards, but indications are that the native fighting men are melting away and returning to their mountain villages with their families rather than continue the campaign.

"In four or five days we will reach Chechaouen, where the garrison is holding out bravely, according to heliograph messages," said Gen. Primo de Rivera in an interview tonight. "Then we intend to push through westward along the Wadlau river to the Mediterranean and subdue the fierce Beni Said tribes, who are the last remaining opposition."

Denies Germans Aid Moors.

Gen. de Rivera today dissipated rumors that German and Turkish officers were instructing, aiding, and leading the Riffians.

"It is all nonsense that the rebels are receiving outside help, except, perhaps from foreign adventurers and soldiers of fortune of all nationalities, maybe including renegade Spaniards," he said. "We have discovered no evidence either of Germans, Turks, French, or English, and rumors that foreigners are helping the enemy with artillery and aviation are evidently unfounded, because the Riffians do not possess a single cannon or airplane.

"The Riffians generally are armed with Mauser rifles, the same model and kind the Spanish army manufactured in Spain, and are using ammunition captured from us. We found only a few natives using French, English, and American arms."

Eight Columns Attack Moors.

The march toward Chichaouen was made possible by the relief of the garrison on Gorgues peak, 3,000 feet above Tetuan and dominating the entire region. From a neighboring summit, after a four hours' climb, we watched the positions of eight Spanish columns of a battalion each—totaling 8,000—who were encircling the 2,000 Riffian besiegers. The Spanish relief forces moved forward and upward only at night under the cover of darkness, bayoneting and knifing the Riffian detachments encountered, but never firing so as to maintain secrecy of movement.

The activity of Spanish airplanes all day long, scattering small bombs and grenades, kept the Moors under cover in the daylight.

The final attack began at daylight, when the Spanish forces, chiefly Arabs and foreign legionnaires, emerged from their hiding places and went forward, and the Riffians, surprised, commenced to disappear. They darted off like rabbits, vanishing between boulders and under mesquite weeds, but inflicted relatively heavy losses before so doing.

50 Spaniards Killed.

The Spanish forces lost fifty killed and 150 wounded, and discovered twenty-four bodies of Riffians, as the enemy, according to their religion, carried off most of their dead.

Gorgues block house was relieved just in time as a score of the garrison were killed and more than 100 wounded. The last remaining water had kept the machine guns cool, and the men's mouths and lips were blackened by the blistering sun, and the tongues were swollen when the rescuers arrived.

Arab contingents were sent to burn the bodies of their enemies on the steep slopes. The Arabs poured gasoline on the corpses and set fire to them while vultures made desperate efforts to snatch fragments of flesh from the flames.

Meat rations were served to the Arab troops in celebration of the victory, and, according to religious rites, the head men of the various companies slaughtered cows, praying to Allah and draining the carcasses of blood before cooking them.

Watches Battle From Plane.

With the slopes around Gorgues clear of Riffians, the Spanish forces along Chechaouen high road, no longer imperilled by the murderous flanking fire, immediately began operations to capture Bankarrich.

Gen. de Rivera permitted me to witness this attack in a Spanish airplane over the scene, and while the pilot was dropping bombs I watched the Spaniards go forward.

The Riffians are no longer afraid of airplanes and fired their rifles at us as we swooped low for bombing. A couple of bullets ploughed through the wings. After a light bombardment with one-half inch mountain guns the Spaniards went forward in open order, the Arabs and foreign legionaires in the lead, with the cavalry following.

Again I saw the marvelous sight of the almost magical disappearance of the enemy. The enemy women and children seemed to disappear into thin air, even dragging off their dead and wounded with them, although the Spaniards discovered six of their comrades recently captured with their throats cut by the Riffians.

As the Spaniards went forward the popping of rifle fire showed that the Riffians had not gone far, and already they had taken up positions behind rocks and boulders and in the cracks of the dry, sun baked earth, ready to snipe any enemy in sight.

Armored cars came up to replace the cavalry, and bullets rattled like hailstones against the steel sides of the cars, but the machine guns were unable to spot any Riffians.

May Trade for Gibraltar.

THE TRIBUNE is able to state that the old proposition of an exchange of Gibraltar for Ceuta will probably come up again after the completion of the present campaign, which will restore Spanish military prestige and bring a peace agreement with the Moors.

The advent of submarines, modern long range artillery and high explosive, big caliber shells has made Gibraltar obsolete as an impregnable position. The air currents around the towering rock prevent the establishment of an aviation station. Owing to frequent crashes and casualties, the British have abandoned the airdrome and shipped all machines from Gibraltar. Gibraltar also relies on Spain for fresh water, which is piped across the peninsula connecting the mainland.

Since the armistice the British have been seeking an entente either with Italy or Spain as a counterbalance to the French continental supremacy, and since Premier Mussolini came into power the tentative bargain with Italy has been checked. It is pointed out here that Great Britain will find a stanch friend in the Madrid government if Spain could cease chafing under the foreign possession of Gibraltar. Public opinion in Spain would readily accept the transfer of Ceuta for Gibraltar. The African naval base would include sufficient hinterland for an airdrome, besides the excellent deep water harbor and many springs of well water.

TRADE SHOW TO DISPLAY MODEL OF CITY SUBWAY

Practice as well as theory will be demonstrated in the fourth annual Uptown Chicago exposition and trade display to be held, starting Oct. 13, in the Broadway armory. Each exhibit to be shown, it is planned, will contain some feature that will enable the owner to improve his surroundings.

George F. Nixon, president of the Uptown Chamber of Commerce, is offering prizes to merchants having the most attractive and instructive booths.

A kitchen clinic, with a completely equipped cooking school, has been devised for women. Complete preparations of meals will be demonstrated. Styles for men and women will be displayed on mannikins.

The Chicago Rapid Transit company will display a model of Chicago's subway and elevated systems as they are expected to appear in 1950.

DR. BUNDESEN ISSUES WARNING.
Health Commissioner Says Watch Your Blood Pressure.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Chicago's able Health Commissioner, in connection with his work of teaching the people of Chicago how to be healthy and live longer, points out that High Blood Pressure is Nature's Danger Signal.

A large percentage of people of middle age and older have High Blood Pressure, though at the beginning many so afflicted feel well and are not aware of their condition. If not relieved, this dangerous pressure grows worse and often causes death by producing Apoplexy or Heart Failure.

In a recent issue of his Weekly Health Bulletin Dr. Bundesen urges every person of thirty-five or older to have a test made of his blood pressure at least once a year. Such tests frequently disclose conditions, totally unsuspected, which not only endanger the health of the individual, but his very life itself.

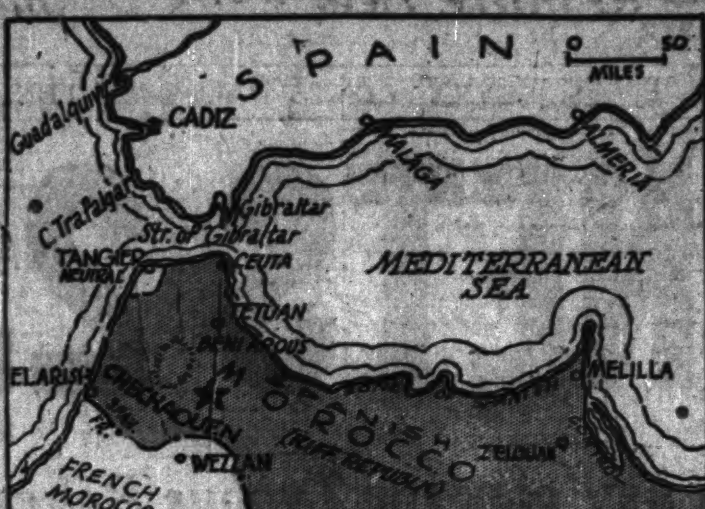
Dr. Bundesen aptly reminds us that good health, Nature's greatest blessing, is necessary if we are to be successful and happy. He calls attention to the wisdom of taking the necessary steps for relief at the first sign of trouble.

You can obtain a free test of your blood pressure if you will cut out this article and take it to the Chicago office of the Witter Water Company. You will also be given a free sample of Witter Water, which has reduced severe cases of High Blood Pressure for many thousands of people. Physicians prescribing this Water have found that it neutralizes the acid poisons in the blood which so often cause, not only High Blood Pressure, but Rheumatism, Neuritis, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, and other dangerous conditions.

This Company also has for free distribution a valuable Booklet telling the causes, dangers, and the best method of caring for people suffering from High Blood Pressure and the other diseases mentioned.

Those who cannot call may obtain a free sample of Witter Water and free copy of the Booklet by mailing this article, with their name and address, to Witter Water Company, 612 South Dearborn Street, Chicago. Their office is open until 9 o'clock Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings for free tests of blood pressure and distribution of free Booklets and free samples of the mineral water.—Adv.

WHERE SPANIARD AND MOOR CLASH



Spanish troops are advancing from Tetuan to relieve the beleaguered garrison of several thousands of men at Chechaouen. By a brilliant victory Friday against the Moroccan rebels at Gorgues mountain, Gen. Primo de Rivera opened the road to Chechaouen. The victory came at a time when it looked as if Spain was facing complete defeat and the Moors would drive its army into the city.

Once the Riffian rebels are subdued, the Spanish dictator is expected to attempt to trade Spain's share of Morocco to Britain for Gibraltar.

The Moroccan city of Ceuta would offer England an excellent naval base.

DAVIS SCOFFS AT 'MOSCOW PERIL'; HITS JOHN BULL

Calls Bob G. O. P.'s 'Bogey Man.'

BY DONALD EWING.

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee, tonight turned his attack on the British form of government with a declaration that it is "the British lion," and not the bolshevist "Moscow wolf" that threatens American liberty.

The candidate was in the midst of a joint denunciation and defense of Robert M. La Follette when the startling statements against the nation to which he once was ambassador were made. He had attacked Charles G. Dawes for spreading the belief that "under every bed is a Red."

"And then, turning to La Follette's plan for congressional veto of the Supreme court and the constitution, he declared with a shout that the story that La Follette would lead us on to Moscow and bolshevism through this practice, was a Republican "campaign bogey man," set up to delude voters.

"Back to London."

"My real objection to Senator La Follette's proposal is not that it is leading us on to Moscow, but that it is trying to take us back to London," he said.

Vetoing the Supreme court, he declared, was just returning to the British form of government with a parliament supreme and a constitution that becomes at will what parliament wants it to be.

And later, he said:

"We have trotted out a bolshevik, or a wolf, covered with the skin of a British lion, and that is the destroyer of American liberty."

The nominee spoke with a vigor that caused his voice to go back on hm. Tonight his throat was being treated by a specialist. His right hand also is useless from excessive handshaking on his western trip.

Headquarters "On Rocks."

Davis arrived here tonight after a hectic day in the national capital where he conferred with his aids in an effort to straighten out the tangles in national Democratic headquarters that thus far have made the nominee's campaign one of almost complete disorganization. There was little in the conference there to bring hope to Mr. Davis, so far as his party is concerned, but much to cheer him personally. Washington gave the candidate many receptions during the day.

Tonight crowds here lined the sidewalks on both sides of the streets for ten blocks. An overflow meeting had to be held in front of the courthouse, for Du Pont theater, where Davis spoke, was full.

The nominee at the start of his speech attacked Coolidge's silence on political issues. "Just as the historian will refer to 1920 as 'the year of great promises,'" said Mr. Davis, "so will he refer to 1924 as 'the year of great silence,' great mysterious silence.

"It is a vast parading silence, but it is broken here and there by the vocal candidate who goes around warning the American people there is a Red under the bed. This reference to Gen. Dawes was cheered.

HUGHES WILL LEAD SPEAKERS' ARMY TO AID TEDDY IN N. Y.

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes will lead national spellbinders who are to be brought to New York in an effort to elect Col. Theodore Roosevelt governor, according to reports here tonight.

Democrats believe the renomination of Gov. Smith has altered the whole character of New York state politics.

Among those who are to aid Secretary Hughes are Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, Senators Willis of Ohio, Pepper of Pennsylvania, Moses of New Hampshire, and Solicitor General Beck.

La Follette Condemned by Vets for 'War Record'

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 27.—A resolution adopted today by the 35th division association, a world war veterans' organization, in annual convention here, condemned Robert M. La Follette, candidate for President, and cited that six years ago La Follette was considered "unfit, an enemy to the country, and a foe to the army and navy."

GOV. BRYAN LAYS "REBUKE" TALK TO HIS OPPONENTS

Says He's Ready to Obey Orders.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

"Brother Charlie" Bryan, governor of Nebraska and team mate of John W. Davis on the Democratic national ticket, came to Chicago yesterday to take any reprimand that the party managers might have for him for failing to pull his part of the load in the campaign.

Accusations that his dreams of obtaining the presidency through deadlocks in the electoral college and congress have impelled him to "double cross' his own party and deal quietly with the La Follette crowd were inspired by the Republican opposition, he said.

If Gov. Bryan got a "spanking" there was nothing on the surface to indicate it, either before or after conferences with Lincoln Dixon, western manager; National Committeeman George E. Brennan, the Illinois "boss"; Gov. J. Y. Saunders of Louisiana, western field marshal, and other party strategists.

"Loyal to Party"—Dixon.

Manager Dixon and other leaders declared that Gov. Bryan's party loyalty never had been questioned and the governor himself insisted that he has been and will be a "good soldier," ready to go any place the speakers' bureau wants to send him if it does not interfere with his job as chief executive of Nebraska.

Like President Coolidge in the White House, Gov. Bryan says there are matters of state that require his presence at his capital. Then, too, there is the matter of getting more coal for Nebraska. The laws of the state do not permit the governor to be a coal dealer in the name of the state so he is doing his wholesaling as a private citizen. One of the purposes of his Chicago visit he said is to scrape up some more coal.

The main purpose, however, was to look over western headquarters, get acquainted, exchange views with the managers and talk tentative speaking dates and arrangements.

In Touch with Davis.

It was reported last week that Mr. Davis during his visit here, suggested that Mr. Bryan be called into headquarters for a little going over because of reports that he was lying down on his part of the job. Mr. Davis and Mr. Bryan are in constant touch with each other exchanging suggestions and one thing and another, but Mr. Davis has not even intimated any dissatisfaction with the conduct of his running mate, Gov. Bryan declared.

Mr. Brennan talked with Gov. Bryan about coming to Illinois for two speeches, suggesting Warsaw, Hancock county, and Salem, birthplace of the Bryan brothers, as likely spots for garnering Democratic votes.

Gov. Bryan's appearances on the stump are up to the speakers' bureau, he said. Mr. Bryan added that Mr. Davis wants him to make some speeches in the east and that the matter is now under consideration by the managers. He speaks at Oberlin, Kas., Oct. 4, and at Yankton, S. D., Oct. 16. These are the only two dates definitely set. Regarding the outlook in his state Gov. Bryan said:

"In Nebraska the Democrats are running first, with La Follette second and the Republicans third. It is about the same in all the great northwestern agricultural states."

Gov. Bryan expects to return home today.

Democrati ccandidate for Vice President, who was in Chicago yesterday.

G. O. P. LEADERS OPTIMISTIC

At Republican national headquarters glowing predictions were made for G. O. P. success in Oklahoma, Idaho and even in North Dakota, where the Republicans have gone into court to protect their electoral slate from confiscation by the La Follette forces.

Senator Watson [Rep., Ind.] arrived at headquarters from a trip to Oklahoma, where he says the G. O. P. will gain a senate seat through the election of W. B. Pine for the seat left vacant by the retirement of Senator Owen.

"It is just as certain that Mr. Pine will be elected as is the election of President Coolidge, and that's all over," Senator Watson said.

J. La Moure of North Dakota said the whole issue in that state is radicalism, and that the main thing is to get the full vote of the state to down the malcontents. The Democratic ticket is not a factor, he said.

DEVER TRACTION AND "L" PLANS UP TO COUNCIL

Mayor Admits Certain Points of Conflict.

Mayor Dever's traction plan and the projected new elevated lines and extensions offered by Samuel Insull, head of the elevated company, conflict in certain places, it was admitted by the mayor yesterday.

Where the two projects conflict it will remain for the city council to determine which line is to be built. The two plans are to be submitted to the council on Oct. 22. The aldermen will receive Mr. Insull's plan for extensions to cost $23,000,000, announced last February, and Mayor Dever's scheme for a municipally owned and operated elevated and subway line.

Mayor Dever admitted yesterday that he plans to extend his elevated line south on Ashland avenue after it leaves the proposed subway.

Avoid Service Duplication.

It was suggested to the mayor that Mr. Insull has announced his intention of building a line near Ashland avenue connecting the stockyards and the Englewood branches, and of extending the Englewood line west to Ashland avenue and then south to 74th street.

"There will be no duplication of service," Mayor Dever declared. "Both lines will not be built. One of them will, and I think it will be the city's line."

His attitude on that particular conflict between his plan and Mr. Insull's was taken to mean, and the mayor refused to deny it, that he would ask the council to refuse Mr. Insull's petitions for extensions wherever they conflicted with a municipal line.

Sticks to Own Plan.

"I am paying no attention to any plans but my own," Mayor Dever said. "With the aid of our engineers, we are going to decide in which localities the city system is most needed, and the traction message to the council will recommend that the lines be so routed."

The city council local transportation committee will receive Mr. Insull's petition for new lines and extensions and consider them, but there is considerable doubt as to whether the elevated company can finance the $23,000,000 project, it was asserted yesterday by Ald. U. S. Schwartz, chairman of the committee.

"If Mr. Insull can show us that he can raise the money and the extensions will be a benefit to the city," Ald. Schwartz declared, "it is possible that they may be allowed. Of course there are many other things to be considered before any further franchises are granted."

OLD TIMERS AT DEDICATION OF TEMPLE TODAY

The dedication of the Chicago Temple today at Clark and Washington streets is expected to bring out many of the "way back when" reminiscenses.

HORACE A. GOODRICH.

Probably no one living can go back further in his personal recollections than Horace A. Goodrich, secretary of the board of Temple trustees. Mr. Goodrich, who is the sole survivor of the original class which entered Northwestern University in 1855, is now 87 years of age. He is the son of the late Judge Grant Goodrich, and went with his father to the First Methodist Episcopal church when he was still in skirts and was led by the hand. Judge Goodrich was one of the founders of Northwestern university and an official of the First church.

The dedication program today includes: Preaching by Bishop Thomas Nicholson at 10:45 a. m.; dedication ceremony led by Bishop E. H. Hughes at 3, with Mayor Dever, Dr. John Timothy Stone and Rabbi Joseph Stolz as other speakers; preaching at 8 p. m. by the pastor of the Temple, Dr. John Thompson.

LOUISIANA BARS BOB'S ELECTORS FROM ITS BALLOT

New Orleans, La., Sept. 27.—The names of La Follette and Wheeler presidential electors will not go on the official ballot in Louisiana in the November election unless the courts overrule the action today of Thomas Killeen, registrar of voters, who refused to certify to the list of names attached to a petition submitted by J. J. Finneran, head of the independent forces.

Mr. Killeen announced that his refusal to certify to the names was based on a ruling by the attorney general's office that persons registered as affiliated with either of the dominant parties could not sign the La Follette nominating papers. The registrar stated the list contained the names of many voters who had registered as Democrats.

Finneran declared he would bring mandamus proceedings in an effort to have the names placed on the ballot.

NEW POISON WIFE ADMITS SLAYING MATE TO MARRY

Second Husband, Jailed for Crime, Denies Plot.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

Marion, Ill., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—The third victim of "Egypt's" sudden epidemic of arsenic slayings was disclosed here today when Mrs. Ruby Herrington Tate, 30, confessed she fed her first husband, Joseph Herrington, two fatal doses of the poison so that she might be free to marry Robert Tate.

Gossip regarding the sensational love pact of the Rev. Lawrence M. Hight and Elsie Sweetin of Ina, a few miles from here, and of how the minister and his mistress killed their mates with poison, was directly responsible for Mrs. Tate's arrest.

While she was being questioned before her confession came Hight was being expelled from the Methodist Episcopal church by the southern Illinois conference of the church in Carbondale.

Expulsion Was Unanimous.

Church leaders said "too much has already been said about the Hight case." The report expelling the errant minister was adopted unanimously and without discussion.

In the latest poisoning case Mrs. Tate implicated Robert Tate, star boarder, the man she married twenty days after Herrington's death. She said Tate during their three years' acquaintance had frequently urged her to shoot, poison or divorce Herrington that they might marry. Tate denies all knowledge of the poisoning.

Meantime the couple are in jail here awaiting a report on analysis of Herrington's vital organs. These today were en route back from Springfield, where the examination could not be properly made, and they will probably be sent to Dr. W. D. McNally, former coroner's chemist of Chicago, who found the arsenic in the stomachs of Anna Hight and Wilford Sweetin.

Similarity in Cases.

Officials noted a strange likeness between the confession of Ruby Tate and that of Elsie Sweetin. Mrs. Sweetin said she fed Wilford Sweetin three doses of arsenic before he died. Mrs. Tate declared her husband was given two, one by Tate and one—the fatal one that killed him—by herself.

Both women stated the man in the case obtained the poison for them and urged them on and on. In the case of Mrs. Sweetin, her minister lover admitted he bought the poison in a Benton drug store six days before Sweetin was murdered with it.

Each woman now sorrowfully says that she did it for the sake of the other man.

"I did it because I loved Brother Hight and it seemed right to me at the time," says Mrs. Sweetin. "We planned to marry."

Ruby Tate puts it in a different way, but she means the same thing.

"I was kinda foolish about Bob," Mrs. Tate says.

Now Both Hate Lovers.

And both Elsie Sweetin and Ruby Tate now say they have come to hate the man they killed for.

Elsie Sweetin says, "I never want to see that man again—never, never, never!" She repeats it over and over in her cell in the county jail at Salem. "If it weren't for him I wouldn't be here."

And Ruby—listlessly, "I thought a good deal of him, but I don't now. I have turned against him. Had it not been for him I would not be in all this trouble."

While the women were talking and immediately following the new amazing poison death in "Egypt," Bishop F. D. Leete, presiding at the Carbondale Methodist conference which expelled Hight, announced that missionary activities might be established in the section, particularly in Williamson county.

The churchman did not say whether the recent poison cases have anything to do with this. Local ministers thought there might be a connection. Before the move is made, the bishop and a committee of churchmen are to make a tour of the district.

After Mrs. Tate signed her confession she was left in the jail here while Sheriff George Galligan was slowly wrestling with Tate for some admissions.

Ruby's Poison Confession.

Here is the woman's confession the sheriff waved in the coal miner's face in his efforts to make the man admit his part in the love and death pact:

"Robert Tate came to my house on Thursday, Aug. 21, and we talked of poisoning my husband. He said he would get the poison if I would give it to him. I did not have the nerve to do that. He said he was going to have me if it took death to get me, and that he would poison him himself.

"So on Monday, Aug. 25, he came to my house again, and he told me then for me to put some peas or corn or something in his bucket the next day and he would dope it at the wash house. So the following morning I put some peas in his bucket and that evening he came home from the mine sick, and I knew what was the matter with him.

"The following Wednesday evening Robert Tate came to my house again. He came to the back gate and told me, 'Well, I have doped him and I think it will get him, all right, but you be sure,' and handed me a box of poison. It was either a half pound or a quarter pound. I took it and set it in the pantry and when the following Thursday or Friday night—I do not remember exactly which—Robert Tate came to my house again and we talked this matter over again. He told me that he loved me and said that I did not love him or I would go ahead and give my husband some more poison.

"Thought It Was Right."

"He cried, he begged and pleaded with me until I honestly thought it was the right thing to do. I had been intimate with Robert Tate since about April or May. I thought a good deal of him, but I do not now. I have turned against him. Had it not been for him I would not have been in all this trouble.

"He would keep telling me, 'Go ahead, give it to him, feed it to him, I mean pour it to him.' So on the following Sunday, Aug. 31, in the evening, there was no one at home but my husband and I. The children had gone to Sunday school and church. I fixed my husband some buttermilk and I put about one and one-half teaspoonfuls of this poison in the buttermilk. I could not tell any difference in his condition and so on the following Wednesday, Sept. 3, he died.

"[Signed]

"RUBY HERRINGTON TATE."

Married and Moved.

The woman said Tate came to her a week after Herrington died and urged her to marry him. They did marry a week after that visit in Burton, coincidentally when Hight says he bought his poison. Then they moved to West Frankfort to live.

The couple were arrested in Johnson City, not far from here, late yesterday. Mrs. Tate was arrested in the cemetery there, when she found the authorities lifting her former husband's body from its grave. She led the officers back to where Tate was waiting for her and he too was placed under arrest.

FAIR ERICSON DAY MARCHERS IN MUNICIPAL PIER PARADE

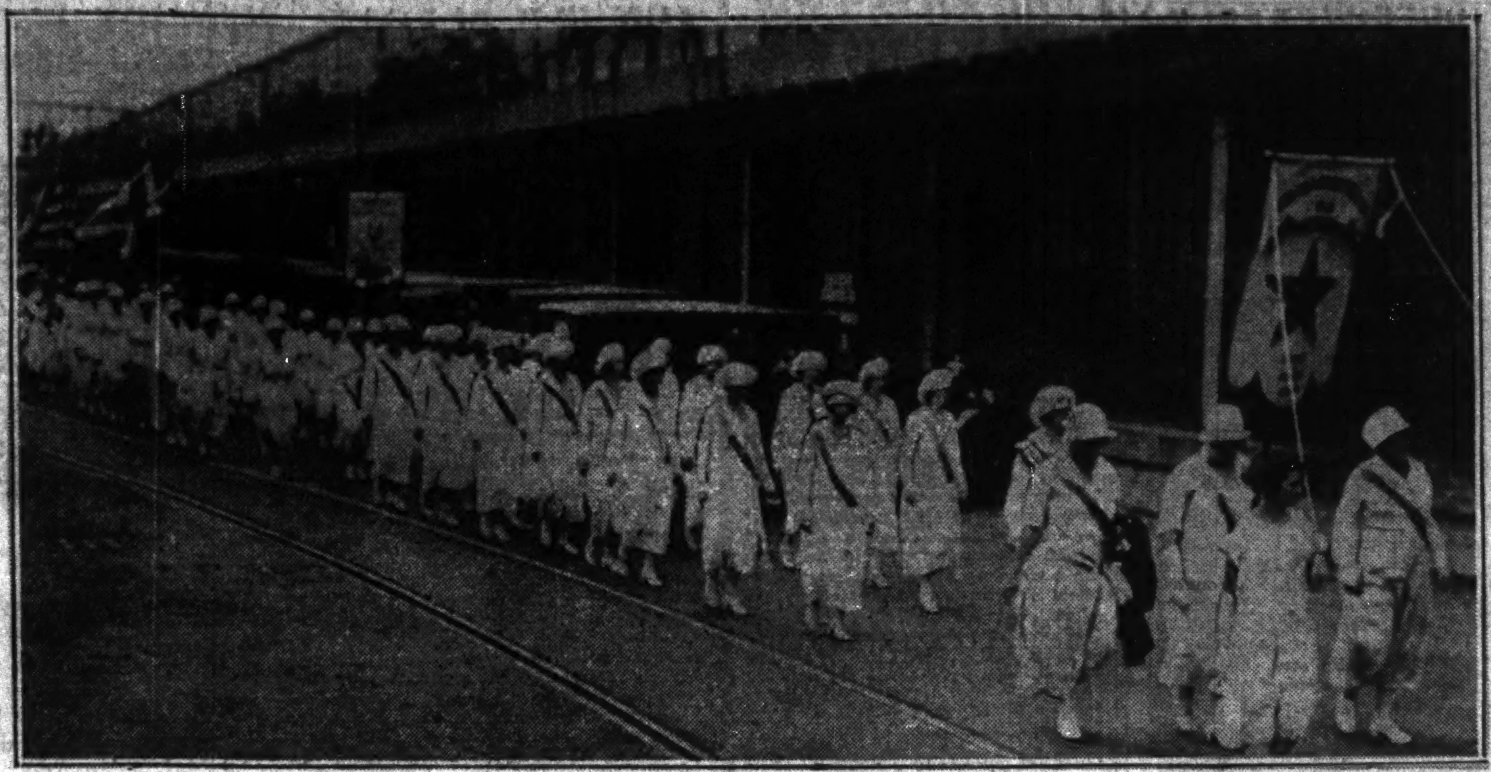

Photo shows section of women marchers as they appeared on the way to anniversary exercises staged by the Norse organizations of Chicago in observance of the nine hundredth anniversary of the voyage of Leif Ericson, when, as the men of Scandinavian countries claim, he first sighted what is now known to the world as the American continent.

NORSE OBSERVE LIEF ERICSON ANNIVERSARY

Celebrate in Speeches, Parade, and Sports.

Celebrating the nine hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the American continent by Leif Ericson more than 5,000 American men and women of Norwegian, Swedish, and Danish descent gathered in Lincoln park, near the replica of the Viking ship, yesterday. There, with numerous floats depicting the old Viking days, they formed in line and marched to the municipal pier.

Various Norse societies combined forces to make this celebration one of the best and biggest of its kind. Flags of the Norselands flew side by side with the Stars and Stripes. Gaily dressed men and women in native costumes gave color to the festive scene.

Many Events Staged.

Following the parade an elaborate program of music, speaking, motorboat races, sailing, rowing, and good old fashioned dancing was held. A handicap motorboat race called the "bang and back again race," staged by the Chicago and South Shore Motor clubs, was easily the feature of the day. Neptune, owned by Charles Englehart winning first place.

Diving and swimming champions included Miss Sybil Bauer, world's champion back stroke swimmer and 1924 Olympic champion; William P. Heyn, Central A. A. U. high diving champion; Walter Colbath, national interscholastic diving champion; Cornelius Oker, national interscholastic back stroke champion; Elder Halvorsen, Central A. A. U. springboard and Illinois state champion.

Pay Respects to Columbus.

"We have no thought of underrating the landing of Columbus upon the shore of America," Oscar E. Haugan said. "His knowledge of Norse discoveries was doubtless imperfect, and we do not wish to minimize his rediscovery. But we point with pride to the seamanship of the Vikings."

Prof. Chester N. Gould of the University of Chicago made the principal address. He told of the early life of the old Scandinavians, of their daring and explorations. "Leif Ericson," Prof. Gould said, "was a symbol of the struggle of the Scandinavian race."

Danish, Swedish and Norwegian folk songs and dances followed. Viking medals were given the winners of the various events of the water carnival; three silver loving cups being presented in addition to the respective winners in the motor boat race.

William V. Kelley's Son Fined $15 in Lake Forest

Phelps Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. William V. Kelley of Lake Forest, was fined $15 and costs for speeding yesterday by Judge Henry Bickerman of Lake Forest. The complaint was made by Thomas Pester, a blacksmith.

3D M. E. PASTOR FOLLOWS HIGHT INTO EXPULSION

Carbondale, Ill., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—With his name and that of a girl of his congregation linked as the principals of an embracing scene in the basement of the Thompsonville, Ill., M. E. church, of which he was pastor a few months ago, the Rev. J. O. Richardson today became the third clergyman to be shorn of his frock at the session here of the southern Illinois conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Richardson did not appear for trial or offer defense, church men explaining that he had "gone west" and that some time ago he surrendered his credentials under charges.

The other two banished from the ministry by the conference were Lawrence M. Hight, Ina, Ill., confessed wife poisoner and instigator of the poisoning of Wilford Sweetin by his wife, Elsie, and C. B. Latimer, former Fairfield pastor, charged with unbecoming conduct involving a woman.

The last remaining bit of ecclesiastical law was satisfied today when the conference voted unanimously to approve the expulsion verdict of the "select number" against the three pastors.

U. S. Raid Prevents Battle to Force Beer Price Higher

Through their raid on a Fort Atkinson, Wis., brewery Friday general prohibition agents from Chicago headquarters averted another bloody beer battle, according to information brought to the prohibition offices here yesterday by persons in touch with the inner workings of the "beer racket" in these parts.

After the purchase of the Wisconsin brewery several weeks ago by the notorious O'Donnell brothers, saloonkeepers were astounded when hustlers representing the O'Donnell gang entered their places and announced that they were in a position to furnish good beer for $20 a barrel, exactly one-third of the current price being quoted for an inferior product by the old time Chicago "leggers," not identified with the O'Donnells.

This, according to government information, made "the boys" quite angry and caused them to serve notice on the O'Donnells that the price had better "be in line" or the shooting would start forthwith.

Spike O'Donnell and his brothers and cousins are reported to have taken this notice as a mere pleasantry and took no action, except to strap on cartridge belts in addition to their usual "rods" and holsters.

Bargain Beer Dissipated.

When the federal agents seized fourteen of the O'Donnell trucks and twenty of Spike's hoodlums, including his brother Tommy, and destroyed 32,000 gallons of beer, the cut rates among the beer patrons were dissipated and, it was hoped, the imminent shootings averted.

Prohibition agents and police were said to have been aided materially in their roundup of the O'Donnell gang by correspondence from some one "in the know"—apparently one who was working with the crew.

Several days ago the following letter was received by Chief Collins. It is said duplicates were sent to principal prohibition officials. The letter:

"Are you aware of the new beer running of the O'Donnells?

"They have become the owners of a brewery at Fort Atkinson, Wis., and are running beer in great quantities to this city every day.

"There is one car, an International, rigged up as a gasoline and oil tank, run under the name of 'the Specialty Oil company.' This car was bought of the International Harvester company of Chicago by Steve O'Donnell, but under the name of Anthony Gerzen, 1249 West 49th place. The use of his name is only a blind.

Popular Brand of "Butter."

"There's one Reo car—blue delivery. Six inch letters in orange. It was painted at 5315 South Ashland avenue Aug. 20, and lettered 'Milwaukee Butter, Eggs, and Cheese.'

"Another Reo, delivery, old body. Painted in six inch orange letters Aug. 20 at 5315 South Ashland. Body placed on chassis at 5309 South Ashland. Lettered 'Delicatessen, Milwaukee Brand.'

"Two G. M. C. trucks—new chassis, old body placed on, at 5309 South Ashland, Aug. 19. One body is of some confectionery and soda supply company, using the name of a firm on Randolph street.

"One ton Diamond-T truck, under the name of the Zion City Transportation company.

"There are others, but at this time I am unable to describe to you. This has been going on about six weeks. The barn at 54th and Wood streets is the station here in Chicago.

"At this time I am SAFEST outside of Chicago."

The letter was not signed, but, according to prohibition agents who checked on the information, was written by a man who "knew what he was talking about."

Look for Hidden Beer.

Prohibition officials last night assigned squads of agents to watch one of the O'Donnell stations where, it was reported, 1,500 barrels of Wisconsin beer were cached.

According to dispatches from Madison, Wis., where Tommy O'Donnell and his keg wrestlers were taken following the raid, O'Donnell was released by a United States commissioner in bonds of $5,000 and arrangements were being completed to free the others. When arrested O'Donnell had more than the amount of his bail in cash in one of his pockets. Hearing of the twenty defendants was set for Oct. 13.

VAN COMPANIES REPORT MOVING ABOUT NORMAL

With the dead line for a great majority of renters but three days away, storage and moving companies report that business is about the same as last year. Rental concessions for apartments are said to have led many to remove their goods from storage.

The outstanding feature this year, according to the moving men, is a big movement from the north to the south side. Many others are moving to the suburbs. In both instances the rental situation is believed to be responsible.

As usual many have waited until the last few days and the big rush will be on until after Oct. 1. Real estate men say there is a surplus of flats in Chicago and that concessions are taking the place of reduced rents.

UNIFORM GRADES AND STANDARDS AIM OF EGG MEN

The National Poultry, Butter and Egg association will hold its annual convention October 13 and 14 in the Hotel Sherman. England, Canada, Cuba, and Australia will be represented, while three delegates are now enroute from China.

One of the principal questions to be discussed will be the creation of uniform United States standards, classes, and grades for eggs, which shall be applicable to the entire country. L. B. Kilbourne of Chicago is president of the association.

TRIBUNE TOWER FLAGPOLE NEEDS "STEEPLEJACK"

Man Selected Will Climb to Top Saturday.

The following advertisement appears in the classified ad section of this morning's TRIBUNE.

> WANTED—STEEPLEJACK TO CLIMB FLAG pole on Tribune Tower. Must be competent to do mechanical work at the top of the pole. Apply to Mr. Maloney, Room 400, Tribune Square.

The advertisement was discovered last night. Mention of its insertion had not been made to the news room of the paper. An investigation followed. Holmes Onderdonk, who has charge of The Tribune Tower, was questioned.

Mr. Onderdonk explained that a mechanical difficulty, something to do with the pulley and the halyards, exists at the top of the fourth highest man made monument in the world. There is difficulty in raising and lowering Old Glory to and from the highest peak in Chicago, he said, and while the defect in the pole is not of serious nature, it must be adjusted before the week is out.

Nearly 600 Feet High.

"We have advertised for a competent steeplejack and that is just what we want," said Mr. Onderdonk. "The top of that flag staff is 587 feet above the ground. At that altitude there is usually a strong wind. It is a dangerous task for any man to tackle, and we want the best steeplejack in Chicago or in America. We do not want any amateurs risking their lives.

"Throughout this week we will receive the applications of the steeplejacks. They should present their qualifications to Mr. Maloney, room 400, Tribune Square, as the advertisement says, and he will interview each man. Friday we will select the best man.

"The ascent will be made at noon on Saturday. That is the time we have set, and we want to have our man picked by that hour. Any men who want to apply for the job can do so any time after 10 o'clock tomorrow [this is today] morning."

Old Glory Admired.

Despite the trouble with the halyards, Old Glory stood flat against the strong southerly wind yesterday while thousands below gazed with admiration and wonder.

There are but three buildings in the world that have greater altitude than the flagstaff. They are the Woolworth building, the Metropolitan Life Insurance tower, and the Singer building. All three are in New York.

When the steeplejack begins his climb next Saturday he will have a long road ahead of him. The flag pole is 111½ feet long.

Drinks and Drives—Gets "Sixty Days"

The heaviest sentence thus far handed out in the renewed war against speeders was given yesterday to Alfred Bogacz, accused of driving while so intoxicated he had to be carried from his auto. As they appeared in court, left to right: Lieut. Emil Anderson, Policeman H. L. Hepp, and the accused autoist, to whom Judge Schulman gave sixty days in the Bridewell and a fine of $200.

CONTEMPT CASE OFF; 'DIVORCE DENIAL ENOUGH'

Deciding that Mrs. Edith V. Randall had been punished sufficiently by being denied a divorce, Superior Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday dismissed a charge of contempt of court against her. Last Saturday Mrs. Randall, an actress, suing Frederick W. Randall for divorce, testified she had lived for more than two years at 2431 North Kedzie avenue. Judge Sabath, suspicious, interrogated her 12 year old daughter and learned that Mrs. Randall had come to Chicago only three days previous.

FATHER OF SLAIN COP FEARS MEN WHO KILLED SON

Virtual admission that he knew the slayer of his son, Sergt. David Boitano, nemesis of the "Black Hand," mysteriously slain two days ago, but that he would not reveal this because he was in fear of his own life, was made at the inquest yesterday by James Boitano, 76, of 307 Beethoven place.

The white haired man told Deputy Coroner J. J. Thumm a story covering three years and which he feels has much to do with the killing of his son.

"Three years ago my son was threatened with death," he said, then his voice broke.

After a few minutes he resumed:

"He was working on an Italian case—I can give no names—"

The old man was interrupted by the deputy coroner.

"Why? We want those names."

"I remember distinctly," he asserted; "I can still picture how my son felt. He was told often to 'lay off'—that he would be shot, murdered."

At this juncture Deputy Coroner Thumm told the witness he inferred from his statements that he knew the person or persons responsible for his son's slaying.

"Why don't you mention the names? Are you afraid that you will be killed, too, if you tell us?" asked the deputy coroner.

"Yes," the old man replied.

Held in $40,000 Bond for Killing, Hatchet Attack

John Sargis, 25 years old, 160 Hill street, was held in bonds of $40,000 when arraigned in the Chicago avenue police court yesterday. Sargis attempted to kill his father-in-law, Errama David, with a hatchet. His wife, Nancy, who witnessed the attack, died from fright. Sargis is charged with murder and assault to kill. The trouble started when Sargis saw a photograph of John Lozer, 648 North La Salle street, with that of his wife. Lozer's bond was set at $15,000. He is charged with accessory to the fact.

McANDREW FINDS SCHOOL PAY HIGH AS UNCLE SAM'S

Teachers Lose Fears of Reduction by Board.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

"There is no reason why we teachers should be treated with any more leniency than any other paid workers. Our service is no less important, our toil no more arduous, our breakdowns no more numerous, our risks no greater. It is an occupation with great opportunities of satisfaction and enjoyment. We live longer; we are better insurance risks than most workers. We have more reason to rejoice than to whine or complain. The majority of us know this. The few loud speaking ones of us who stir up strife and discontent attract more notice than is for the public good. Work in the schools is a privilege, a reason for congratulation."—From the philosophizings of Supt. William McAndrew.

Teachers' salaries in Chicago are about on a parity with those of government employes in positions requiring a similar amount of training. A recent research bulletin, which is quoted in Mr. McAndrew's annual report, gives a few comparisons which have been studied with interest. The first table compares the pay of elementary teachers with that of federal workers of corresponding professional attainments as follows:

1	$2,100	$1,500
2	2,200	1,625
3	2,300	1,750
5	2,500	2,000
7	2,700	2,250
9	2,700	2,500

When one reduces these figures to a monthly basis these salaries are about on the same level over a period of, say, ten years. The schools run five days a week, ten months a year, 200 days a year, theoretically. Figured by the month, the elementary teacher starts in at $150, while the federal employé of similar training begins with $175. The teacher's pay advances with more rapidity. In the fifth year the teacher is getting $200 a month, as against $208 for the federal employé. In the seventh year they are neck and neck, each getting $225 a month. In the ninth year the teacher is getting $250 a month, while the federal worker is getting $225.

Amounts Fairly Even.

In the entire first ten years of service the teacher has drawn $20,500 in salary, as against $24,900 given the federal employé. Again figuring it by the month, the teacher's average for the ten years has been $205 a month, as against $207.50 for the federal employé. It seems to be fairly even compensation, considering the number of months worked. After the seventh year of service the teacher is in the lead.

The bulletin also has a table comparing salaries of Chicago high school teachers with those of federal employés doing work requiring as high qualifications:

Years.	Govt. employes. [12 mos.]	Chi. H. S. teachers. [10 mos.]
1	$3,000	$2,000
2	3,100	2,200
5	3,400	2,800
7	3,600	3,200
9	3,600	3,600

Analyzing these salaries on a monthly basis: The Chicago high school teacher holding a general certificate starts at $200 a month, the government employé at $250. In the fifth year the high school teacher is getting $280 a month, the federal employé $283. In the seventh year the teacher draws $320 a month, the government worker $300. In the ninth year the teacher has advanced to $360 a month; the government worker is still getting $300 a month.

For the first ten years of service the teacher draws a total salary of $28,800, as against $33,900 for the federal employé. Dividing this by the number of working months each has in the year, it appears that during the ten years the high school teacher averages $288 a month, as against $282.50 for the government worker.

Teachers' Alarm Subsides.

As to maner of pay, the teachers receive monthly checks—semi-monthly in September and January, when needed the most, after summer vacation and Christmas holidays.

One analysis of the salaries throws it on a day basis. At five days a week, the schools operate theoretically 200 days a year. The median salary for kindergarten teachers is $2,057, or $10.28 for each school day. The median for elmentary teachers is $2,505, or $12.50 a day. For high school teachers the median pay is $3,080 a year. Dividing by 200, it gives $15.40 a day.

The alarm among some of the teachers that cuts might be made in salary schedules, which required years to bring to their present level—for a long time teaching was the worst paid calling of all—seems to be subsiding. At the board rooms yesterday lesser authorities pointed out that in New York Mr. McAndrew showed his temperament and inclinations are all in the direction of liberality. As to the school board, the gossip was the trustees have no intention of reducing pay, although it may be decided to add three or four pupils to classes.

SCHOOL BOARD TO SIFT CHARGES OF GRAFT IN UPKEEP

Actual Operation to Test $2,600,000 Cost.

Members of the board of education have announced their determination to have an accounting of the $2,600,000 given annually to the engineer-custodians of the public schools for maintenance of buildings. For twenty years the engineers have refused to account for the money and some are reported to derive a net income of from $15,000 to $20,000 a year under the present system.

A committee appointed by the board proposes to operate three or four of the large schools to determine the actual cost. A proposal to give the engineer-custodian a fixed salary, he to act as supervisor, will be considered.

Fund Split Among 325.

The $2,600,000 annual fund is divided among 325 engineer-custodians. They clean, heat and ventilate the buildings; hire and pay for the help, and pocket the remainder. The board purchases all of the supplies. No accounting is given for help employed or expenditures for service.

While board officials feel that not much can be saved in the elementary schools, they are convinced that a decided saving can be made in the high schools, where action will first be taken. Nearly $1,000,000 of the annual maintenance appropriations goes to the high schools. At the same time an accounting from the engineers for the elementary buildings will be insisted upon.

Engineers Deny Charges.

A few representative appropriations made annually to high school engineers for maintenance purposes follow: Englewood, $41,000; Chicago Normal school, $36,000; Crane, $35,000; Senn, $26,000; Harrison, $29,000; Hyde Park, $22,000; Lindbloom, $28,000; Schurz, $23,000. Several elementary schools are given $12,000.

John Cullinan, chairman of the local executive committee of the engineers' union, told the board he could show that the buildings could not be operated for less. He was invited to do this, but declined, saying he preferred to give the information to Business Manager John E. Byrnes and Chief Engineer John Howatt.

Dixie Fisherman, Stung by a Stingaree, Dies

Moss Point, Miss., Sept. 27.—Charles Stauter, 38, of this city, died today after being stung and poisoned by a stingaree while fishing.

STATE ST. GETS SAFETY ZONES FOR CAR USERS

Safety loading zones for street car patrons are to be established in State street tomorrow at Randolph, Washington, Madison, and Monroe streets, it was announced yesterday by Leo. J. Winiecki, commissioner of public service.

Success having followed the installation of safety zones in Clark street, the city has decided to broaden the plan. Commissioner Winiecki declared the zones would be established within a short time at all congested intersections where the public is endangered in getting on and off of street cars.

No parking will be permitted on the east side of State street for a distance of 130 feet from the street corners. The same parking prohibition will be applied on the west side of State street at Monroe, but because of the extreme width of the street, parking will be permitted along the curb at Randolph, Washington, and Madison streets.

Postal Clerk Trapped by Use of Marked Bills

Hammond, Ind., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—John R. Hand of Crawfordsville, Ind., a postal clerk on the Monon, working between Chicago and Indianapolis, is in custody of Postal Inspector Henry H. Wasson, who planted a fake special delivery letter in New Albany, Ind., and trapped Hand by means of marked money. The money was found on Hand's person. Hand's operations, it is said, have been going on for four years and netted him thousands of dollars. He was taken to the Marion county jail.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 PER CENT AIR

Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke, or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent air and 6 per cent common kerosene [coal oil].

The inventor, L. P. Johnson, 609 West Lake street, Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on ten days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Adv.

"CAL OR CHAOS" PROSPECT LOOMS IN CAMPAIGN

Leaders Admit Menace of La Follette.

chairman, Clem Shaver. When the Shaver interview appeared former Congressman James Francis Burke, one of the Republican managers, was moved to make this comment:

"Mr. Shaver's interview confirms two things of paramount interest:

"First, the conviction upon the part of Democratic insiders that John W. Davis is today a beaten candidate.

"Second, that the eyes of the Davis-Bryan combination are already focused on a deadlock in the house of representatives, and the succession of Bryan to the presidency through a combination of Democrats and radicals in the senate.

Will Awaken Americans.

"Mr. Shaver's statement will result in a wholesome awakening of the American people to the dangerous situation in which the hopes of the Democrats and radicals of this country are centered at this hour.

"Many people are now convinced that the recent sudden conversion of William Jennings Bryan from a Davis critic to a Davis champion was inspired by a hidden hope that through a deadlock Bryanism would at last find its way into the White House.

"The fact is that Shaver's statement is a confession that Calvin Coolidge has already won his fight, but the gravest error that Republicans of the country can make is to be lulled into a lethargy of overconfidence. Recent developments of the campaign, culminating in Mr. Shaver's interview, emphasize the importance of settling the presidency at the polls in November in such a definite manner as to avert the business disaster and political penalties certain to follow in a doubtful or undisputed result."

Gaining in East.

"Mr. Shaver states plain facts which are amply corroborated by all the reports we are receiving," said Gilbert R. Roe, northeastern director of the La Follette campaign. "As far as the eastern states are concerned, we are gaining steadily. Every state in this territory, from Maine to Delaware, is a doubtful state, although our reports indicate that Mr. Davis will not prove a big factor in the race in north Atlantic states. A fortnight ago the Democrats conceded us seventy votes in the electoral college. Mr. Shaver now gives us ninety. By Oct. 1 he will be aware that this last figure is woefully inadequate."

MAN WHO SPLIT GERMANS ON BOB MAY BE OUSTED

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Expulsion from the Steuben society threatened Jules Nehring today as the penalty for challenging that organization's indorsement of the La Follette candidacy on behalf of German-American votes.

Nevertheless, Nehring stood firm in his contention that if the 1,000,000 Steubenites were polled they would show a majority for President Coolidge. From several sources it was learned that his resignation is to be demanded. If he declines to resign, it was intimated ouster proceedings will follow.

Nehring announced that he will not resign. Instead, he will test the issue by insisting that charges against him shall be specified.

A semi-official rebuke, in the form of a letter from Frederick F. Schrader, editor of the Progressive, organ of the Steuben society, has reached Nehring, demanding that he retract or amend his statement published last week.

Meanwhile, members of the society from many cities rallied to his support with a flood of letters, telegrams and telephone calls, assuring him that the La Follette indorsement represents the sentiment of only a minority of the membership.

Nehring's statement a week ago was the first indication of a rift in the ranks of the Steubenites. He asserted that the indorsement of La Follette was steam rollered by an inside faction, and that the gesture of consulting the views of the general membership was merely perfunctory.

DISORDERLY HOUSE RAIDED.

Police arrested three colored women, two white women, and six white men in a raid on a disorderly house at 3340 Michigan avenue early yesterday.

Dutch Social Democrats to Submit Disarm Bill

THE HAGUE, Sept. 27.—The Social Democrats, occupying twenty-two seats of 100 in the second Dutch chamber, have voted to prepare a bill for complete disarmament. The government party leaders, however, refuse to approve the bill.

CROWE BRANDS HOPE THOMPSON A HIRED ANANIAS

And That's All He'll Ever Have to Say.

BY PARKE BROWN.

State's Attorney Crowe made yesterday what was described as his "first, last, and only" comment upon the attacks upon him by Hope Thompson, reform candidate for the county prosecutor's office.

He said his time was too fully occupied with the duties of his office and his efforts to bring the record of the last four years before all the voters to leave any "spare moments to waste."

Tags Thompson "Labor."

"When an inconsequential candidate fails to arouse any interest or attract any attention," he said, "it is an old dodge for him to challenge the man in office, hoping by that means to get the ear of the audience attracted by the other man."

Although Thompson's candidacy was announced by the Better Government association, Crowe referred to him as the "labor candidate" in allusion to the fact that he is identified in legal circles as attorney for "a dozen or more labor unions." Some of the union leaders are bitterly hostile toward Crowe because of his uncompromising fight against labor crooks.

"This union candidate," said the prosecutor, "is being financed by the Democratic candidate, who has hired him to say things about me that he himself is afraid to say.

Brands Every Charge False.

"Every charge that he has made is an utter falsehood, and he knows it; but he plans to continue his campaign of falsehood in the hope that he will draw me into a debate which will give him attention he does not merit from the public. He relies upon this method to get his name into the papers and a newspaper that seeks to give its readers only the truth will not publish the mouthings of every soapbox orator merely because he assails a public official.

"If one charge fails he will try another. It is conceivable that such a candidate would take the first case on the docket and demand an explanation of its outcome. When he got it he would take the second case. And then the third case and the fourth. And when one grew tired of answering and was silent, he would shout that there was something wrong here —his charges had not been refuted.

"I shall not waste any further time on this man during the campaign."

British Undertakers Seek to Be Called Morticians

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Dealers in subdivisions in the United States who assume the title of "realtors" have found a parallel in London embalmers and coffin salesmen, who, in an official statement to the minister of health pointing out the indispensability of their profession to society, wince under the indignity of the classification as "undertakers" and suggest "mortican as a more expressive word."

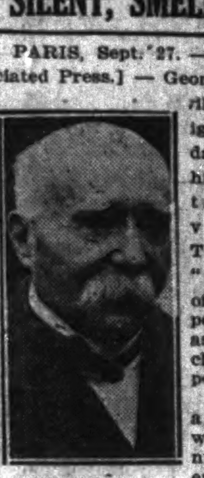
'TIGER' LIKES FLOWERS MORE THAN MEN; ARE SILENT, SMELL BETTER

PARIS, Sept. 27. — [By the Associated Press.] — Georges Clemenceau will celebrate his eighty-third birthday tomorrow in his Vendean retreat in the village of St. Thermine. The "grand old man of France" appears as sprightly as ever, but he declines to discuss political affairs.



GEORGES CLEMENCEAU.

Recently the aged statesman was visited by a number of reporters who unsuccessfully endeavored to obtain his opinion on current events. One reporter insisted on cross-examination of the war premier when he was working in his garden.

"I like flowers," said M. Clemenceau, ignoring the fusilade of questions and plucking a rose. "The have one advantage over men. They are silent."

Then, assuming the expression which caused him to become known as "the Tiger," he added ferociously:

"And they smell better."

TAGGART RESTS COMFORTABLY AFTER OPERATION

Boston, Mass., Sept. 27.—Thomas Tagart, 68 years old, former United States senator from Indiana, who was operated upon for appendicitis here today, was reported tonight by his physician to be "resting comfortably" with every indication of passing a favorable night.

Mr. Tagart was stricken a week ago at his summer home at Hyannisport, Cape Cod. It was thought for a time that the operation might be unnecessary, but today it was performed, and an abscess of the appendix drained.

BADGER CROWDS STAND IN RAIN TO HEAR DAWES

Support the Constitution, Bob's State Told.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Dawes Special, en route in Wisconsin, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Gen. Charles G. Dawes spent this rainy day in putting backbone and fighting spirit into the conservatives of Minnesota and Wisconsin, cementing and consolidating the opposition to La Follette, and stirring the silent majority that has been discouraged or apathetic during the last few years, under the sting of repeated defeats at the hands of militant minorities.

In a string of rear platform speeches reaching from St. Paul to the Illinois line, speeches delivered to deeply interested crowds that came out to meet him in the face of a cold rain, the Vice Presidential candidate strove roughly and vigorously to arouse the feeling that in the La Follette attack on constitutional protection of individual rights the American people are confronted with the most important issue since the conflict of ideas that brought on the civil war.

Warm Welcome in Wisconsin.

Hundreds listened to him in the rain at Lake City, Wabasha, and Winona, Minn., and at no one of eight stops from La Crosse down the line did they fail him, even though torrents fell.

In Wisconsin, supposedly bound by cords of love to the Independent leader, there was just as much of cordiality and interest in rain drenched, shivering crowds as in the farther north country. Wisconsin leaders joined him at various points, including Ed Dithmar, former lieutenant governor; George Burton of La Crosse, George Gordon, Harry Dahl of La Crosse, and others.

In Madison, the home town of Senator La Follette, Gen. Dawes received a welcome from a crowd of 300 to 400, gathered at the railroad station. Many were students of the university, but the North Dakota-Badger football game, on at the time, was the chief attraction of the day. The general paid his respects to the "courage" of those who are opposing the present form of government, but he did not mention the name of La Follette. He was invited to return here to make a special talk to the students.

Here's Composite Speech.

A composite of the Dawes speeches today may be set forth as follows:

"This is the most important campaign we have had in this country since the civil war. When it started out the major parties didn't think they were going to have this kind of a campaign. They expected that we would discuss the budget, taxation, the league of nations, the world court.

"There is a proposal in connection with the ship of state, under which we have sailed for 135 years pretty well, in this country, to throw away the compass, the constitution, and commence to steer by the wind, as the politicians do these days, preaching high beef on the hoof and low beef on the table, high railroad wages and low railroad rates, and all that sort of inconsistent clap trap.

Likes Bob's Courage.

"Now I'll take up this proposition of Mr. La Follette, and he doesn't lack courage. I respect courage. He proposes to make our government a government of congress. That is what this proposition is, to subjugate the executive and the judicial branches of the government to the legislative, to take away from us, as individuals, the protection of the constitution and courts which protect us in these rights, and put them at the mercy of congress.

"Now what kind of a government is this going to be if congress has the right to pass a law telling us where to go to church, or taking our property, if you please? When you have an issue of that sort there is no other issue in the United States. Everything is bound up in it; your wages, the price of farm products, your business, your country.

Sneers at Red Flag.

"Where do you stand? That is the issue. On the constitution, the rock of the constitution, and under the American flag, behind President Coolidge, who has got the guts to stand for them without apology and with courage? Or in the sinking hands of socialism with the Red flag.

"As Mr. Eugene Debs says, 'We will now make no nominations in this campaign, but adhere rigidly to socialistic principles and keep the Red flag flying.'

"That is what he says; just think it over. Take it into your hearts and conscience, and don't listen to these fellows who are preaching all things to all men. They are a menace."

BACK TO EVANSTON.

Tired by three days of strenuous campaigning during which he made a total of twenty-two speeches, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, returned to his Evanston home last night for several days of rest before beginning his next speaking trip.

The next campaign address will be in Memphis, Tenn., Thursday. He will leave Chicago late Wednesday night.

MASON & HAMLIN

Musically the most beautiful Piano the world has ever known

Beethoven's Dream Realized

BEETHOVEN dreamed of an instrument adequate to express his great musical conceptions. If he could but know it, his dream is at last realized in the Mason & Hamlin, musically the most beautiful Piano the world has ever known.

Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata, beloved of all the world, was written for the harpsichord—an awkward instrument with two keyboards and strings excessively long, the tone of which was "harsh and raw."

Each lovely sonata, each mighty concerto was a challenge to the manufacturers of his day to create an instrument upon which they could fittingly be played.

The Mason & Hamlin Piano is such an instrument. Not even a Beethoven—or the most Ultra-modern of our own day—can tax the resources of the Mason & Hamlin.

Mechanically it has attained a perfection beyond anything even thought of a few years ago. The rich, mellow tone fulfills all the requirements of artistic beauty. Responsive to every mood, it is the supreme source of inspiration to the musician of today.

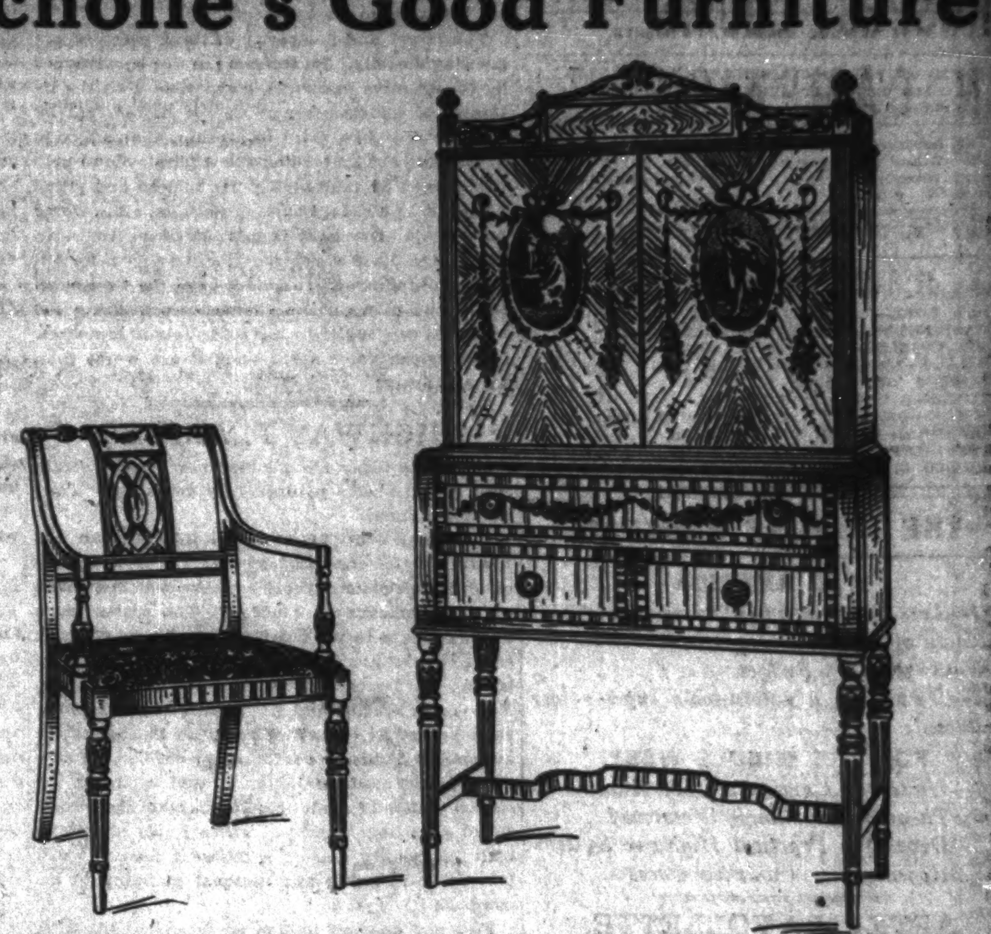
Scholle's Good Furniture



YOU like beautiful furniture; but when you buy furniture you want more than just beauty.

If furniture is to keep its good locks and give satisfactory service, the quality of the materials and workmanship that go into it must be of the best.

You'll find no furniture here that is not of the highest quality—it's all "Scholle-quality"; the best that we can buy.

Our store is full of new furniture; you'll find lots of new, distinctive designs. You cannot fail to find just what you want at Scholle's.

The two pieces shown above are beautiful examples of the furniture of the Georgian Period; the kind of work done by the famous English craftsmen of the 18th century. They are representative pieces from an interesting dining room suite.

The framework is of walnut, tops and ends of prima-vera and the fronts are of satinwood. Most of the satinwood panels are bordered with tulip-wood and a black inlaid line. The decorative scheme is simple and attractive. It consists of the use of amber and green. The bases are painted jade green, thus intensifying the amber tones of the magnificent satinwood panels. The flutes and carved parts are gilded. The hand decorations on the panels are reproductions of the work of the famous decorator of the 18th century, Angelica Kauffman.

Whatever period you want in furniture you'll find it here. Everything here is of the highest quality; everything reasonably priced; everything guaranteed to give complete satisfaction or money refunded.

AFTER LA FOLLETTE, WHAT?

The head of the new party movement, if it is intended to be a new party movement, was born in June, 1855. Senator La Follette is nearing the scriptural allotment of days, and he is by no means in good health. In the preliminary campaign of 1912 he suffered a sensational breakdown, and his resources of strength have now to be carefully conserved.

It is interesting, therefore, to consider what the prospects of leadership, in the conglomerate following under the La Follette banner, are at present. The prospect of a long continuance of a vigorous, alert direction and domination by La Follette seems very slight. We have lately seen another veteran of politics, Mr. Samuel Gompers, forced to make concessions and alliances violently incompatible with his lifelong convictions and policies. The "boring from within" of the radicals has accomplished results with which Mr. Gompers, redoubtable individualist that he is, can no longer cope at his advanced age. Time was that those who have brought about the formal delivery of the federation to the La Follette experiment would have had a fight, and a losing fight, on their hands, but Mr. Gompers seems at last to have been brought down.

This year, La Follette obviously was the leader upon whom the most effective combination could be made to bring the discontented farmers in line, for the time being, at least, with Socialist radicalism and with such organized labor as would follow Mr. Gompers in the desertion of the Democratic party which the radicals in the federation had forced upon him. Senator La Follette's strength in the farming states and with labor was a solid foundation upon which the Socialists could hope to build a strength in this campaign far beyond their previous hopes. But what of the future of this combination? Can it be taken seriously as having a future?

We doubt it. Senator La Follette is an old man and not well. But the welding of such desperate elements as gather or are expected to gather under his banner, the organization of a new party out of the material he has, is surely a task for a leader at the top of his power, not for men like La Follette and Gompers.

We have, therefore, to consider their associates. Wheeler, seized upon for campaign purposes to exploit the oil scandal, is not to be taken seriously. Brookhart, La Follette's most ardent disciple, is the temporary beneficiary of Iowa's agricultural depression, without mental equipment to be a leader of any movement aspiring to be national. Stone of the railway brotherhoods is an able and forceful man, who would be acceptable to the Socialists and radical labor organizations, as well as to many conservative unions. But we are quite certain that the farmers neither would nor could put up with a permanent partnership with labor as the dominant partner.

Senator La Follette, taking advantage of a period of acute agricultural difficulty, has been able to bring together radical farmer leadership and radical labor leadership, with its captive conservatives, and while he is able to hold his sway, and especially pending the return to normal agricultural prosperity, he is assured of a substantial vote. But after this beginning, the movement, in our opinion, will drift rapidly into the hands of its radical leaders. The rank and file of farmers are owners of property and not likely to favor the attitude or theories of socialism respecting private property, the increase of the powers of government, bureaucratic expansion, and the taxation necessary for the support of Socialist schemes. Their normal interest and predilection is and ought to be conservative, and with the return of normal conditions those who have followed La Follette will drift out of the Socialist partnership. The so-called movement will then pass definitely over into the hands of the present left wing and become as a Socialist party about as important as a Socialist party is likely to be in this country.

This, we are confident, is the future of the experiment being tried by Senator La Follette.

But there is something in this movement—which is less of a movement than a milling around of natural discontent—which deserves a better fate. There is a just revolt against the control or domination of our western affairs in politics, in finance, in industry, and transportation by the east. That control or domination is also natural and, indeed, for a while, inevitable. But it is none the less irksome, and inevitably we of the west are going to get away from it when we can. The east is older, richer, more self-conscious sectionally, and therefore better organized and able to enforce its interests. But the west has been growing apace and is stronger than it knows.

When La Follette, and Brookhart, and Bryan, and every popular politician in the west talks about Wall street and the money power, they are touching a reality, even though they pervert and exaggerate it. La Follette's influence has drawn its real strength from the natural resistance of the west to eastern domination, and he has betrayed it by an alliance with a revolutionary radicalism for which the west has no use. Had he made himself the wise and resolute champion of the west, he would have gone far and achieved a great service for the whole nation. But the west doesn't have to adopt a socialistic scheme to get control of its transportation, nor does it want to turn our liberties over to congress for the sake of winning radical labor to its assistance.

The power and prosperity of the great west are growing steadily. Its interests are to be advanced by constructive measures, compatible with the interests of all classes and all the nation, not by alien devices like state ownership, that affliction of Europe; not by turning our affairs over to politicians, not by multiplying job holders and piling up taxes, as Mr. La Follette's Socialist allies would have us do. Our fight is going to be an American fight. The La Follette movement is no help, but rather a hindrance. It divides us of the west hopelessly and offers us no chance of organizing the influence we ought to have for sound measures. The western votes spent upon it are worse than thrown away.

HIGHWAY PLANNING.

Highways today are planned now much as railroad systems were planned fifty years ago. They are not planned.

Piecemeal construction, local interests, an emphasis on the road rather than the system, and much promiscuous enthusiasm have somehow given us much mileage as concrete. The system as a whole could be better organized. A system of trunk roads should interlock the greater centers of population. St. Louis, Detroit, St. Paul, New Orleans, New York, Seattle, and San Francisco must eventually be tied by concrete directly to Chicago if the automobile industry continues to develop. Today those roads need straightening and widening. A second system of roads should penetrate the recreational areas of America. These roads should be built for beauty and on a different plan. It will take state planning and national planning to accomplish it.

Five and one-half million persons annually visit our national forests. Two and one-half million of these are campers, fishers, and hunters. More than four million of them are motorists. In Colorado alone tourists, campers, and fishers spend $25,000,000 in one year. The need for recreational road systems is evident. They will pay the state that builds them.

America is a nation on wheels. No people is more mobile. We have inherited it from our past. We have made facilities for it in our present. Our mobility is the condition of our national unity. No factor in that is more important than good roads. It is time that general road planning be made a regular part of our provision for national highways. Its force has been too feeble in the past.

SMASHING THE RAILROADS WILL NOT HELP THE FARMER.

Arthur Evans, talking with the folks in the northwest, reports that the proposal for government ownership of railroads is not so popular with the farmers as with the Socialist and Socialist-minded backers of the third party. It will become less and less popular as it is examined.

What the farmer wants, regardless of how it is to be got, is efficient transportation at the lowest possible rates. As American transportation is pretty sat[illegible] in respect to efficiency—it is, as a matter [illegible] the most efficient in the world—the farmer [illegible] to the problem of rates. Politicians have been telling the farmer that his rates are high because he is paying dividends on watered or false capitalization. The government inquiry, which has been going on for ten years, does not support the radicals' claims, so they now want a change in the theory of valuation, which we need not discuss in this editorial. Their contention is that the estimated valuation of the interstate commerce commission, $20,884,683,000, should be reduced by one-third to one-half, by from seven to ten billion dollars.

Who would be immediately affected by this reduction? Nearly 800,000 holders of railroad stocks. A million or more holders of railroad bonds. These figures, of course, overlap substantially. But the widest public interest in railroad ownership is that of holders and beneficiaries of some 17,663,000 life insurance policies, 54,096,000 industrial insurance policies, and 21,414,085 savings banks depositors, all directly concerned through the large investments of insurance companies and savings banks in railway securities.

The drastic reduction of railway valuation by one-third to one-half would bring about one of the worst panics, if not the worst, in our history. Farmers, aside from such interest in insurance or savings as they may have, would suffer with the rest of the nation in this panic. After that, would they be compensated through a permanent lowering of rates?

Any farmer who expects that would be sadly disappointed. The result would be the end of private ownership and operation of railroads in this country. Private capital could never be got into railroading after such an experience and the country could not endure the punishment of a system of transportation floundering in receiverships and without funds to keep going.

During and from this process of demoralization the farmers would suffer fully as acutely as any one else, and after the government, forced to take over the properties to save the situation, had put them into operation, what would be the result? Efficient operation and low rates? Not if experience counts for anything.

Government ownership and operation means control by politics and politicians—nothing else. If political job holders are likely to give efficient transportation service and economy, the political history of this country means nothing. We credit the farmer with good sense enough to foresee that government ownership and operation of the railroads means inefficient transportation, expensive transportation, unprogressive transportation; it means padded pay rolls and underpaid service, bureaucratic inertia and political pull. The notion that the farmer or any other shipper will get low rates and highly efficient transportation from government ownership and operation is the bait of ambitious politicians who are looking for more power. It is not supported by our experience with political management. It is not supported by the experience of countries where railroads are run by the state.

WHEN A MINORITY MAY RULE.

The proposal to put the bill of rights at the mercy of any temporary majority of congress has many possibilities which it would pay the American freeman to consider, and one of them is this. What if this process result, as we think it most certainly will result, in a gradual whittling away of private liberty and finally reaches the stage at which congress proposes to intrench its power by narrowing the base of the franchise, say by depriving those who hold certain opinions, religious or political, of the right to vote or hold office, or by property, sectional, race or other discriminations. With congress free to enact any law whatever, regardless of the constitutional guarantees we now have, what will prevent a given majority in congress from providing against the day when it may become a numerical minority by thus shaping the laws so that its control will continue? Thus a powerful and ruthless minority could rule at will, blocking all constitutional paths back to freedom. That would be cured by revolution, but do we want to march into a trap because we can break out of it when caught?

It is easier to lose liberty than win it. We have it and the safeguards which have kept it for us from the days of our forefathers. Foolish indeed shall we be if we surrender the treasure or its protection, proved and proved again through a century and a third of the life of this the greatest of republics.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

ELLISON BAY, Wis.—The year has passed the autumnal equinox and the Virginia creeper is red against the wall and the stone chimney. The wind is mostly in the south. The fishermen are mending and tarring their nets and driving the stakes for the pond out by the headlands. The black bass have been running in, which is nothing to the professional fisherman but something to the cabin which wants a dinner.

Mallards, hunted in Mink river, have come over into the bay, good sanctuary but no feeding. Partridge are under the arbor vitæ, white pines, and balsam. Here and there in the green is a flash of flame where a maple has turned, and the birch laces the green with white.

The butternuts are rusty, the bracken is brown and broken, dwarf sumac has reddened the rocky open space, the spreading juniper has ripe berries and hardy asters keep their bloom along the way. An orchard country is red with apples. If you want a railroad it is forty miles away.

The city is a chimera. It is the concentration of activity, the fever of accomplishment, the milling about of millions, the voice and the form of man's great effort and there must be some place that does not raise apples and set pond nets. The wind has shifted to the north. The evergreens are bowing to it. The waves are beating against the rocks. A pot on a crane is boiling over the fire. There are hot embers under the grill. You open "Studies in Murder" at "Mate Bram." The city is a chimera. There isn't any such place.

CHICAGO TEMPLE.

Chicago Temple will be dedicated this afternoon at Clark and Washington. It is the fifth to stand there. The place across the corner from the city hall has long been dedicated to the profounder interests in mankind that justify his passion for activity, for building, and for life.

Chicago Temple is of steel and concrete and stone. It is built for time to break itself upon and leave no scars. It leans against the sky more than 500 feet from the ground. Men and women stop to look at it. Its cross is higher than St. Paul's in London or St. Peter's in Rome. It is the fifth temple on the spot. It will stand there many years, perhaps centuries.

But the temple of stone and steel, firm as it is, is after all only ephemeral. It is the shifting costume of a great idea that outwears steel or Indiana limestone. It is a robe, the fifth of this place, and will wear out long before its wearer. This temple is a robe, the church is a robe, creeds are a robe clothing the profound spirit of all things. That will endure when buildings, churches, creeds and man himself have shifted and changed and passed away.

The Chicago Temple at Clark and Washington has been dedicated before. It has been dedicated by those who gave their tithes to build it. It has been dedicated by the architects, Holabird & Roche, whose vision gave us perhaps the most beautiful spire in America. It has been dedicated by the hard work and the risk of the riveters who tied its frame together. It has been dedicated by the good will of all Chicago. The ceremony this afternoon is only a formal statement of those things.

FIRST THERE WITH THE MOST.

Our battery of foreign correspondents found their target yesterday. They usually do. The war strategy of the confederate general, "to get there fustest with the mostest," applies to journalism, too.

Henry Wales, friend of Dictator Rivera, dismounts from airplanes and horses to tell the turning of the war in Africa that may save Spain disaster. In Paris and elsewhere other journalists wait to tell the story second hand. From Trebizond, old town on the Black sea where Xenophon came out with his ten thousand, comes Raymond Fendrick in a new anabasis with stories from the Georgian front of yesterday's blood and destruction. From Geneva Vincent Sheean sends news of Japan's clash with Britain in the league and the prediction of sinister consequences to Pacific policy. In far Manchuria Roderick Matheson reports the Chinese war. In Germany George Seldes tells the world of America's new Zeppelin, and somewhere else John Clayton is looking for trouble. There are many others.

For spot news no news service in the world equals THE TRIBUNE. It covers the earth; the world is now its local room. The new foreign correspondence has less of the arm chair essay and the leisurely interpretation of the old day. It writes the wild massing of events as they occur, the march of passions and the shock of conflict as the world's pot boils on.

American newspapers now lead the English in the scope of their foreign news and THE TRIBUNE leads all the rest.

Editorial of the Day

THE PADLOCK LAW.

[Law Notes.]

Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes was recently quoted in the press as saying:

"There are one or two tremendous advantages of this [padlock] system over the old fashioned criminal indictment procedure. In the first place, it is a matter of affidavits and not juries. It takes only half an hour to convince a judge of the innocence or guilt of a violator, but it might take a jury and all the delays of a jury trial months for a similar decision."

This was precisely the "tremendous advantage" which the Court of Star Chamber possessed over "the old fashioned criminal indictment procedure." It was the advantage for which lettres de cachet were so strongly maintained at one time. The remarks of Mr. Haynes were published in a paper issued on July 19. On July 4 we celebrated our declaration of independence of the land where the Star Chamber sat, and honored the men who wrote into our constitution the guaranty of public trial by jury. On July 14 we celebrated the anniversary of the day when the Bastile fell and men imprisoned by an officer who was convinced of their guilt in half an hour on ex parte statements were released. It is a strange psychology which makes us so fluent of praise to the ancient defenders of liberty and so lax in defending our own.

DIET FOR EPILEPSY.

It is generally recognized that epileptics should not allow themselves to become constipated. Experience has told them that an anti-constipation diet is good for them. If they live very largely on vegetables, fruits, bran, and sour milk, and in consequence acquire the habit of having two or three bowel movements a day, they have fewer spells. If they notice the approach of that dullness and heaviness which sometimes precedes and warns of spells, they sometimes ward off trouble by using full enemas or taking a full dose of saline purge.

A study of epilepsy in children under 5 years of age caused M. G. Peterman to adopt a diet as a means of treatment. Several years ago Wilder reported on a starvation treatment of epilepsy. Epileptics do well when on a low diet.

But epilepsy is a chronic condition and starvation has its limitations. The diet used by Peterman is very low in carbohydrates, starches, and sugars. Since proteids, such as lean meat and eggs, can be converted into sugar in the system, his epileptic diet is poor in these. For the purpose of building up the worn down tissues the diet must contain some proteid, but the quantity is kept very low. If a diet is fairly free from starches and sugars and low in proteids, it must be composed largely of fat and fiber.

The keystone to the arch proposed by Dr. Peterman is fat. The fat is given as butter, bacon, fat meat, olive oil, cream, and all kinds of fat—both animal and vegetable.

In order to get fiber coarse vegetables and bran may be given. The bran is tied up in a bag and water is run through it until most of the starch is washed out. The vegetables that contain a little too much starch can be cooked in three changes of water, thereby removing a good part of the starch.

Not all the children who have repeated attacks of convulsions are epileptic. In fact, there are some who say there is no relation between convulsions in childhood and epilepsy in later life. More experienced physicians think there is a relationship; that on the average children who have many attacks of convulsions are more prone than others to develop epilepsy in later life, and that some young children are epileptics from the beginning of their tendency to convulsions.

However, even though this diet might benefit children with the tendency to spasms, it might not be of benefit to epileptic grownups. But is there any reason why an epileptic grownup should not try a starch free low protein diet—one composed principally of fat and fiber? I can see none, provided the diet does not cause constipation.

GIVE THE BOY MEAT.

Mrs. E. D. writes: My boy is 4½ years old and weighs 42 pounds. Is perfectly healthy. Up to the present time I have given him no meat except chicken occasionally and bacon. I give him fresh vegetables every day with either potatoes or macaroni, dessert, and milk. Of course, fruit, cereal, and milk in the morning and evening. About three times a week an egg in the morning. One doctor advises me that meat is not necessary; another says that he requires meat. If no meat is given he must have more eggs and milk. I am not a vegetarian, but have been very particular regarding my boy's diet and want to feel sure that he will get the proper food.

REPLY.

Give him meat. Growing children and hod carriers need meat.

Others need it, but children top the list. If either you or your boy is to go without meat, let it be you.

PERMANENT REPAIRS.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—[Friend of the People.]—Could you assist in seeing that a large hole in the street almost directly in front of my home is repaired permanently? It was reported sometime ago, and the city sent men with crushed stone to fill it. This stone has been washed out by the heavy rains and scattered all over the street. Motorists do not know the hole is there and consequently drive over it, making a noise like their machines are falling apart.

T. P. M.

The pavement in front of this residence has been repaired by the vehicle tax repair forces and the street is now in good condition.

SCHOOL VS. THE JOB.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A boy who graduated from grammar school wants to work. What is the legal age for him to start work in Chicago? Is it compulsory for him to attend some classes at school each week? If so, to what age?

W. J. O.

He can commence work at 14 with a school certificate, at 16 without a school certificate. He must attend continuation school until he is 18. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WEEDS CUT.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—[Friend of the People.]—The weeds on Lexington street between 50th and Laramie avenue have grown to such a height that they are both a nuisance and a danger to the neighborhood. I wish the owner of the property or the city would cut down these weeds.

A. H.

The request to have the weeds cut on Lexington street has been complied with.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

BETTER CONSULT AN ATTORNEY.

Rochelle, Ill., Sept. 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Although I do not have much to dispose of, I have been thinking of making a will to leave all to my husband. Can I do this without having a lawyer? How should I do it? Simply state what I wish and then sign it?

J. G. W.

We strongly advise you to employ an attorney in drafting so important a document. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 28, 1864.

NASHVILLE. — Gen. Rousseau reached Pulaski. Gen. Forrest's rebel command was seven miles from Pulaski and advancing. Heavy skirmishing continued between the forces until dark. A general engagement is expected today.

INDIANAPOLIS.—The commission to try Dodd, the Sons of Liberty member accused of being connected with a rebel plot to start an insurrection in the North, began taking evidence. Brig. Gen. Colgrove is presiding. Felix G. Stidger testified he was sent to Indianapolis to get facts concerning the Sons of Liberty and was initiated into the order. He said that Dodd told him it had been decreed that Coffin, a government detective, must be assassinated and that Dodd with others went to Ohio for that purpose, but Coffin was not there. A general uprising of rebel sympathizers in Indiana, Illinois, and Ohio was planned, Stidger testified. The arsenals were to be seized and rebel prisoners of war armed. The design was to carry parts of the three states into the confederacy.

CHICAGO.—The county Board of Supervisors voted to pay to every volunteer, person furnishing a substitute, or drafted man entering the United States service after Sept. 26 a bounty of $300.

CHICAGO.—John A. Hardenbergh of New York and Miss Elizabeth Buckingham, daughter of Alvah Buckingham of Chicago, were married by the Rev. Dr. Hardenbergh. Another wedding was that of F. P. Elliott and Miss Maggie Spelman.

CHICAGO.—Drawings for the draft continued, the names for the townships of Rich, Lyons, New Trier, Proviso, Lemont, and Calumet being taken from the box.

CHICAGO.—F. J. Abbey's store at 61 Clark street was robbed and $300 worth of pistols, revolvers and bowie knives stolen.

CHICAGO. — Salesmen in Clark street stores held a meeting and voted to ask their employers to close their stores at 8 p. m. from Oct. 1 to Jan. 1 and at 7 p. m. from Jan. 1 to March 1.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 28, 1899.

LONDON.—England may force a crisis today in the imbroglio with the Boers by occupying Laing's Nek, the frontier gateway. The Daily News Cape Town correspondent wired that the pass will be occupied with sufficient strength for present needs under the belief the Boers will attack Natal immediately, and thus forestall the landing of Indian troops. Occupation of the pass, it is expected, will be regarded by the Boers as a hostile act.

CHICAGO.—As a result of the largest bank stock transaction in Chicago's history, Samuel M. Nickerson, within a few weeks, will retire from the presidency of the First National bank, with which he has been connected for more than a third of a century. The holdings of Mr. Nickerson and his family amount to 8,900 shares, and of these 7,000 shares will be sold for approximately $2,100,000 to a syndicate of New York and Chicago capitalists. The negotiations have been conducted by James B. Forgan, now first vice president of the bank, who it is understood will become president.

NEW YORK.—Admiral Dewey will not go to Chicago for the Fall Festival. As soon as the New York celebration in his honor is over, he will report to Washington, after which he will go to Montpelier, Vt., his home, for a long rest. Everything is in readiness for the great naval parade in honor of the Hero of Manila tomorrow, which will be the greatest display in the history of the nation.

NEW YORK.—Kid McCoy in a bout at the Lenox Athletic club, clearly proved that Jack McCormick of Philadelphia won by a fluke a few weeks ago in Chicago when he knocked out McCoy. McCoy had all the better of the fight, knocking the big wrestler down several times, and winning the decision in the eighth round when McCormick lay down to escape punishment.

SEPTEMBER 28, 1914.

LONDON.—There is a report in Ostend that Mons is burning. It has been held by the Germans since their early successes and protects the rear of their armies in northwest France. The great battle in France turned yesterday into desperate fighting at close quarters on nearly two-thirds of the whole line. Corps after corps of the Germans were hurled against the flower of the French and British armies in bayonet charges, only to be repulsed with enormous losses.

PARIS.—Four bombs were dropped on the city from a German airplane. It is believed the object was to destroy the wireless station on the Eiffel tower, but it was uninjured. One bomb blew the head from the shoulders of a man walking with his daughter and crippled the child.

CHICAGO.—Arthur M. Tree, only son of the late Judge Lambert Tree, died in Southampton, Eng., according to dispatches. He was formerly the husband of a daughter of the late Marshall Field, now the wife of Admiral Sir David Beatty of the English navy.

TOKIO.—It was officially announced that the Japanese have defeated the Germans in a stubborn battle lasting fourteen hours on the outskirts of Tsing-Tau.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Antoinette Funk, suffrage leader and one of the speakers sent into North Dakota in the interest of the cause, was arrested for breaking the peace in Minot, N. D., when she spoke to 5,000 harvest hands from a soap box. She was fined $5, and the action has caused consternation in suffrage ranks.

ARE WE BETTER SAFE THAN SORRY?

Chicago, Sept. 22.—These intermittent crusades against reckless automobile driving have narrowed themselves down to a question of how much coöperation, if any, the one million automobile owners of our state will give to a real effort to curb reckless driving.

Here's my plan: Enact a law at the forthcoming session of our legislature which will contain the following penalties for reckless driving, irrespective whether such reckless driving results in serious accidents or not, since reckless driving upon city streets or country highways is a serious offense by itself:

[1.] Upon the first conviction of a driver [owner, chauffeur or otherwise] for reckless driving, impound the automobile for ten days.

[2.] Upon the second conviction, impound the automobile for thirty days.

[3.] Upon the third conviction, confiscate the automobile.

Such a law would enable the jury to punish reckless drivers in a way that cannot be held objectionable by any fair minded, law abiding car owner, or made the object of attack by any public spirited association of automobile owners.

The driver of an automobile truck, upon his first conviction for reckless driving, would deprive his employer of the use of that truck for a period of ten days. That would entail a financial loss to the truck owners, and would bring a sharp reprimand or discharge for the chauffeur. It would have a most salutary effect upon that chauffeur, and all the other chauffeurs employed by the owner. If that chauffeur is found guilty a second time, and the truck impounded for thirty days, he will be looking for a new position and if his record is known he will have difficulty finding one. No truck owner will risk having his property confiscated by the state through a third conviction of that chauffeur for reckless driving.

At this writing, guns are responsible for about 250 deaths in Cook county since Jan. 1, while 500 human beings have fallen victims of the automobile.

Will the mayor's safety commission, our automobile clubs, the newspapers and others give consideration to any plan prescribing punishment for automobile owners who will not stop driving recklessly, of their own volition?

Again I ask: ARE WE IN EARNEST ABOUT SAFETY? W. M. LAWSON.

FREE TRADE FOR FARMERS.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Of all the remedies to help the farmer out of his present difficulties, there is only one real cure, cheaper merchandise.

He is receiving pre-war prices for his products with no hope of his ever obtaining much more in the future.

It has always been a mystery why the farmer has as always in the past been such firm believer in a high protective tariff. His main products, grain, meat, etc., of which there is a large surplus, is exported and he receives the world price, obtaining no less nor more than his Canadian, Argentine or Australian competitors.

The present Republican administration very generously granted him 42 cents a bushel protective duty on wheat. It is a farce. The duty on wheat might just as well be $10 a bushel, he would still receive about what he is getting at present.

With the exception of a few minor products such as wool, citrus fruits, sugar cane and sugar beets, which only a small fraction of the farmers raise, he never can obtain any real protection. Therefore, only his desire to help manufacturing interests obtain high prices for their products could prompt him to vote for a high protective tariff.

He would be immeasurably better off with absolute free trade, as he would still receive the present world prices for his products and at the same time purchase his merchandise at from a half to a third of what he is now paying.

To have prosperous cities and impoverished rural districts in the same country at the same time is impossible; as the buying power of the agricultural districts gives out, the manufacturing interests will necessarily have to curtail production as at present, or possibly close their plants entirely.

Relic of "The Age of Innocence," a poor old hen minus, no doubt [according to Mr. Kremer]. Be that as it may, I still may raise my voice for a measure of decency and gratitude.

"Swinish gluttony
Ne'er looks to heaven amidst his gorgeous feast,
But with besotted base ingratitude
Crams, and blasphemes his feeder."

Useless to quote Milton to some, and yet, might one perhaps remind Mr. Kremer and his ilk that when we have abolished, amongst other things, horses, precepts and decency and find ourselves face to face with speed [illegible], another problem will present itself because speed consumed in its own ramifications becomes, to the naked eye, a fixed unit.

A FOLLOW UP ON DEFENSE DAY.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—The recent celebration of Defense day is beyond criticism by anybody. It was simply a notification to all burglars that our Uncle Samuel keeps a loaded revolver in his house. Defense day is therefore a "safety first" measure.

However, there is still another "safety first" measure of more importance than a Defense day—convert the popular "In times of peace prepare for war" into "In times of peace prepare for peace."

Congress could pass an act authorizing the President to invite the nations of the earth to formally designate and dedicate the world's saddest but most hopeful day, Armistice day, Nov. 11, as an international holiday.

It would be a World's Peace day, a day set aside upon which the whole world could talk peace and think peace out loud everywhere, in much the same manner that we here in the United States get together upon the Fourth of July and talk about our national liberty and the men who achieved it. Bastile day in France is another instance.

AGAINST SUBWAY ASSESSMENTS.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—I note the approval of Mayor Dever's proposal to build a subway and elevated railway system by special assessments on land values on the theory that land values will be increased much more than the assessments will amount to.

The first thing we know the authorities will apply this reasoning to other public works like schools, libraries, police and fire departments, street cleaning, etc., all of which help to increase land values, and thus compel land owners to give up a large share of what we are entitled to.

All of the people will be more benefited by the proposed increase in transportation and therefore should help to pay for the construction in the regular way by increased taxes on buildings, furniture, stocks of goods, etc., [illegible] the world's greatest newspaper.

Expected to Cut Vote for La Follette.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

September has brought a notable pickup in business and industry in the midcontinent region. Increased prices for farm products are sending more smoke up the factory and mill chimneys. Industry is feeling the push of farm prosperity, and urban unemployment is diminishing. The farmer is now dragging down much of his new prosperity in actual cash.

A 5,000 mile tour by automobile and rail, recently completed, showed that the "new money" is beginning to arrive in substantial quantity as far north as North Dakota, the last to harvest and the last to market. Bank debts are being paid off, back taxes are being paid up, folks on the farm are breathing easier than since 1920.

Buying Speeds Up Factories.

Buying is picking up somewhat in the smaller cities and towns. Merchants are starting to order, though conservatively. Back in the industrial centers the factories are beginning to increase their forces.

Some of the small cities in the upper Mississippi valley, with small but diversified industries, are riding pretty. Many of them were little touched by the sag last winter and spring, and now they are shifting into high. The traveler finds many such communities in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas.

It is exercising a growing influence on the political situation. Even before the campaign started, politicians in all parties recognized that the financial status of the farmer would prove the determining factor in November in the agricultural states. In these states economics and politics fit like the paper on the wall.

Prosperity Cures Unrest.

Prosperity has been ranked as the great remedy for discontent in the unrest belt of the middle west. The surmise has been that its political effect will be to reduce LaFollette's vote in regions where he is making his strongest stand. The Republican ticket would naturally be the largest beneficiary. A nice bank check is a great assuager of the well known agrarian grouch.

Out west they say, every time a farmer changes the corner of his mouth, pointing them up instead of down, La Follette is in danger of losing a potential vote.

Another thing. The "don't rock the boat" idea is picking up speed. It is gaining momentum both in the rural regions and in the smaller cities of the agricultural states. The observant traveler hears it sometimes, even from Democrats, who express the view that as John W. Davis seems to be in the corner pocket, they expect to vote for Coolidge and Dawes as a safety shot.

Jobs More Plentiful.

In the last fortnight, unemployment has taken a significant change. A reduction of 5 per cent in the volume of unemployment occurred in Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Indiana in the two weeks between Sept. 1 and 15. This is the estimate of Barney Cohen, district director of the United States department of labor industrial survey, who has just returned from an extensive observation tour. He is recognized as a top-notch analyst of labor conditions.

In Illinois, employment increased in a majority of the leading industries, according to Mr. Cohen. More individual plants added to their payrolls than reduced them. A surplus of labor still exists in most parts of the country, but it is being absorbed. Much of the unemployment is of the seasonal variety, or is of the "floater" type. Mining is picking up a little, and demand is already coming in from logging operations.

The general analysis of the states closest to the "Chicago territory" show:

In Indiana—Practically all industrial plants throughout Indiana are operating below normal, but employment is slightly increased. Mining operations are improving, although there is still a large number of miners unemployed.

In Michigan—Factories appear to be gaining steadily in employment. Automobile factories are increasing their operations; building industry continues active. A large amount of street and road building is under way. Paper mills are operating overtime, employing many workers.

In Wisconsin—Employment has increased somewhat. Although there is still a surplus of labor, most of it is transient. The building industry shows signs of slackening, but the volume is still ahead of last year. Rubber tire manufacturers report increased production.

In Ohio—A slight improvement in unemployment. The steel industry is recovering from its recent depression and building in Ohio is on the increase. Increase of production in rubber factories resulted in a large addition to working forces.

FALL, IN GOTHAM, REFUSES TO TALK OF TEAPOT DOME

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special].—Efforts today to interview ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall at the Waldorf-Astoria met with the response from a representative that he was busy with conferences and would not make any statement for publication.

It was said that the former cabinet officer, a central figure in the Teapot Dome oil investigation, was in conference with Col. J. W. Zevely, attorney for the Sinclair oil corporation.

"Will Mr. Fall make any statement about the attack on him in the Democratic state platform?" his representative was asked.

"He will not say anything on any subject of that character," was the reply.

NOTED BRITISH CHARITY WORKER DIES SUDDENLY

McCormick - Goodhart's Widow Chicago Woman.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Frederick E. McCormick-Goodhart, a prominent retired Englishman, died suddenly last night at his home, Langley Park, at Chillum, Md., near Washington. He is survived by his wife, who is a daughter of the late Leander J. McCormick of Chicago, and two sons, Leander McCormick-Goodhart, a member of the staff of the British embassy, and Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart of Chicago, all of whom were with him at the end.

Mr. and Mrs. McCormick-Goodhart had moved only last Saturday into the newly built house on the estate which replaced the home destroyed by fire Nov. 26, 1922.

To Be Buried Tomorrow.

Funeral services will be conducted at Rock Creek church Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and interment will be in Rock Creek cemetery.

Mr. McCormick-Goodhart was born in 1854, the son of Charles Emanuel Goodhart of Langley Park, Beckenham, Kent, England. For several years he practiced law in England and then entered politics, contesting the constituencies of Davenport in 1900 and Thanet in 1906. In later years he became treasurer of one of the largest charitable institutions in the British isles, the Church Army, and remained treasurer until 1920. He also was a director for many years of the Public House trust, a noted temperance organization.

Friend of Royal Family.

At the special request of members of the royal family, he undertook in 1910 the organization of the Imperial Service college, an institution for the education of the sons of officers of the army and navy and civil service. He was actively engaged in this work for the following ten years.

In 1920 he and Mrs. McCormick-Goodhart decided to spend the remainder of their lives in the United States. On arriving here they purchased an estate near Chillum, Md., gave it the name of the family estate in England, Langley Park, and resided there until it was destroyed by fire.

When You Step Into a "Hursen" Funeral Auto

Instantly you realize that here is just one more reason why "Hursen" funerals have acquired their fame for quality and elegance not only in Chicago but all over America.

It is another proof that in every feature of funeral direction Hursen always leads. "Hursen" funeral automobiles surpass anything heretofore known or used in the nature of conveyances at funerals.

Each "Hursen" limousine was designed by Hursen himself. Each represents a fortune to produce. Each is the "last word" in interior and exterior beauty, in roominess, in seat-comfort, and in riding-comfort. Each is so built that passengers may avoid being seen from the outside, without interference with their view from the inside.

The charge for the use of "Hursen" funeral-automobiles is never any greater than the usual auto hire made elsewhere for conveyances far less desirable and less comfortable.

The elegance of "Hursen" funerals to the last detail is unsurpassed. Yet the charge for "Hursen" funerals is from one-third to one-half the charges usually exacted elsewhere. It is this policy that has made "Hursen's" the largest undertaking establishment in America.

Call Hursen, of course!

FIREMAN BLINDED, YET "CARRIES ON" AS NEWSDEALER

Sight Lost in Line of Duty —Asks No Help.

The story of Hans Malmberg, blind newsdealer at Foster avenue and Clark street, is the record of courage that will not admit defeat, even in the face of crushing misfortune.

Malmberg was formerly a city fireman. Thirteen years ago at a fire in an old commission house on South Water street Malmberg was caught between a heavy refrigerator and the wall.

Shock Leaves Him Blind.

A live wire dropped across a tank of ammonia standing nearby, and in the explosion that followed the fireman's body was temporarily paralyzed. He was rescued, and recovered from his injuries, but was left blind.

Unembittered by the accident, and asking no quarter because of his misfortune, Malmberg cheerily "carried on." Every one in the vicinity of Foster avenue and Clark street is his friend. He recognizes scores of them by their voices, and has built up a steadily increasing little business by his policy of fair treatment, good service, and an extra bit of courtesy to every one.

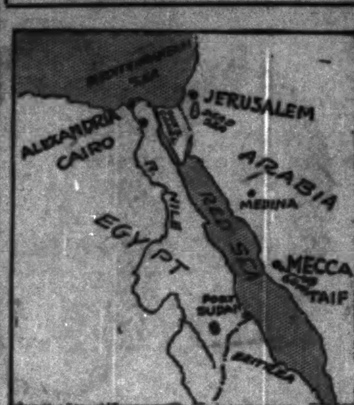
"Courtesy costs nothing," he says, "and it pays good dividends."

He Is Carrying On.

Malmberg's stand is almost a social center. His friends among the police and firemen call on him every day for a chat. He is not the sort who sits back, folds his hands and waits for a living to be handed him. When a question was put to him, he admitted that the earnings from his stand were hardly enough to support himself and his wife at their home, 2020 Farragut avenue, but the questioner waited in vain for any kind of any appeal for aid.

"Help Malmberg? No, we don't intend to," said J. M. Kirkley, president of the Firemen's association, yesterday. "So far as we know, he manages to make a living for himself."

MECCA FALLS?



Cairo, Sept. 27.—[By The Associated Press.]—Rumors that the holy city of Mecca had fallen into the hands of the Wahabis, in the latter's warfare with the Hashamite tribesmen of King Hussein, were prevalent today in Alexandria. The rumors seem to be confirmed by telegrams received from a hospital in Mecca, asking for instructions. The ministry of pious foundations replied:

"Post the Egyptian flag and remain where you are to succor the wounded."

Dispatches from Jerusalem on Sept. 20 stated that the Wahabi forces were then occupying Taif and were concluding preparations for a general attack on Mecca. It was said that the Indian Moslem league was supporting the Wahabis.

SON OF J. J. HILL SUED BY KIN FOR $830,000 ESTATE

Charge He Took Mother's Property by Fraud.

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Louis W. Hill, son of the late James J. Hill, builder of railroads in the northwest, who succeeded his father in control of many properties and is president of the Great Northern railway, has been sued by two brothers, a sister, and brother-in-law for their father's country home in Ramsay county, Minn., on the ground that he got it from their mother, the late Mrs. Mary P. Hill, by fraud while she was ill and unable to realize what she was doing.

The property involved in the suit is valued at more than $231,800. The complaint alleges further that Louis W. Hill also induced their mother to transfer to him without consideration railway bonds of a face value of $750,000, estimated to have an exchange value of $600,000 at the present time.

The case became public today when papers were filed in the United States District court. The plaintiffs are James N. Hill, Walter J. Hill, Ruth Hill Beard, and George T. Slade, husband of the late Charlotte Hill Slade.

When James J. Hill died without a will the plaintiffs assert, the children joined in deeding the property to their mother. Subsequently, it is charged, Louis W. Hill, who became sole administrator of their father's estate, "by fraud and undue influence" induced the mother to deed the property to him without consideration. At the same time, it is alleged, he in some manner obtained the railroad bonds.

Vatican Warns Clergy to Keep Hands Off Politics

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, Sept. 27.—Cardinal Gasparri today issued a private circular to the clergy exhorting them not to take part in political activity.

TEST OF EINSTEIN THEORY TO TAKE TWO WEEKS HERE

Prof. Michelson to Start Next Month.

Two weeks will be needed by Profs. Albert A. Michelson and Henry G. Gale of the University of Chicago to test the Einstein theory of relativity by means of their elaborate apparatus which is nearing completion at Clearing, Ill.

On Oct. 17 they will begin observations. The apparatus consists of a rectangle of water pipe 1,800 feet long by 1,200 feet wide; an arc light which will flash two beams of light around the pipe in opposite directions; sets of mirrors to relay the light beams around the pipe, and an air pump to create a vacuum in the pipe. The only remaining work on the apparatus is the installation of the mirrors, which probably will be in place by Oct. 17, according to a statement issued yesterday by Frederick Pearson, chief engineer and assistant to Prof. Michelson.

If no difference in the time of the rival beams is perceived, it will be apparent that light is not affected by the earth's rotation; or, in other words, that the "ether" rotates with the earth.

What Test Will Show.

According to the Einstein theory of relativity, one beam should travel around the circuit in slightly less time than the other.

Shortly after completing his experimen at Clearing, Prof. Michelson will leave for the Pan-American scientific congress at Lima Peru, where the great scientists of the world will convene. The meeting will last ten days, beginning on Dec. 20.

During the summer Prof. Michelson conducted an experiment at Mount Wilson observatory in California to determine exactly the number of miles light travels in one second of time. Though only preliminary results were obtained, he explains that the average thus far determined was 186,300 miles per second. An octagonal revolving mirror was used to obtain his results.

Hopes for Closer Figuring.

The results were recorded with an uncertainty of twenty or thirty miles. "And if this uncertainty," explains the professor, "can be reduced to one mile, the results could be utilized to obtain distances between stations from fifty to one hundred miles apart."

IN THE LIVING ROOM.

Once more the robins and grackles are gathering for their autumn flight. Despite a brave showing of color, bare patches appear in the garden, which warn of approaching frosts. School has begun and the days are shorter.

Now is the time that the long evenings test the value of home surroundings. They can drive the owners thereof to the cabarets and the dance halls for gayer surroundings.

Or they can make the living room a delight and a lure to saner pleasures. For comfortable chairs, good books, harmonious decorations, and a dancing wood fire hold a family together, and form a mighty factor for the welfare of the nation.

DRY LAW STARTS FIREWORKS AND THRILLS IN COURT

Judge David's Writs Are Ignored, He Says.

The prohibition laws and the limitations of a mayor's authority are two subjects of legal discussion that are daily brightening the somber hall in which Judge Joseph B. David conducts his branch of the Superior court. The morning session of yesterday was not without forensic fireworks and many thrills.

In the first place there was the case of Justin Zoles, who has been in and out of jail so many times during the last fortnight that he doesn't know where his mail should be sent.

The first time Zoles was brought to the bar of justice he was charged with having a still in his home. Judge Daniel P. Trude sent him to jail.

Habeas corpus proceedings before Judge David secured his release. Judge Trude heard of the release and ordered Zoles locked up again. Once more Judge David ordered the release. That's the action until yesterday.

Continues Contempt Charges.

"If there is any further attempt to put this man in jail it will result in those officials who take such action being sent to jail themselves," Judge David announced. A few minutes later he continued the contempt charges which had been brought against George Woods, chief deputy bailiff of the Municipal court; Richey V. Graham, superintendent of the house of correction, and Jacob Borst, the policeman who arrested Zoles the second time. Zoles was released on a bond of $250 pending the contempt charges.

"A man has as much right to have a still in his house as he has to have a paper knife on his desk," the jurist said.

Then came the matter of mayoral authority.

Two After Permits.

Two mandamus cases were called before the judge. Two saloon keepers desired to obtain permits to operate, permits that had been revoked by Mayor Dever, after police had said the defendants operated questionable places. Assistant Corporation Counsel Bernard E. Conlon asked for a jury trial. He wanted to remove the decision of the cases beyond the power of Judge David.

"I am not sure you are entitled to a jury trial," the jurist said. "I'll look into the matter. Meanwhile I'll permit you to start selecting a jury, but I probably will strike out all the evidence and instruct the jury as I see fit."

The two suits were brought by Joseph Maffries, who owns a cigar store at 1202 South Wabash avenue, and Thomas P. White, who conducts a bath house at 679 North Clark street.

A Floral Welcome for Gen. Booth

Beulah Webb, 8, of the day nursery, presents a floral tribute to Gen. Ballington Booth.

Here for Council

Gen. Ballington Booth, national leader and founder of the Volunteers of America, arrived in Chicago last night to attend the annual council of the Great Lakes regiment of the relief organization. The Great Lakes regiment is commanded by Lieut. Col. H. Smith of Chicago. Gen. Booth will be in Chicago only a few days, attending the council and visiting as many of the institutions maintained by the organizaton as possible.

Kiwanis Decide to Meet Next in St. Paul

The next international convention of Kiwanis clubs will be held in June, 1925, in St. Paul, Minn., it was decided yesterday at a meeting of the executive board of Kiwanis International in the Hotel Sherman. The decision followed an offer of $10,000 by the St. Paul club to guarantee expenses of the meeting.

CHICAGO FIRE TO START AGAIN, BUT THAT IS ALL

Included in the plans for Chicago Day, Oct. 9, is a duplication of the incident held responsible for the Chicago fire of 1871, it was announced yesterday by George Hull Porter, chairman of the committee.

The celebration will be staged in the new Grant Park stadium. A shack similar to the one in which Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the historic lantern, is to be built and placed on the stadium ground.

Fire fighting apparatus, such as was used in 1871, will attempt, after the mock fire is begun, to extinguish the flames. After their efforts are seen to be in vain, a modern fire engine will be driven up and immediately put out the fire.

ROBBERS RAID THEATER; GET NOTHING.

Three men forced their way into the Victoria theater, 3142 Sheffield avenue, early yesterday, bound the watchman, W. T. Marks, 4307 West Harrison street, and searched the boxoffice in vain for loot.

ROLLS-ROYCE

THE UNMISTAKABLE MARK OF GOOD TASTE—and Common Sense

SAID A BRILLIANT ENGLISHMAN,

“MY TASTES are simple. I want only the best.” . . . In every country, in every state and city, there are men and women whose cultivated tastes admit of no pretense or insincerity. Whose trained minds judge values fairly. Who demand, simply and decisively, the best. They are few. But it is for them that the Rolls-Royce car is built—and only for them.

THE Rolls-Royce makes little or no appeal to vanity or sentiment, to crude or untrained tastes, to bargain hunters or wasters.

But it is, now as always, the one car in the world for those who are able to discern and appreciate true quality. And who realize the worth of the simple, inflexible rule that governs the Rolls-Royce works from the president to the newest apprentice. A rule that has been directly responsible for its world-wide success—build the best car in the world.

You will find Rolls-Royces in Montana on mountain roads meant for pack-horses. You will find them swinging across the Southwest under a sun that sets the landscape dancing. You will find them ploughing through the snowdrifts in the high Sierras or flying to Florida for the opening of the season. And no matter where you find them, or how severe the conditions, they are certain to be functioning as perfectly as though they had just dropped down from the Plaza to the Metropolitan Opera. Occupants and drivers will be safe, untroubled, comfortable. And the owner will tell you, as Rolls-Royce owners can and do, some facts about mileage, repairs and length of service that will impress even the most hardened motorist.

For the best is always the cheapest in the end. And no Rolls-Royce has ever yet worn out! It swings through the years as easily as it swings along the Boston Post Road. Protecting your investment. Safeguarding your family. Vindicating your judgment.

Call at the Rolls-Royce showrooms and arrange for a hundred-mile trip that will be a revelation of ease and comfort, of ability and performance. Or, if you prefer to make an appointment by telephone, a Rolls-Royce will be sent to your address for inspection and trial. You are also invited to visit the Rolls-Royce works at Springfield, Mass., whenever it is convenient for you to do so.

Attractive designs in coach work for immediate delivery. Come to our showrooms and let us tell you of the attractive purchasing arrangements that can be made.

JAPAN REFUSES TO SIGN LEAGUE'S PEACE PROJECT

Is Angered by Row Over Immigration.

BY VINCENT SHEEAN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—Great Britain and France today tried every means to break the deadlock which Japan produced in the league disarmament commission by attempting to amend the peace plan to include the possibility of a conflict on America's Japanese exclusion act. Up to midnight their efforts had failed, and the Japanese delegation made it clear they would not sign the peace project.

Lord Parmoor, the British delegate, called a meeting of all the delegates of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British dominions to discuss the grave situation thus created.

M. Briand of France had a long conference with Viscount Ishii, the Japanese delegate, today in an effort to make him accept a compromise which would preserve Japan's seemingly innocent amendment, but would place it somewhere else in the new peace protocol. Japan is not willing to have it anywhere except at the end of article five, which, practically speaking, would enable the Japanese government to arbitrate or declare war at will on a question which all other nations agree belongs to internal policy alone.

New Zealand May Not Sign.

The fate of the league's world peace plan now appears more and more doubtful. Sir James Allen of New Zealand, in a speech today, hinted broadly that New Zealand would not sign it, and that it would demand to know what will be its status under the protocol if it does not sign. As it now appears, the nations which are most likely to overthrow the plan are Japan, Italy and New Zealand and some British dominions.

While the league leaders were deadlocked on this question, the council adopted a complete system of control of Germany's armament, which will be prepared immediately, so as to go into effect as soon as the interallied control commission ceases to operate. Adoption of the measure will permit Germany to enter the league.

Agreement on the German question was difficult as the council's committee studying the problem had two different texts offered it—one British and one French. The text definitely adopted today follows the line of the French document so closely that it must be regarded a great diplomatic victory for M. Briand and M. Loucheur.

Military Control Plan.

The text of the agrement, in substance, follows:

1. The field of investigation is extended so as to include all legislative acts likely to encourage war, as well as military and naval preparations and actions taken in the demilitarized zones (Cologne, for example, which the British propose to leave within the next six months or year). This also includes training or preparation for war (notably, secret organizations or students' societies).

2. The investigation must be impartial—no former enemy nation shall be represented, but former neutrals may take part.

Will Watch Four Nations.

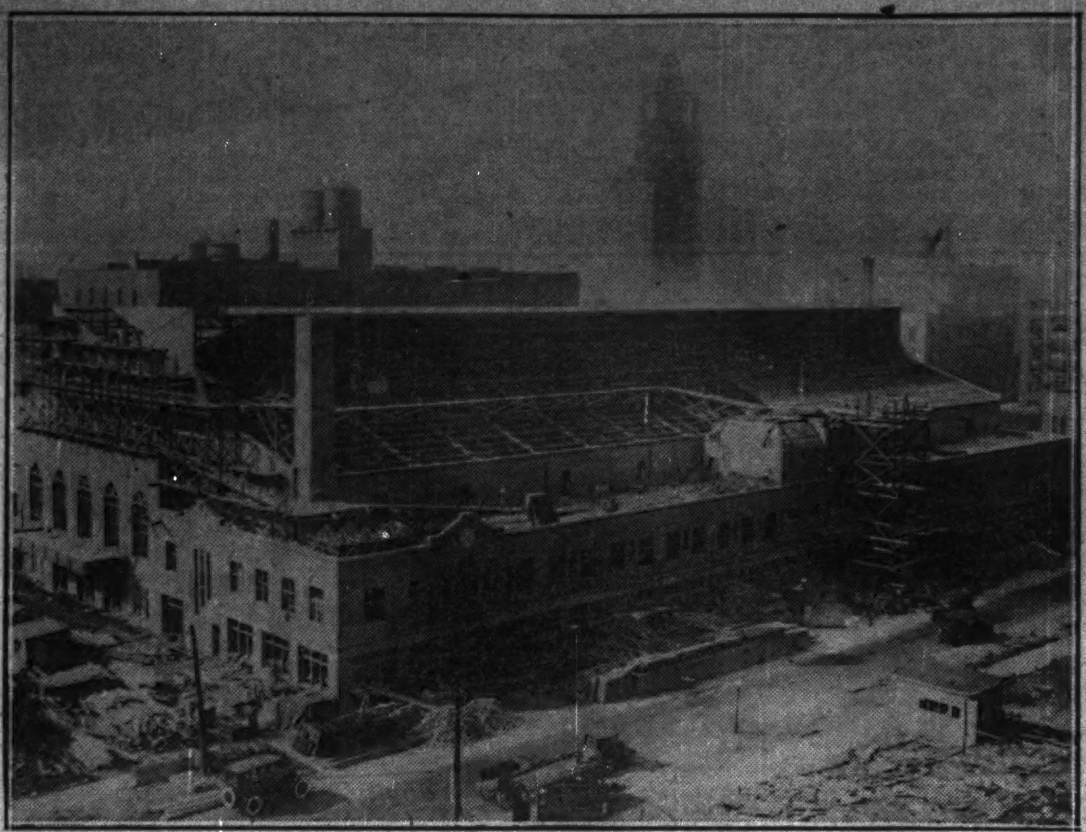
3. The league council may order an investigation at any time and investigators shall be prepared to go any length to obtain full information, repeating or enlarging on an investigation, even though appearances are satisfactory.

The permanent consultive commission will keep the council informed of all armaments within Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, and at any time any nation a member of the league may demand that an investigation committee be sent to those countries to find out what is happening in certain factories or certain towns.

SEEKS MISSING FAMILY.

The police were asked yesterday to search for Mrs. Frances Redmond, 3737 South Union avenue, and her three small children who disappeared from their home Sept. 6. Her husband, Nicholas, told the police he knew of no reason for her leaving him.

RIDING CLUB READY SOON



Within a few weeks the Riding Club of Chicago, at Ontario and McClurg streets, will be completed. Soon afterwards the largest ring in the world will be ready for use. The building will have stalls for 452 horses. The ring measures 300 by 100 feet. Arrangements have been provided for 3,000 seats and the capacity may be increased to 5,000 spectators for special events. There will be a large grill room for members and their guests. The activities of the club will include riding to music, polo, horse shows, mounted masquerades, balls, steeplechases, and riding classes for men, women, and children.

PREPARE TO HOLD POLICE PENSION BOARD ELECTION

Plans for the election of two new members of the police pension board will be laid at a meeting of the board tomorrow, it was announced yesterday by George Sikes, secretary. It was suggested by Peter Lynch and P. J. Devoy, representatives of policemen and pensioners, whose terms expire, that the election should be held in the city hall instead of police stations. Other members defeated the suggestion. A similar suggestion by Corporation Counsel Busch will be considered.

Sharp Note in Peace Plea Sent to Poland.

"This is direct interference in Russian inner-political life. The Russian army is strong enough to prevent interference of any kind."

YANK TELLS OF REVOLT

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TREBIZOND, Sept. 27.—John Hollowell, an American mining engineer, arrived from the Caucasus today with a vivid eyewitness account of the Georgian struggle for independence against the soviets.

"The revolution came within an eyelash of being victorious," declared Mr. Hollowell, who has lived in the Caucasus for many years. "For the first ten days the revolutionists held the Batum-Tiflis railway and pipe line, and every city and village in Georgia except Batum and Tiflis and all the Caucasus was on the point of rising against the soviets when the Russians commenced to flood Georgia with troops. If all the Caucasus had blazed up, the situation would have been absolutely beyond control.

"If the Red army and cheka had become seriously involved in a widespread uprising in the Caucasus, every part of Russia would have risen against the soviets."

Tiflis Carefully Protected.

Mr. Hallowell explained that the soviets had taken extraordinary precautions months ago to protect Tiflis, which is the military and administrative center of the All-Caucasus republic, and Batum, which is the principal Caucasian port assuring sea communications with Russia, because they knew that the uprising was inevitable.

"Since the bolshevik invasion of 1921 thousands of patriotic Georgians have been massacred by the cheka," he continued. "Tens of thousands of others have been deported to Siberia, and all the churches have been transferred into soviet clubs and dance halls. Bishop Ambrosie was sentenced to eight years imprisonment at hard labor for refusing to join the living church, the state workers in the manganese fields have been getting less than a living wage, all newspapers and magazines except bolshevik have been suppressed, taxes have been increased enormously and the country is on the verge of starvation."

Mr. Hollowell asserted that the soviet tactics were to terrorize, demoralize, and isolate not only the revolutionists but the entire population.

While You Freeze
They Plant Crops In Sutter Basin

WHILE you shiver in the grip of a cold, raw northern winter, the Sutter Basin farmer is busily preparing his land and planting his crops. Nature works for him all year 'round. There is no "closed season" for farming in Sutter Basin.

According to the records of the U. S. Weather Bureau at Sacramento (22 miles from Sutter Basin) the average temperature in December is 46.3 degrees, 45.6 degrees in January, and 50.2 degrees in February—good farming weather.

Some of the Principal Crops and Yields

All crops grown commercially in the Great Valley of California thrive in Sutter Basin. Here are a few of the most productive crops and average yields per acre: Alfalfa, 7 tons; asparagus, 4200 lbs.; beans, 2000 lbs.; cabbage, 4 tons; carrots, 12 tons; cauliflower, 300 crates; lettuce, 320 crates; onions, 135 sacks; parsley, 8 tons; peaches, 12 tons; pears, 10 tons; prunes, 3 tons; potatoes, 150 sacks; pumpkins, 20 tons; rice, 3500 lbs.; spinach, 5 tons; squash, 12 tons; string beans, 2 tons; sugar beets, 10 tons; tomatoes, 12 tons. In addition, grains and sorghums yield abundantly.

Very frequently, the Sutter Basin farmer's crop is contracted for before it is planted, assuring the farmer a definite price for his products, and a sure profit.

Irrigation and Drainage for Every Farm

The Sutter Basin Company's property, which comprises 45,000 acres of exceptionally rich soil, has one of the most complete irrigation and drainage systems in the West. Every farm in Sutter Basin can be properly irrigated and thoroughly drained so that highly profitable crops may be produced for the spans of many life-times. The Sutter Basin system of moisture control keeps these lands mellow and sweet, adapting them to the production of the great diversity of crops already enumerated.

Excellent Markets and Transportation

California is one of the few states in the Union that still has to import food products from other states. In other words, California's population has increased more rapidly than her agricultural development, with the result that a ready home market exists for practically all farm products. And San Francisco, reached by rail and water directly from Sutter Basin, provides an outlet to all the world markets.

The Southern Pacific Railway traverses the entire length of Sutter Basin, with convenient sidings and public warehouses to meet the needs of the farmer. The Sacramento River, navigated by river steamers, forms the western boundary of Sutter Basin, providing cheap, convenient water transportation, while an excellent concrete highway, connecting the Basin with Sacramento, assures swift, economical motor truck transportation.

All the Pioneer Work has Been Done

All the development work has already been done in Sutter Basin. The entire tract, which is now being offered for sale, is at present under cultivation by the Sutter Basin Company, whose farming experts, right on the ground, are always available to help and advise the inexperienced farmer. The land is ready to crop at minimum expense, with the least possible expenditure of time and labor.

GERMAN WAR BONDS BREAK IN N. Y.; UP ABROAD

Prices Fall Off $75 in Wall Street.

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Open market prices of the German War Loan bonds broke still further in New York dealings today and abroad they advanced.

Dealings here were light, brokers reporting that buying orders were limited and that only comparatively few sales were made. The rise abroad was attributed in private cables to summary efforts taken by the Berlin bourse and the Frankfort-on-the-Main exchange to stave off disaster. In the panic which resulted from the collapse of the bond values a number of German brokerage and banking firms were badly pinched.

$75 Off on Closing.

The closing price reported today in the New York market was $1,125 per 1,000,000 mark unit against $1,200 for the same unit on Friday. In Berlin and Frankfort-on-the-Main today's closing price was reported at $1,250 per 1,000,000 mark unit, against yesterday's low price of $900.

Wall street bankers who heretofore have refused to become interested in the price course of German War Loan bonds professed keen interest today. They said they had been flooded with inquiries from hundreds of their clients and it was believed that a more widespread interest has been evoked by the heavy speculation in German bonds than now attaches to other groups of foreign bonds.

Further light on this speculation was furnished by brokers. About fifteen months ago, it was definitely learned, the German government, believing its war loan bonds to have no value, shipped them over to New York in crate loads, to sell "at whatever price they would bring."

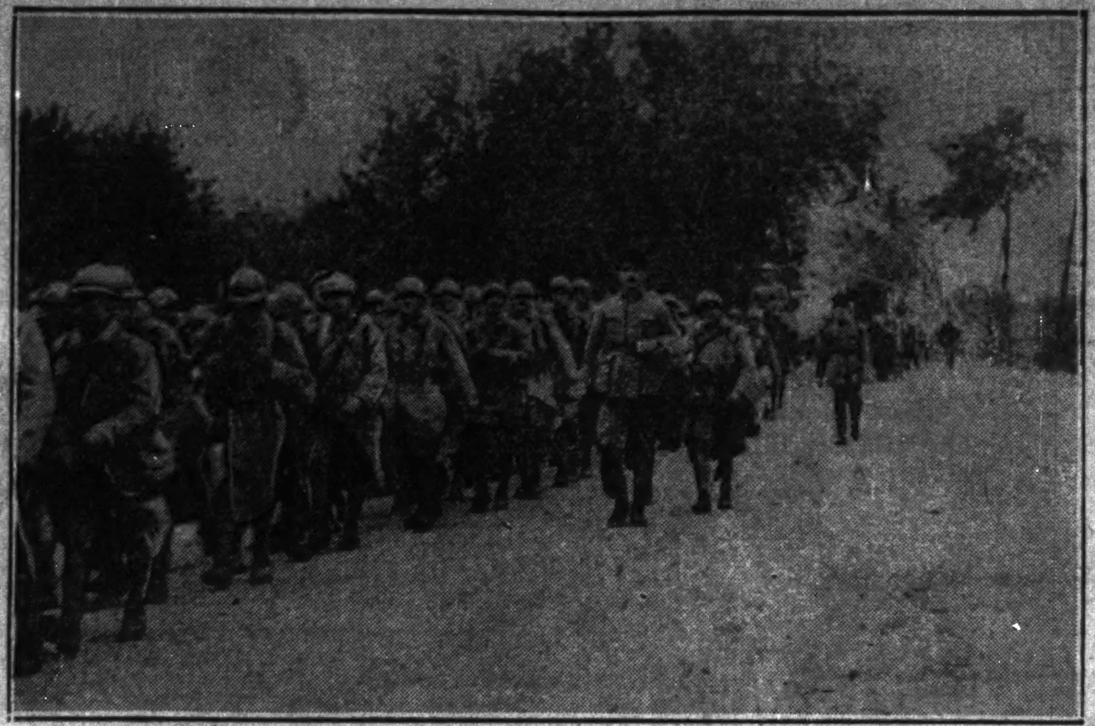
Small Investors Win.

An amazing feature of this sale, so specialists in German bonds reported, was the fact that the profits were reaped by Americans of small means. "Men of intelligence," so one broker explained, "threw up their hands at the thought of buying. But stokers on ships, peddlers in the streets, and persons who could scrape together only a few dollars stepped in and by good luck reaped a harvest."

PREVENTS WRECK OF SHOW WINDOW.

Patrolman George Geiser foiled an attempt to wreck the show window of the G. K. Schmidt paint shop, 3737 North Clark street, early yesterday, when he fired several shots at two men in a taxicab as they threw an iron bar at the window. Schmidt had been threatened because of labor troubles.

FRENCH TROOPS QUIT THE RUHR



This is believed to be the first picture to reach this country of the actual evacuation of the Ruhr by the French soldiery. The troops are shown marching after leaving Dortmund. [Pacific and Atlantic Photos.]

START WORK ON EXPOSITION OF ILL. PRODUCTS

Preparations for moving the state of Illinois exhibit into the American Exposition palace, 666 Lake Shore drive, were begun yesterday. The Illinois Agricultural association took the honors for speed, being first on the ground with its exhibit, which will be one of the most interesting displays of the Illinois Products exposition, which opens Oct. 9.

"The organized fruit growers, who promise the most elaborate display they have made since the Chicago world's fair, also were at work early.

Each of the thirty-three cities represented in the exposition, which is being conducted by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, will exert itself to attract the attention of eastern industry. The Chicago Association of Commerce will move its information bureau bodily to the exposition.

1,000 Vets of 129th Inf. Radiocast Elgin Reunion

Elgin, Ill., Sept. 27.—More than 1,000 members of the 129th Infantry association, 300 of them from Chicago, arrived here today for their sixth annual reunion. The veterans are guests of Attorney Charles E. Erbstein for two days at his estate near here. Proceedings are being broadcast from Mr. Erbstein's radio station.

PREACHER LOSES CASES AGAINST 2 ROADHOUSES

The Rev. Elmer L. Williams, law enforcement director of the Better Government association, lost a merry little court battle yesterday when Justice of the Peace Henry G. Williams of Evanston discharged Albert Vouche of the Villa Venice and John Vlanck of the White House, two alleged gambling houses that had been raided by the preacher and constables.

More than once during the hearing the Rev. Williams felt anger rise. Once he almost lost his temper. That was when Attorney Ben Cohen, appearing for the defendants, hinted that the pastor had received some large contributions from the Better Government association.

"'Tis better to receive contributions from the Better Government association than from gamblers," said the preacher. Attorney Ben Short asserted that it is a great thing to enforce the law and that raiding gambling houses is a splendid work if "carried out with the spirt of the law." Mr. Short also represented the defendants.

Judge Williams ruled that the complaints were faulty.

ORDER NURSE OUT OF TOWN; HIRSCH LOVE WAR OVER

With a judicial order compelling the "other woman" to leave town, the marital affairs of Dr. Abraham A. Hirsch, 602 South Western avenue, and Mrs. Florence Hirsch yesterday returned to normalcy. Judge Reilly dismised a suit for divorce in morals court by ordering Mary Porter, a nurse, whom Mrs. Hirsch had named, to leave. The Hirschs returned together to their home and their 2 year old son.

10,000 FARMERS, 2,000 AUTOS AT PLOWING MATCH

Aurora, Ill., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—More than 10,000 persons saw Edwin Reese of Big Rock win the twenty-seventh annual Big Rock Plowing match, held on the H. H. Long farm near Big Rock, Ill., today. He scored 92 points, winning over Timothy Jones, also of Big Rock, his closest rival, by 5 points.

That the motorcar has practically succeeded the horse was evidenced. There were more than 2,000 automobiles parked on the grounds and only four horse drawn vehicles.

"Yes, sir," one farmer said, "the day has passed when we farmers hitch up the old one horse shay and drive to the plowing match. We can load the whole family in the machine now and get here quicker."

CHANCE TO PEEK INTO OLD TOMBS AFTER OCT. 15

All Chicago can see, through plate glass, the mummies of Pharaohs and their queens, reposing in their ancient tombs, after Oct. 15. The tombs, great granite blocks supported by modern steelwork and with one side of each room replaced by glass, are being erected in the Egyptian section of the Field museum.

For twelve years these two tombs, which once stood near the Nile, have lain neglected in the old Field museum in Jackson park.

The public can view every detail of the interior of the tombs, exactly as they were when mourners, thousands of years ago, laid their dead rulers to rest.

LITE RUM BARON EADY TO GIVE P IN SHOOTING

lan Battles Death; Tarr Slips Pursuit.

While detectives continued their … yesterday for Leon A. Tarr, … New York milliner, lured by … of bountiful profits into the … of bootlegger to the social … of Chicago, Harry J. Callan, his … partner, whom he is alleged … shot in a street brawl at Lin… Park West and Fullerton park… was still battling for his life at …tana hospital.

…while word seeped through to … that Theodore ("Ted") New… gunman-gangster, one of three others sought in the shooting, was contemplating an early surrender to police.

Believe Tarr Will Surrender.

A theory also was entertained that Tarr himself would soon give up. It is believed that in whatever underworld hiding place he selected as a temporary haven from searchers he is studiously awaiting developments from the bedside of Callan. And should the latter's condition improve, as surgeons now hope, it is thought Tarr will surrender himself.

"A fellow like that can make no money while he's dodging police all the time," one policeman observed.

"His idea will be to step up and take his medicine and get it over with, so he can get back to his business. Of course should Callan die it might look different. A murder charge, even to a bootlegger, is sometimes a serious thing."

It was Newberry's wife who conveyed the information that the gunman would probably surrender. He called her on the telephone at their home at 4056 North Parkside avenue at 4 a. m. yesterday, she said.

Ready to Give Bond.

"Ted said he would arrange for a bond during the day in case a charge is placed against him," said Mrs. Newberry.

Should Callan recover, the most serious charge that could be brought against Newberry would be conspiracy to commit murder, it is thought. This would be based on Callan's assertion that in his opinion Tarr and the others deliberately plotted to kill him so they might inherit the bootlegging trade among Chicago's wealthy that Callan says he has built up during five years.

Arresti Cappola, the third participant in the affray, which caused a momentary panic in the exclusive Lincoln Park section and threw the parkway traffic into confusion for nearly half an hour, is also still being sought. Cappola, known to his underworld friends as "the New York Wop," is thought to be making his way east.

Mrs. Tarr Released.

Mrs. Agnes Tarr, wife of Tarr, was released from custody on a habeas corpus writ before Judge John P. McGoorty in Criminal court yesterday.

Mrs. Tarr, a delicately featured blonde, had been found at the Tarr home at 525 Fullerton parkway dressed for the street and surrounded by luggage. She admitted she and her husband were preparing to move but refused to say where.

Miss May Rose, fiancée of Callan, who was taken into custody when found in Callan's rooms at the Congress hotel, was also to be released later in the day, it was announced.

Assistant United States District Attorney Edwin F. Weisl announced the activities of the alleged "society bootleggers' ring," of which Callan and Tarr were members, would be investigated by the government with a view to prosecution.

A new search of Tarr's effects yesterday revealed a lengthy list of supposed purchasers of whisky. A liquor sample case was also found and Tarr's bank book showed greatly increased deposits since Aug. 1.

RICH FATHER STANDS BY TARR.

New York, Sept. 27.—Adolph Tarr, a prosperous hat manufacturer, and his daughter, Rose, refused today to believe that Leon A. Tarr, sought in Chicago for the shooting of Henry J. Callan in a bootleggers' quarrel, was implicated in liquor operations. Leon, in Chicago, told his father he was selling millinery.

Caught in Fish Net, Two Boatmen Drown

Hammond, Ind., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Becoming enmeshed in a net which they were about to throw into Lake Michigan over the side of their boat, two men were drowned off shore at Indiana Harbor last night. One victim was Martin Langor, 31, Indiana Harbor. The other is not yet known. Neither body has been recovered.

BRAZILIAN ARMY BEATEN; REVOLT FLARES UP AGAIN

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 27.—[United Press.]—Brazilian government troops in the state of Parana were defeated and routed in battle with revolutionaries, who have declared their independence, according to dispatches received here today. The news means that the Brazilian revolution, thought to have been suppressed, has flared up again.

Revolutionary officers, with an unknown number of followers, struck at the government in Parana, a state of more than 500,000 population. They proclaimed it an independent state, giving it the name of Brasilendia. According to a revolutionary manifesto, the new state includes the southern part of Matte Grosso, as well as part of Parana.

The manifesto was signed by Gens. Diaz Lopez and Juan Francisco and Cols. Bernardo Padilhar and Miguel Costa, who were prominent in the Sao Paulo revolution.

ROBBED OF PAY ROLL CASH.

Joseph J. Cayk, 36, 2208 North Lockwood avenue, owner of the Columbia Plating company, 3343 West Grand avenue, was knocked unconscious and robbed of a pay roll of $195 yesterday in a passageway near his office.

ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA
in a New Form
at a saving of 46%

THE publication to-day of the Encyclopædia Britannica in a New Form at a sweeping reduction in price marks a new epoch in the history of this great work.

To-day you can obtain one of these wonderful sets, the latest edition, in large type, complete and unabridged, for 46% less than the famous Cambridge issue. Here at last is the ideal Britannica at a price so low that every home can afford it.

This is perhaps the most important announcement that has been made in the 156 years that the Britannica has been published, and it records one of the greatest publishing achievements of all time.

Summed up, it means that it is now possible for us to offer you the complete Britannica printed in large type from the original plates at a reduction of nearly one-half—by far the lowest price at which the newest and latest large type Britannica has ever been sold to the general public.

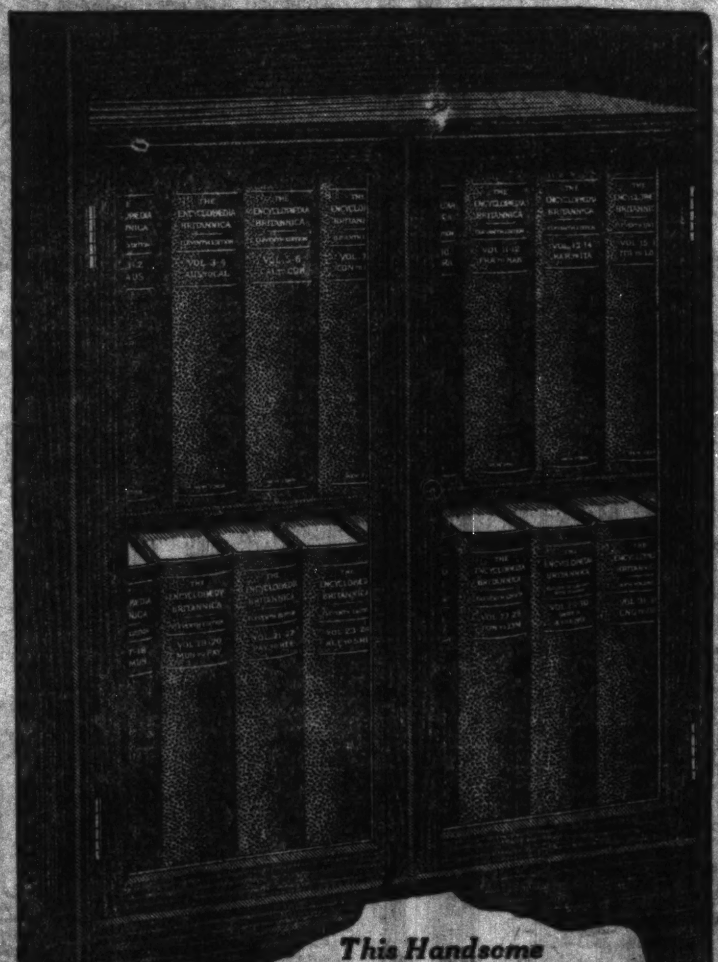
Revolutionary Changes in Publishing

THE steps by which the New Form has been made a successful reality is a fascinating story. Leading printers and publishers said: "If you can do it, it will be a big success." Here was an entirely new idea involving revolutionary changes in the publication of the Britannica.

But we knew we were right. This idea was the logical outcome of years of experience; it crystallized the recommendations of thousands of users and owners of the Britannica. We gave the specifications to our experts and told them to go ahead. Their success has been beyond all expectations.

These were the specifications—and they have been carried out to the letter:

[1] Large type, easy to read.
[2] Complete and latest text. (Nothing omitted, nothing altered.)
[3] Fully illustrated. (All the original plates, maps, etc.)
[4] Sweeping reduction in price.



This Handsome
BOOKCASE FREE!

This handsome bookcase, in dark mahogany finish, especially designed for us by Maple & Co. of London, will be given free with each set of the Encyclopædia Britannica in the New Form while this offer lasts. But you must act promptly—mail the coupon to-day.

Why the Price is so Low

FIRST OF ALL, the experts made a striking innovation—they decided to bind this issue of the Britannica in 16 double volumes instead of 32 single volumes. That one change enabled us to save nearly 50% of the binding cost.

This innovation was made possible by the use of the famous Britannica Opacity Paper, which is very thin but beautifully white and opaque. We placed an order for 1200 tons—sufficient for 10,000,000 books of ordinary size—at a time when prices in the paper market were at their lowest.

Then it was determined to print this issue from the plates of the famous Cambridge issue, which sells for nearly twice as much. By doing this it was possible to save thousands of dollars, because we did not have to reset 33,000 pages of type.

Contents Identical with Issues Selling for Twice as Much

The use of these plates is your guarantee that the text is identical with that of the finest de luxe sets.

The Encyclopædia Britannica in the New Form is the newest and latest issue, containing not only a full and authoritative account of the World War and its momentous consequences, but all the latest developments in industry, art, science, invention, etc. It contains 49,000,000 words, 33,000 pages and 15,600 illustrations—as much material as 476 books of average size printed on ordinary paper.

Only a Limited Edition at this 46% Saving

Only 20,000 sets of the Encyclopædia Britannica in the New Form have been printed and more than 3000 of these were sold before a single volume was off the press!

Announcement of the New Form is being made in London, Paris and other capitals simultaneously with this announcement in America. Of the 17,000 sets hardly more than half will be available for the United States. The sets will go fast. The first subscribers will, of course, be served first. We urge you, therefore, to mail the coupon to-day for full particulars if you want to get one of these sets at the unprecedented saving of 46 per cent.

But you must act promptly! The special Handy Volume issue (which was offered last fall and which will never be reprinted) was sold out long before the date originally fixed for the end of the sale, and thousands of people who meant to order but put it off were disappointed. There is no doubt that this present issue in the New Form will be sold just as quickly.

Easy Terms—Small First Payment

A very small first payment will put the complete set of 16 double volumes in your home immediately and you can pay the balance in easy monthly payments, so small that they will never be missed.

Seize this opportunity before it is too late. The time is now—it is the opportunity for which you have been waiting—tomorrow may be too late. We have only 17,000 sets to fill a world-wide demand. Make sure of your set. Before you turn the page, sign the attached coupon (it commits you in no way) and we will send you full particulars of this wonderful offer.

Write for Free Booklet

It tells all about the Encyclopædia Britannica in the New Form, reproduces a number of specimen pages (many in color), explains the easy terms of payment, and tells the fascinating story of how our experts made possible such an amazing reduction in price. 56 pages of interesting, instructive reading.

Free on request if you mail the coupon promptly.

A Tribute

The Britigan Standard

Mr. W. C. Jenkins writing in the Chicago Evening Post, of June 21, 1924, paid a tribute to the Britigan Standard which reveals some of the benefits that have accrued to those who have purchased real estate sold by this organization. He says:

"When future historians write the story of Chicago's twentieth century development they cannot fail to give considerable prominence to certain real estate operators who put large subdivisions on the market immediately after the Great World War.

"In the galaxy of men who have conducted realty enterprises upon a high plane, reclaiming vast acreages in Chicago's outlying district, and dotting localities that once were raw wastes with beautiful homes, stands out conspicuously the name of William H. Britigan, for the Britigan organization has a record of accomplishment to its credit that seldom crowns the efforts of men in this line of human endeavors. * * * *

"No realty operator ever put a subdivision on the market in Chicago who was more painstaking in his effort to establish conditions that would insure success to the investors in lots than William H. Britigan. He is methodical, conscientious, and his word is as good as his bond. * * * *

"Taking as a basis the market price of real estate in Chicago today, it can be truthfully said that not a single one of the 15,000 lots sold by the William H. Britigan organization during the past ten years has suffered a decline in value; in fact, in every instance there has been an advance. As already shown in the interview with Mr. Britigan, in some cases the advance in value has exceeded a thousand per cent—100 per cent advances have been common. Hence, patrons of the organization have seen their investments bloom and prove blessings while their friends who sought fortunes in oil and mining experienced nothing but disappointment. Their investments were a blight and a bane. * * * *

"Immediately after the closing days of the war men who were selling real estate found their strongest competitors in the stock salesmen—men who extracted untold millions of hard-earned money from the pockets of those who should have applied their savings toward the purchase of homes. Ninety-nine per cent of those who purchased the promotion stocks of three, four and five years ago are sadder and wiser men and women today; but not a single investor in a Britigan subdivision during the past ten years has any real cause for grief as a result of his venture. The moral is plain."

After hearing Mr. Jenkins, do you not begin to sense what is meant by the Britigan Standard? It is undoubtedly the same thing which caused a recent editorial in the Economist, commenting on Mr. Britigan, to assert "He has developed and graduated some of the most remarkable subdivision operators in the city, all of whom are proud to have been with him, and a reference to their association is a strong recommendation. In ten years Mr. Britigan has sold vacant property to the value of Twenty-Five Million Dollars."

URGES TUNNEL OF NATIONS TO SEE WHAT'S IN EARTH

12 Mile Shaft Might Yield New Metals, Briton Says

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—International coöperation for sinking of a shaft twelve miles deep for scientific purposes is advocated by Sir Charles A. Parsons, K. C. B., F. R. S., who adapted steam turbine engines to commercial purposes on a large scale. He made the suggestion at a luncheon given to him and Senator Luigi Luiggi, president of the Society of Italian Engineers, at the Engineers' club.

Sir Charles said an exploration of this character might reveal the existence of new chemical elements and of metals heavier than any known now. The force of gravitation, he said, would draw such minerals downward from the earth's crust.

Would Take Fifty Years.

"We know nothing of what is below our feet, but we know that the heaviest minerals are at the center of the earth," said Sir. Charles. "Instead of sending out polar expeditions, wouldn't it be better to go down and see what we come to? Experiments I have made convince me that it would take fifty years to get down twelve miles.

"It would be a great bond of union for the various nations to combine in such an enterprise. We have evidence from earthquake waves that it is hot twenty miles below the earth's surface. It would take £20,000,000 to finance a big company to do the work."

Discussing his project after the luncheon, Sir Charles said British scientists, as well as officials of the Royal observatory at Greenwich, were greatly interested in the scheme.

Own Experiments His Guide.

"We don't know what is down there and we ought to; that's the point," he said. "I have been doing preliminary experimentation for eight years and I am certain that such a shaft is a practicable engineering project and that the only thing necessary to make it a reality is the money. It might be possible to go deeper than twelve miles.

"I would have the shaft twenty feet in diameter and lined with granite, which experiments have shown would not fall in. The shaft would be sunk to different levels, in the same way that mining shafts are sunk, and it would be necessary, after we got down to a sufficient depth, to have the heat pumped out.

"It is not a commercial project and there is no money to be made out of it by myself or any one else but, from a scientific standpoint, it should be undertaken as something of fully equal importance to polar exploration. The spot where the shaft should be sunk ought to be determined by geologists.

Need American's Millions.

"I suggested that the work be done through international effort because of the tremendous expense. I have done nothing as yet toward securing funds. It would be an admirable thing if some American multi-millionaire—we have few of them left in Great Britain now—would donate money for the work. If a fund were started here there would be contributions from those interested in scientific research all over the world."

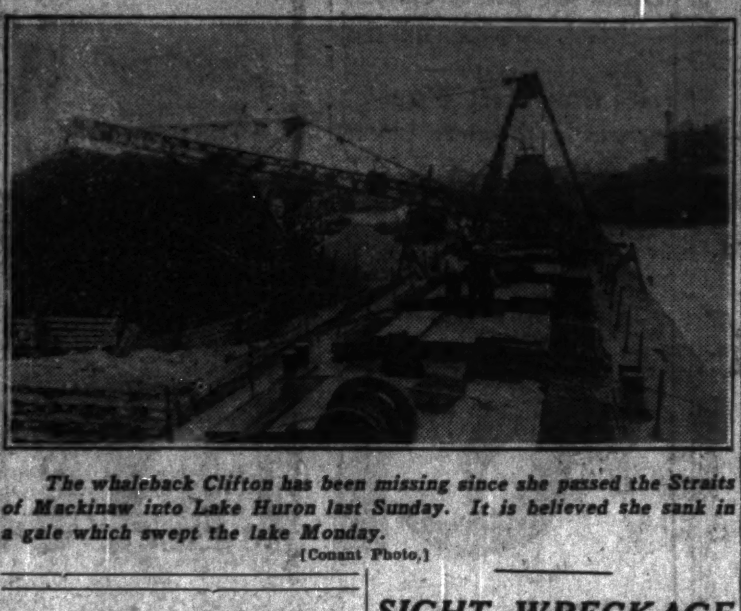
LOST ON LAKE HURON



The whaleback Clifton has been missing since she passed the Straits of Mackinaw into Lake Huron last Sunday. It is believed she sank in a gale which swept the lake Monday.

Red Cross Asks Aid for Tornado Victims

Walter Davidson, manager of the central division of the American Red Cross, said yesterday that $35,000 would be needed immediately for relief of the families that were made homeless when a tornado struck the state of Wisconsin last Sunday. Five counties: Clark, Taylor, Ashland, Oneida and Rusk suffered the greatest loss. Forty-two were killed, 115 wounded and 250 homes destroyed. These figures were submitted to the central division by L. M. Mitchell, in charge of relief work there.

SIGHT WRECKAGE THOUGHT A PART OF LOST STEAMER

Cleveland, O., Sept. 27.—Painted sticks of wood, possibly part of the railing or wheelhouse of the whaleback freighter Clifton, missing since last Sunday, were sighted late yesterday, twenty-four miles northeast of Point Au Barques, Lake Huron, A. E. R. Schneider, general manager of the Progress Steamship company, Cleveland, owners of the vessel, said today. The sticks of wood, painted white, were seen by Capt. Frank Perew of the steamer Peter White, another of the Progress fleet, but his message said the sea was so rough that he was unable to recover the wood.

On receipt of Capt. Perew's message Mr. Schneider requested Selfridge field flying station, Mount Clemens, Mich., to send a hydroplane along the shore of Lake Huron in the direction of East Tawas, Mich., in a search for further evidence of the foundering of the Clifton.

Holdup Men Beat Woman When She Resists Them

CHINESE PLANES BATTLE; BOMBS KILL AND MAIM

Wu's Airmen Victors in Fight at Lanchow.

BY JOHN CLARK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, Sept. 27.—An airplane battle occurred today near Lanchow when Peking planes, using machine guns, drove off Gen. Chang Tso-lin's planes, which came to bomb and reconnoiter. Gen. Chang's planes were unarmed and fled when the government machines began firing.

Gen. Wu Pei-fu's headquarters reports that the Japanese have refused Gen. Chang permission to move troops or supplies across the south Manchurian railway zone.

If correct, this is extremely important, as it indicates that the Japanese will bar all Chinese troop movements in the zone, thus preventing Gen. Wu from using the railway and also preventing Gen. Chang from moving across the line if defeated by Gen. Wu.

Air Bombs Kill Several.

TIENTSIN, Sept. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—A few persons were killed and many were injured today when Manchurian aviators in the army of Gen. Chang Tso-lin bombed the border town of Shanhaikwan, where the eastern extremity of the great wall is located, near the Chihlian-Manchurian line, according to messages received here.

LEVIES $2,000,000 LOAN

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27.—The offensive of the Chekiang province troops against the Kiangsu positions, which started this morning, continued tonight, but there were no essential changes in the positions of either side according to reports received here late tonight. The Chekiang army claims minor victories, mostly in the straightening of lines.

Gen. Ho Feng-lin issued a proclamation here tonight ordering a loan of $2,000,000 in the form of bonds based on a local land tax with interest at 10 per cent and making it practically obligatory for all land owners in the Shanghai area to subscribe.

War Wrecks Business.

The following is a general summary of the financial and economic situation of China at the present time from the standpoint of general business as affected by the war:

"Floods, financial panic, famine, and war have been the lot of China during the period under review. These have combined to render impossible a free exchange of goods and have resulted in the practical paralyzing of business.

"Chinese banks throughout the country have as far as possible called their loans and dealers even in places not immediately affected by the actual fighting are therefore unable to transact business. The withdrawal of cash from native banks and guilds for military needs has further added to the general scarcity of funds.

Small Hope of Trade Revival.

"As the accepted basis for commercial credit in China is a guarantee of accounts by the compradore, native financial agent of a bank, and as the compradores will not stand guarantor under existing circumstances there is small hope of any revival of business until the fighting stops and conditions regain a semblance of order.

"While imports on prior orders continue to arrive at the ports, clearances are at a standstill owing to the inability of the merchants to secure funds for taking up their cargoes and the importers are carrying the pressing burdens of the uncleared merchants.

"Exports are moving out of Shanghai from cargoes already received for shipment, but the arrival of new cargoes is seriously affected, not only due to the uncertainty of transportation because junks and coolies have been impressed for military purposes and railway transportation has become disorganized, but also because cargoes are held up in the interior.

10,000,000 Need Assistance.

"From fragmentary reports received, it is evident that very serious damage has been done to the crops in the flooded provinces. It is stated that in Chihli alone the crop loss will approximate several million dollars and that 10,000 square miles of land are under water.

"More than 13,000 deaths are said to have occurred in the recent floods and a population of nearly 15,000,000 is affected. It is estimated that some 10,000,000 will need assistance and famine relief funds. About $200,000,000 will be needed for this purpose."

KINCAID BANKER DRIVES 7 BANDITS AWAY WITH GUN

Kincaid, Ill., Sept. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Bruce Shaw of the Kincaid Trust and Savings bank this morning drove seven robbers away from his bank with a revolver. They escaped empty handed. President Shaw was wounded in his hand.

Three men entered the bank and one choked Mrs. Maude Quinn, cashier, while another drove Shaw into the vault containing approximately $90,000 in pay roll money. This was missed by the robbers.

The bandit failed to lock the vault and Shaw emerged shooting. Then a touring car containing four men, drove up in front of the bank and an adjoining drug store and poured a fusillade of bullets at the two buildings while the men inside the bank made their escape.

Bank Closes at Noon.

Menota, Ill., Sept. 27.—Beginning next Wednesday, Mendota banks will close between the hours of 12 noon and 1:15 p. m., a precaution against daylight bank robberies.

KRAFT CHEESE
Decidedly Better

WHEN physicians, dieticians and food experts tell you about the greater number of essential food elements found in cheese, they mean first of all, good cheese. Good cheese depends upon so many things, that there's only one way to make it the same every time; that's the Kraft way.

If you are inclined to eat other cheese only sparingly, you may eat Kraft Cheese with perfect freedom. For Kraft Cheese is a thoroughly ripened cheese, and all authorities agree that such cheese does not disturb digestion. Many physicians are now prescribing Kraft Cheese because of its unvarying quality and flavor.

There's the Kraft trade mark on the tinfoil wrapper to guide you when buying. We put that label on the outside of every package because our reputation for quality is on the inside.

MISS MARY WEGG BECOMES BRIDE OF BOSTON MAN

Society Attends Ceremony at St. Chrysostom's.

Miss Mary Wegg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Wegg and Samuel Frothingham Jr., son of Mrs. Samuel Frothingham of Lenox and Boston, were married yesterday afternoon.

Candle light, shed from the tops of tall smilax crosses which lined the aisle and bordered the chancel, was the only illumination of St. Chrysostom's church, where the Rev. Norman [illegible] read the service at 4:30 o'clock. Candelabra surmounted the altar, which was banked with white chrysanthemums.

Costumes of Bridal Party.

Miss Wegg's bridal gown was of white satin, simply made with a circular skirt, draped in front to produce a flare effect and a long court train. Her full tulle veil was caught under a coronet of rosepoint lace with tiny orange blossom ornaments. The bridal bouquet was of white roses and sweet peas. Miss Margaret Hambleton, who was Miss Wegg's maid of honor, wore a chiffon velvet frock of golden brown and carried a bouquet of zinnias and pale blue larkspur. Her large picture hat and those of the bridesmaids were of deep brown velvet, with small tulle [illegible] trimming.

The bridesmaids, Miss Genevieve Carpenter, Miss Alice Carpenter, Miss Ruth Keeley, Miss Georgiet Hitch, and Mrs. J. Higginson Manning of New York, wore corn colored satin gowns with loop sashes forming miniature trains and carried zinnia bouquets tied with large corn colored bows.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Donald R. Wegg, was wearing a reseda green gown of chiffon velvet with a large black plumed hat. She was with Mrs. Frothingham, who was gowned in black.

Reception Follows Ceremony.

Donald Frothingham served his brother as best man, and George R. Brown of Newton, Mass., Maclin P. [illegible] of Nashville, Esty Foster, James Mabon, Henry Yates Satterlee, and Frank Houston of New York, William Hubbard and Talbott Wegg of Chicago ushered. A small reception at the Wegg residence at 47 East Elm street followed the ceremony.

Indiana Farmers Unite in Wolf Hunts; Kill Two

Logansport, Ind., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—As the result of numerous [illegible] of domestic animals by wolves in the vicinity of Headlee near here farmers have organized regular drives to rid the countryside of the pests. Hunts this week resulted in the killing of two of the pack.

SOCIETY WEDDING

Society was well represented yesterday at the wedding of Miss Mary Wegg of Chicago and Samuel Frothingham Jr. of Boston. This photograph was taken as the couple were leaving St. Chrysostom's church after the ceremony.

35,000 CHILDREN JOIN CAMPAIGN FOR BETTER SIGHT

More than 35,000 boys and girls, pupils in Chicago's public, private and parochial schools, have enrolled in an international campaign to reduce defective vision.

The purpose of the contest, which is under the direction of the electrical industry in the United States and Canada, is to induce the children to study proper lighting, so that in future years there will be less eye trouble.

Statistics show that 25 per cent of the school children of the country have defective vision, and this is partially due to improper lighting in the homes, according to E. W. Lloyd, chairman of the Chicago Better Home Lighting committee.

Old Folks Blamed for Ills of Today by School Head

Oshkosh, Wis., Sept. 27.—Pointing out that it was not the young people of today who built the jazz palaces and composed the jazz music, manufactured the moonshine, or conducted disreputable soft drink parlors, L. P. Goodrich, superintendent of the Fond du Lac public schools, stoutly defended the youth of today in an address before the Oshkosh Business Women's club.

"The greatest problem of the young generation is the old generation," Supt. Goodrich declared. "The problem of today is not what we are going to do with the youngsters, but what are we going to do with and to the older folks."

ENFORCEMENT LEAGUE IS RENT IN PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 27.—Joseph M. Steel, president of the Law Enforcement league of Philadelphia, today resigned as head of that organization as a result of the telegram sent to President Coolidge by the secretary of the league in which he said he possessed evidence of corruption among federal office holders in Pennsylvania.

"I was amazed that you should have sent such an unwise communication, involving not only yourself but those associated with you in the very unfavorable notoriety and controversy," Steel said in his letter of resignation to William R. Nicholson Jr., the secretary.

Nicholson's telegram threatened to make public the alleged evidence he had if Gen. Butler were removed by Mayor Kendrick as director of public safety.

When Steel's resignation became known Nicholson said that an effort would be made to have Gen. Butler take the presidency of the league in the event he is dismissed from the police department.

It was said here that the basis of Nicholson's telegram to the President was a letter written to the league by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, United States deputy attorney general, regarding prohibition enforcement in which she stated the trouble with prohibition enforcement was political strangulation.

Nicholson said that through some error the word "corruption" was used in his telegram instead of "strangulation."

Posses Hunt Fort Wayne Negroes in Woman Attack

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Several hundred men are scouring the woods and fields east of the city tonight for two Negroes, who choked and beat Mrs. Henry Dirig, 44, after which they dragged her into a nearby garden patch where she was raped. A lynching party is feared if the men are caught.

ONE-HALF mile north of the County Line Road and three blocks east of the entrance of Ravinia Park, home of Outdoor Grand Opera, lies Deere Park. Its greatest width, one-third of a mile, is along the shore of Lake Michigan in the very heart of Ravinia—Highland Park—that region of beauty so well-known to Chicagoans.

One of the country's best-known landscape architects is planning and developing this 42-acre tract of ravine-cut woodland into a unique and beautiful subdivision of 65 lots.

All improvements, including winding 18-foot concrete drives, sidewalks, sanitary sewer system, water, gas mains and electric lights, are being installed and paid for. No assessments against lot purchasers.

Deere Park enjoys the best of transportation. The Chicago and Northwestern Railway, with its 61 trains daily, makes the trip in less than 40 minutes. The North Shore Electric Line, with its 111 trains daily, stops at Highland Park and Ravinia Park Station, less than fifteen minutes' walk from the property. Sheridan Road, Route 42, will carry the motorist to Deere Park along a road of unusual beauty.

Take any Chicago and Northwestern train or North Shore Electric to Highland Park station, where a Baird & Warner automobile will meet you. If our car is not there, any Highland Park taxicab will take you to the property without charge. PANAMA CANAL NOW YIELDING PROFIT FOR U. S.

Reaches a Paying Basis in Ten Years.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—After ten years of operation, the Panama canal is finally paying returns. The canal commenced to yield a net revenue commensurate with its capital cost for the first time during the fiscal year 1923, and in the fiscal year 1924 there was a further boost in receipts. The canal heretofore has been considered a paying investment in national defense and in national prestige, and now it has proved its value as a commercial investment.

The tenth year of actual operation of the canal was completed on Aug. 14. The grand total of tolls paid during the ten year period was $100,534,619.

How Revenue Has Jumped.

The manner in which revenues have increased enormously during the latter part of the decade may be realized from the fact that $23,985,272, or nearly one-fourth of the total, was paid during the tenth year of operation. In the ninth year the total was $18,975,189, and in each of the two preceding years the total was a little in excess of $11,000,000.

During the first six years of operation the highest total was about $9,000,000 and the lowest about $2,250,000.

The net income from all sources for the fiscal year 1923, when for the first time the canal began to show returns in keeping with capital cost, was $12,063,880.

Small Total in 1922.

That was four times the total of the fiscal year 1922, when net revenue was computed at $3,079,531. Of the $12,063,880 total, the sum of $10,001,066 was net transit revenue, $1,140,642 was net revenue on auxiliary business operations, such as the mechanical shops, material storehouses, and fuel oil plants, and $922,171 was net revenue from the Panama railroad.

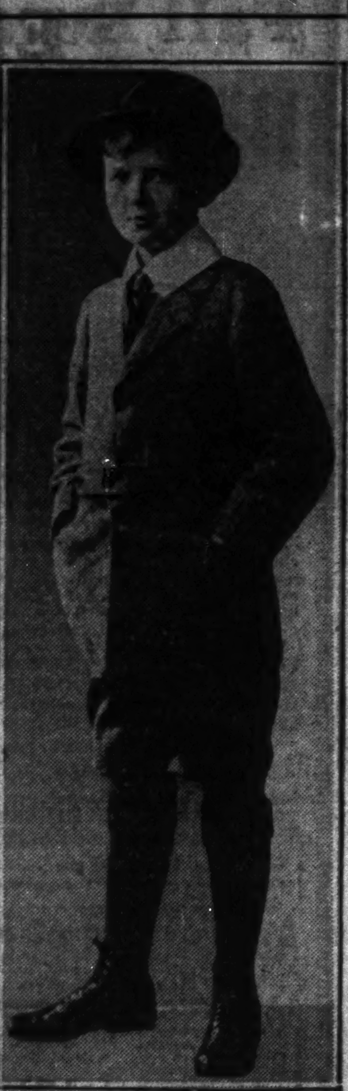
With net transit revenue for the fiscal year 1923 amounting to approximately $10,000,000, when tolls paid totaled $17,508,199, it is assumed that the annual report for the fiscal year 1924, when tolls amounted to $24,290,963, will show a net transit revenue of upward of $15,000,000.

What Canal Cost.

The canal cost the government, all together, about $375,000,000. A considerable part of this expenditure was made on the basis of national defense. Military experts declare that the canal has proved a profitable investment from a national defense standpoint.

During the ten years of operation 25,620 commercial vessels and 2,271 United States government vessels have transited the canal.

VANISHED



FRANKLIN ROSHEK.

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Police are combing the entire state for Franklin Roshek, 14 years old, who disappeared Tuesday morning. Since stepping from his home of luxury at that time no trace of the lad has been found. The searchers have rejected a theory that the boy has been slain under circumstances similar to the Bobby Franks case in Chicago.

Roshek was a studious lad of few intimates. Police have learned, however, that he frequently played with an unkempt lad known as "Hunchback" Reilly, who also has disappeared. The rich boy seemed fascinated by "Hunchback's" dirt, and in some quarters it is believed the two have set out together.

BRITISH BANKER ASSAILS 2 PACTS WITH BOLSHEVIKS

Claims Soviets Gained All Points, English Nothing.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A scathing condemnation of the two treaties which Prime Minister MacDonald signed with Soviet Russia, and which now are waiting ratification by parliament, is contained in a pamphlet issued by Capt. E. A. Lessing, member of parliament, a member of Strauss and company, bankers, of London, New York and San Francisco, and also known on the Chicago board of trade.

After a careful analysis of every article, both navigation, commercial and general, in the treaties, Capt. Lessing maintains that only one concession was obtained from the bolsheviks and that was the right for British subjects to leave Russia whenever they please.

"Those familiar with the Cheka realize the importance of this privilege," he says.

Lists His Objections.

Among the objections are:

1. A national treatment clause which provides for the acceptance by British subjects of the same unfair treatment which is meted out to soviet citizens. This includes the right to confiscation of British property under the inheritance tax and other pretexts.

2. The most favored nation clause is nullified by the frontier zone clause, which permits the admission of Chinese tea, and Polish and other goods without considering British interests, and the maintenance of a foreign trade monopoly by the bolsheviks.

3. The granting of extra territorial rights to trade delegations is absurd when it is considered that the firms are amenable to the laws of the country.

4. The clause providing freedom from duty of goods in transit is nullified by the phrase, "Routes declared open by general legislation."

Assails Taxation Clause.

5. The clause exempting British subjects from special taxation is invalidated by the phrase, "except in special cases in regard to all foreigners."

6. The British government repudiates its own court orders for the sale of former Russian vessels to satisfy the claims of crews and dock builders for repairs.

Capt. Lessing contends that the treaty virtually withdraws the British claim on the Russian debt. Russia's attempt to lump the claims of British creditors against the claims of soviet citizens against Great Britain is criticized on the ground that the soviet claims are not against British creditors, but against the British government.

Flouts Bankruptcy Plea.

Regarding the plea of bankruptcy, Capt. Lessing asks:

"Who can remember when the proud, rich United States, for example, was in a hopeless financial mess? Bankrupt states often become prosperous in a short time."

A complaint is made of the looseness of phraseology, due to an attempt to cover up the meaning. The failure of the treaty to contain the British king's name and title is attributed to "deference to communistic sentiments," and not, as explained, to the idea that it would be "derogatory to the authority or dignity of the king because the soviets have no equivalent monarch or president." The Italians, Capt. Lessing maintained, showed more courage by putting in the king's name in the right place.

BRITAIN FACING ELECTION OVER SOVIET TREATIES

MacDonald Defends Labor Record; Hits Foes.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Prime Minister MacDonald, addressing a massmeeting at Derby today, asserted that if the house of commons fails to ratify the treaties which the Labor government made with Russia he would appeal to the country through a general election. He insisted that he did not wish to take this action and would only do so if forced.

In defending the treaties Mr. MacDonald said that because he had sought to make peace with the Russians, he had been called a Bolshevist.

"When you make peace with a country you do not associate yourself with its government, its religion, its laws, its habits of life," he said. "God forgive me if I ever do that. I have made peace with Turkey. Am I a Mohammedan?"

Great Britain secured many valuable concessions under the treaties, he asserted, and is not going to give Russia a loan, only guarantee a loan.

In Challenging Mood.

Mr. MacDonald was in a challenging mood, hitting out with unwonted fierceness in attacks upon his political critics during the address, his first political speech since parliament adjourned on Aug. 10.

He vigorously defended the Labor party's record during its eight months in office, and he challenged any Liberal or Conservative to show that the name, reputation, stability, or prospects of the country had suffered by the existence of the Labor government.

The prime minister's speech was broadcasted by wireless. At the outset he referred spiritedly to Labor's "malignant slanderers."

"Week after week they have been maligning us, and slandering us. Even our personal characters have not been sacred," he said.

He referred bitingly to "men like Sir Robert Horne, who have persistently attempted to create financial damage and trade difficulties." Continuing he said, "But in its first eight months, the Labor government has shown it can govern better than they. Labor has done well in office, and its opponents are beginning to be afraid because Labor has not ruined the country. If we had they would be going to their churches tomorrow thanking God for our handiwork."

The prime minister next dealt with the Irish question, and threw out an appeal for good will in Ireland.

"I appeal to the home rulers, Unionists, Conservatives, Liberals and Labor, to come together and in the name of their country see that the bargain solemnly made with south Ireland is kept."

"What about the north?" interrupted a voice.

"Ulster has got to be dealt with fairly, like the south," the prime minister retorted.

Honor is Involved.

The honor of all parties and parliament was concerned, he explained, and added that a "serious responsibility should rest on anyone who refused to carry out the agreement with the Free State after it had been signed in all honesty.

"But if my opponents could bring that accusation against me, how happy they would be," he declared.

Dealing with the international situation, Mr. MacDonald denied a suggestion that the British government had mortgaged the British navy to the league of nations. The nation wanted complete confidence, he went on, and added, the nations of the world must be lead into that state of confidence which would enable them to take risks inevitable in aiming at good ends.

Better in 3 ways than any other pencil in the world

Autopoint is the lifework of four men. The principles they discovered today are standard in the industry. One of them created the modern automatic pencil.

30,000,000 pencils have been made and sold under this man's patents. They are used in every country in the world.

These four men have improved the finest pencil the world knew—the one they invented—in three important ways.

* * * * *

In the new Autopoint the automatic pencil is perfected. Today it is offered to you: beautiful to look at, a delight to use. And modest in price.

Every business man and woman should have one. Every student at school should have one. Every woman should have one—for home and to carry in her bag.

The new Autopoint is made to last a lifetime. Nothing can go wrong with it. The silvonite finish is made of solid metal—can never become shabby, tarnished, old. No "nickel plated" parts.

Try it a week—at our risk

Today go to any dealer in the city. Select and buy the new AUTOPOINT that appeals to you most. There are many styles—with prices ranging from 50 cents to $3.50. Then take that pencil on trial. Put it in your pocket along with other pencils.

Autopoint's 3 Outstanding Exclusive Features

1 The famous "neutral zone"—an exclusive patent. When the lead is exhausted, the feeding mechanism goes into "neutral"—it cannot "jam." This is what breaks ordinary mechanical pencils.

2 The Bakelite barrel—an onyx-like, permanent light-weight material—cannot dent or tarnish. The most beautiful substance ever used for pencils!

3 Autopoint has simplest and smoothest working mechanism in the world. Nothing to go wrong—only 2 moving parts.

See which one you subconsciously select when reaching in your pocket for a pencil. Note how, after hours of writing it prevents the fingers from cramping. See how practical it is—how durable—how beautiful. Compare its simplicity of reloading with any other pencil. Compare its balance, its precision of operation.

At the end of a week if you are willing to be without it, bring it back. If it is not finer than any other pencil in the world at the price, return it. Your money will be instantly refunded.

Today, get your Autopoint. Learn the delight of this reliable friend. See how quickly it makes a place for itself in your work. We know you'll never want to be without an Autopoint again!

HOOF AND MOUTH SCOURGE HITS 4 TEXAS COUNTIES

South Bars Exports of Cattle from State.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 27.—With the definite diagnosis today of the malady affecting 400 head of Brahma cattle on the ranch of the Rev. Wm. States [illegible] as hoof and mouth disease, [illegible] were put into operation to hold the disease in check.

Seventy-five men, guards, inspectors, and laborers, were thrown into the ranch and before night 5,000 acres of land and 1,100 head of beef cattle were under guard.

The state live stock and sanitary commission issued an official quarantine today on all of Harris and Galveston counties and all that part of Fort Bend and Brazoria counties east of the Brazos river, prohibiting the movement of live stock either within these counties or out of them.

The quarantine was extended to dressed carcasses of all ruminants and their hides or wool as well as to all products of the soil, including hay, grain, biological products manufactured in the quarantined territory, green grass, shrubs, flowers and green house plants.

Trenches were dug today by a steam shovel for the burial of the infected cattle, which are scheduled to be destroyed Monday, according to present plans. Probably one-half of the Ja[illegible] herd will be sacrificed, it was stated. Poison bait was scattered today to kill any dog, wolf or other animal that might wander on to the ranch. All traffic between Galveston and Houston was stopped over the state highway.

TEMPLARS WILL MEET IN CHICAGO STADIUM IN 1925

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 27.—Knights Templars of Illinois, in grand conclave here today, voted unanimously to meet next year in Chicago. The fact that the municipal stadium in Grant park will be complete then and will hold [illegible] spectators, was the determining factor in the vote.

Owing to the death of one officer of the grand commandery and the withdrawal of two others, three new officers were selected yesterday. Edward D. Wade of Oak Park was elected grand sword bearer; John A. Barber of Springfield, grand warden, and Richard J. Howells, Streator, captain of the guard.

St. Bernard commandery of Chicago won the battalion drill competition over Columbia commandery, also of Chicago. Chevalier Bayard commandery, Chicago, was awarded the banner in the company drill.

COOLIDGE INSPECTS ELEVEN ACRE OFFICE FOR PAYING BONUS

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—President Coolidge made a tour of inspection today of the mammoth institution where the bonus applications of more than 4,000,000 war veterans are handled and their claims to compensation determined.

In his trip of inspection of the adjutant general's office, into which thousands of applications come daily, the President was accompanied by Dwight W. Davis, assistant secretary of war, and was conducted through the various departments by Gen. Robert C. Davis, adjutant general of the army, who has charge of the vast bonus machinery.

The bonus offices, where all claims are received, examined, identified and computed before they are finally passed on to the war veterans' bureau, where bonus and insurance certificates are paid, cover office floor equivalent to eleven acres.

The organization, which includes 2,700 employés, was hurriedly thrown together, but it has already reached the point of efficiency where it passes on more than 20,000 claims a day.

Already bonus and insurance claims have been filed by 1,300,000 veterans of the army, navy and marine corps. Of these, 300,000 have been allowed and computed.

GRAB BANDIT FOR $18,000 RAID ON LOCKPORT BANK

A bandit raid upon the First National bank of Lockport, near Joliet, Ill., which occurred on Aug. 14 and netted the robbers $18,176, has been cleared, according to operatives of the Burns Detective agency, through the arrest of Carl Welsh, a paroled convict, in Shelby, S. D.

Welsh is en route to Chicago from the South Dakota town in custody of Leonard Johnson, investigator of the detective agency, and will be faced by A. P. Bailey, cashier of the looted bank in an attempt to establish his identification as chauffeur for the bandit gang.

The discovery by detectives in the rear of the bank of a soiled envelope containing the notation "Mrs. Carl Welsh, Rockford, Ill.," turned the investigation toward Welsh, it was said. The woman proved to be the wife of Welsh, who had been paroled from Joliet penitentiary last July to Clarence A. Rowley, a farmer residing near Lockport.

Mrs. Welsh was shadowed and soon led the officers to her husband's hiding place at Shelby. Four others, all possessing police records, it was said, were arrested along with Welsh. They are William Frost, James Ryan (alias "St. Louis Billy"), William Burg, and Ben Mackowitz.

South Dakota authorities announced later that capture of Welsh and his companions had probably cleared a number of recent bank lootings in the Dakotas.

VETS APPEAL TO PRESIDENT FOR REMEDIAL LAWS

Ask Better Hospital Care for War Wounded.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Legislative recommendations of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States were presented to President Coolidge today by Brig. Gen. John H. Dunn of Boston, the newly elected commander in chief of the organization. Gen. Dunn asked that the President give consideration to the various proposals in preparing his annual message to congress.

Gen. Dunn was accompanied by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the United States veterans' bureau, and by other officers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The recommendations included the following:

That the hospital program of the government be speedily put into effect and that improvements be made in the hospital equipment and service. That competent medical officers be placed in charge of these hospitals. That legislations and regulations be adopted to care for the recreation of men in hospitals.

That legislation be enacted with the view of equalizing compensation and pension of all disabled men of all wars for like disabilities.

That congress provide for a firm and adequate military and naval defense policy, as well as the passage of laws prohibiting and punishing seditious acts on the part of unpatriotic societies and individuals.

Gen. Dunn also discussed the recommendations with Assistant Secretary of War Davis, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Gen. Pershing and Brig. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, deputy chief of staff.

COOLIDGE ASKED TO CUT RED TAPE TO GIVE HERO JOB

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Acting Secretary of War Davis has requested President Coolidge to waive civil service regulations in the case of Sergt. Michael B. Ellis of East St. Louis, holder of the congressional medal of honor, in order that Ellis may be given a position in the postoffice at St. Louis.

Ellis, who was hailed upon his return home as a hero, is now understood to be badly in need of work, and it is expected that an exception will be made in his case in order to give him employment.

As sergeant of Company C, 28th Infantry, First division, Ellis showed conspicuous gallantry in action near Exermont, France, on Oct. 5, 1918.

1543 People Drove the Auburn 8-In-Line in the City of Chicago the First 4 Days It Was Shown

8 AUBURN IN LINE

—And 1543 People Agreed With Us That This Car Is Able to Do Its Own Selling!

In announcing the new Auburn 8-In-Line, we presented a new car in a new way—and the public liked it!

We deliberately refrained from an orgy of adjectives. We did not get red in the face writing a page full of flattery about the car's ability to do 75 miles and more an hour! In no way did we shout and rave about its performance.

Instead, we simply told the public that Auburn had produced a new Eight . . . that it was here, ready to be seen and driven . . . that we wanted everybody to drive it . . . that NOBODY WOULD BE ASKED TO BUY IT!

And the promise that nobody would be nagged to buy made the public reason that here must be a very unusual and superior car—a car able to do its own selling!

So 1543 people came into our stores to drive this car. And 1543 people marveled at the value we were able to offer. The first 8-In-Line below $2100 with nothing lacking in the way of equipment. A car including every possible equipment that any man can desire in driving a new car out on the road, including 4-wheel brakes of the most improved type, balloon tires (and by this we mean full balloon tires), 4 snubbers, front bumper, disc wheels, motometer and bar cap, cowl lights, automatic windshield wiper, rear vision mirror, gasoline gauge on the dash, approved transmission lock, kick plates, spare tire, drum type tire cover, stop light, nickel radiator, cowl ventilator, and permanent top.

Our rival automobile dealers and their salesmen in great numbers did us the courtesy of driving our new Auburn 8-In-Line. Almost to a man they agreed that we are giving the most astonishing value that has yet been offered in this price class.

More than that, they agreed with our policy of a close price, which does not carry a false list permitting a fictitious trade-in price on a used car. We do not think that the buying public who have grown motor wise can be any longer kidded by a false price on their used automobile. They know they have never gotten anything for nothing and the false allowance means either a fake list or the robbing of the car in quality. Auburn dealers will trade your used cars. They want them and you will find them fair in their allowances.

You are not fair to yourself if you are one of those who have not driven this new Auburn 8-In-Line. Whether you drive a Ford or a Pierce-Arrow you some day will be in the market for a car of this class and we again invite you to come in and drive this automobile. YOU WILL NOT BE ASKED TO BUY!

You will appreciate its balance, the ease with which it handles in traffic, the eagerness with which it answers the slightest pressure on the accelerator, the comfort of the position behind the wheel, the indefinable sense of quality that comes to you when you are the engineer of this new Auburn 8-In-Line. Get acquainted with this new Auburn 8-In-Line, "the car that is selling itself."

"Everything Known in Music"

THE House of Lyon & Healy, now in its 60th successful year mirrors the foresight, sympathy, and courage of its founders. Notwithstanding the severe losses by fire several times, prior to and including the Chicago Fire, the firm from its inception expanded and prospered. And just as its firm name has remained unchanged thru the vicissitudes of over half a century, so, too, the early ideals have been cherished.

For three generations every opportunity has been seized to place the best instruments and the best music into the hands of music lovers everywhere. This endeavor to serve better is physically expressed by the continually increasing facilities offered to those interested in musical merchandise. Through the years to come we shall strive to bring music closer into human life and by this means to release more of the latent possibilities of mankind for happiness, achievement and progress.

JONES FINALLY WINS AMATEUR TITLE

EPINARD AGAIN LOSES; SENATORS BOOST LEAD

LADKIN NOSES OUT INVADER IN LAST JUMP

Wise Counsellor Is Third and Zev Fourth.

Aqueduct Race Track, New York, Sept. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—In one of the most thrilling races of American turf history, Ladkin, Maj. August Belmont's brilliant 3 year old, by Fair Play-Lading, ridden by Clarence Kummer, today won the second international special at a mile before a crowd of 40,000. The time was 1:36 3-5, and the value to the winner, $22,750.

Epinard, continental champion, again finished second, this time by a nose and coming fast, a length ahead of Wise Counsellor, Kentucky colt which conquered the French crack by a narrow margin on Labor day in the first special at six furlongs.

Lost in the glamor of the contest among the three leaders, was a struggle between Zev and My Own, high lights of last year, but dim today. Two lengths behind Wise Counsellor, Zev finished fourth, only a nose beyond his rival. Little Chief, the only other starter, trailed the field three lengths.

Epinard Crowded to Fence.

The Belmont colt flashed to the wire with just enough to win from the flying Frenchman, which had gained two lengths in the final fifty yards and, it seemed, would have won in another stride. Epinard's challenge came as Ladkin was shaking off Wise Counsellor after a two horse race from the quarter post, where Epinard was ridden into the rail and out of the race temporarily by Wise Counsellor.

The incident at the quarter was the one disturbing factor of a perfect spectacle.

Epinard had broken away from his field and was off like a certain winner in the first sixteenth. At the far turn Wise Counsellor and Ladkin came up and, in passing, crowded Pierre Wertheimer's colt to the fence. From there they went on, with Epinard struggling, three lengths behind, to regain his stride.

Star Flounders in Rear.

The contest went on without its star, which floundered among the secondary group. Neck and neck the scarlet blouse of Kummer and the white and red of O'Donnell bobbed on their straining mounts, two lengths ahead of the field. At the half and into the third quarter the two 3 year olds raced, neither gaining ground.

Ladkin stuck his head in front at the last furlong post, but the alert O'Donnell on Wise Counsellor picked up the distance and brought his own horse into the lead. In the terrific struggle which followed both boys rode high, colored blouses flaming like gipsy riders. Wise Counsellor cracked at the final sixteenth and Ladkin gasped to continue, almost ridden into the ground. Then, from the outside, came another chestnut colt, running like a moving statue, in perfect rhythm.

Challenge Is Too Late.

"Epinard wins! Epinard wins!" the roaring stands shouted as a steady flow of speed, increasing at every stride, brought him even with the faltering Wise Counsellor and on to the tail, then the flank, of the tiring Ladkin. To the shoulders of his opponent Epinard crept and with another leap would have passed; but Haynes had delayed his spurt a fraction too long and the French colt, acknowledged great, was beaten for the second time in America under conditions regarded as far from establishing his true worth.

When the horses were brought back to the judges' stand, it was Epinard that received the greater tribute of the crowd, although the splendid Ladkin was heartily cheered.

In the stands and around the inclosure buzzed protests regarding the incident at the quarter. Everett Haynes, the American jockey who rode Epinard today and upon his triumphant trip, denied interference by O'Donnell and declared that he had intentionally pulled up his mount when he found he was setting too fast a pace.

Jockey Is Criticised.

Horsemen ridiculed his statement and also criticised the jockey for failing to start his final challenge until too late, declaring the French colt was undoubtedly the best in the race and that Haynes had been victimized by sharper American jockeys.

"I did not think any American jockey would cut off my horse that way," Wertheimer commented.

The winner, a favorite all day, paid 2 to 1 to his backers. Epinard was quoted at 11 to 5 and Wise Counsellor at 12 to 5. Zev was a 5 to 1 shot.

DEMPSEY PLANS TOUR OF STATES, SECRETARY SAYS

Teddy Hayes, secretary to Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way to the coast to look after some of the titleholder's business. Hayes asserted Dempsey is planning a tour of the country to meet all comers in cities where boxing is legal. Jack may defend his title this winter against an opponent to be selected by Promoter Tex Rickard, according to Hayes, who left for the coast last night.

GAIN A GAME IN RACE BY JARRING RED SOX, 7 TO 5

Four Pitchers Required to Turn Back Boston.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Washington again climbed to a two game lead over New York in the American league race by downing the Red Sox, 7 to 5, here today while the Philadelphia Athletics trimmed the Yankees. The Senators copped the game in the fifth inning when Pinch Hitter Lefler smashed out a double with the bases loaded, scoring three runners.

Harris employed four pitchers to win. Mogridge, Marberry, Russell and Zachary worked in order. Ehmke and Quinn did the flinging for the Red Sox.

Washington got two runs in the first, but Boston came back with four in their half of the inning. Three runs in the fifth and two in the sixth tucked the game away, while Boston added a lone tally in their half of the fifth. More than 20,000 fans, most of them rooting for Washington, saw the combat. Score:

YANKS ALMOST OUT

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Eddie Rommell outpitched Joe Bush today and the Athletics beat the Yankees, 4 to 3. Rommel held the Hugmen to six blows, two coming in the final frame, when the Yanks scored two runs. The Macks got eight off Bush, five being bunched in the first inning.

The biggest crowd of the year saw the game, more than 25,000 being crowded into the park. Joe Dugan was unable to play, having sprained his leg sliding into third base yesterday. Ernie Johnson covered the bag and his fielding was one of the features.

The Athletics' deciding run, which won the game, was scored on a wild pitch by Bush in the seventh. In the ninth the Yanks put on a desperate rally and scored two runs on Pipp's double, Hale's fumble and Bush's single, but Witt forced Bush to end the inning and game. Score:

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 27.—The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, in annual session here, today defeated a resolution designed to debar from dominion amateur ranks for a year any Canadian athlete going to the United States for competitive purposes. A motion that Canadian records be granted to Canadians only also was defeated.

The PENNANT DOPE at a GLANCE

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

WASHINGTON all but clinched the pennant yesterday by beating Boston while New York lost to Philadelphia. Each team has two more games to play. The best the Yankees can do now is to get a tie with the Senators, in which case the two teams would have to play a series of three games to decide the championship. In order to get a tie the Yanks must win both their games and the Senators must lose both of theirs. The final standing in that case would be:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Washington	91	63	.591
New York	91	63	.591

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

THE Giants clinched the pennant yesterday by beating Philadelphia while Brooklyn lost to Boston. Brooklyn has one more game to play and New York has two. If Brooklyn should win its one and the Giants lose their two the Giants still would be in front. The standing in that case would be:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
New York	93	61	.604
Brooklyn	[illegible]	62	.597

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Middle age doesn't necessarily bar you from the major leagues. Charles "Babe" Adams, 42 years old and veteran of many campaigns, substantiated this statement by ten innings of careful, effective hurling against the Cubs this afternoon. His slow ball and tantalizing curve, thrown anywhere he was asked to toss by Schmidt, his catcher, beat Vic Aldridge and the Cubs, 3 to 2. It was the third straight victory for the Buccaneers in two days.

Babe had remarkable control. He didn't walk a single batter and nearly all the time had the man at the plate in the hole. When it became necessary to bear down when the bases were occupied the Pirate who has so successfully battled Father Time used his slow assortment to great advantage.

Aldridge Is Wild.

The Cubs accumulated nine hits off him, two in the second and two in the seventh accounting for the only tallies. In each of these innings Adams was touched for a triple, Hartnett walloping the first to right, and Barrett, who had a good day at the plate, smacked the other.

Victor Aldridge, the Hoosier flinger, lost a tough game. He was wild, but his inability to locate the plate was overshadowed by his good work in the pinches. A good throw by Weis in the tenth would have halted Schmidt in his mad race to score. Again Hartnett permitted a marker to count by failing to tag Carey, who eluded his outstretched hands. These errors must be taken into consideration when Aldridge's work is reviewed.

Vic Has Tough Luck.

The sixth inning was the worst for Vic. He walked Carey and Barnhart. Wright sacrificed and Traynor bounced to Barrett, who threw to Hartnett too late to get Carey. It seemed as if Leo had a chance to tag him, but apparently the Pirate speed merchant slid under him.

In the tenth inning Grimm beat out a hit to Barrett, but was forced by Schmidt. Adams sacrificed. Carey singled, scoring the winning run.

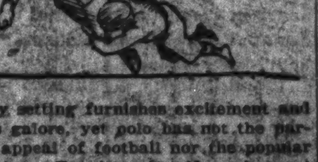
In the Wake of the News

FOOTBALL.

FOOTBALL is the most spectacular of outdoor competitive sports. Tense moments in a crucial baseball game are no less tense than those of a gridiron encounter, and city partisanship vies with that of collegiate rivalry. Although different in its personnel, there are the same immense crowds taxing the stadium's capacity—but, to us, somehow, there is not the same appeal as furnished by those young fellows on the turf gridiron, willing to break every bone in their body (and breaking many of them) for the success of their team, absolutely without monetary reward. They are not paid for their services. Perhaps therein lies the difference.

Equestrian polo with its daring riders racing up and down the field before a society setting furnishes excitement and thrills galore, yet polo has not the partisan appeal of football nor the popular following. Tennis and golf, each great as a sport, do not compare from the viewpoint of the spectator.



What always impresses us in football is the comparative youth of the participants—mere boys, yet intrusted with responsibilities which mean so much to thousands of alumni of all ages. We are prone to criticise errors of judgment during the heat of battle, yet in our sober judgment we should wonder that more errors are not committed during that climax of physical effort and nervous strain.

We take our football seriously, perhaps too seriously at times. The Wake would not change that attitude. For the season of 1924 we only suggest kindly consideration and appreciation on the part of spectators for those losers who are battling just as hard, possibly harder, than the winners to whom go the exultant plaudits.

An' sits down on a leaf
An' paints the strangest patterns
In bright an' bold relief;
The leaves he puts most paint on
Go flyin' down below,
He paints, an' paints, an' paints on
Till all the old leaves go.

I seen this li'l queer man
Go sailin' from a tree
Tossin' on an oak leaf
Through an airy sea,
Inspectin' all his paintin's,
Till at ol' Sol's debut
This long nosed li'l queer man
Vanished with the dew.

Following Hutchison came Al Espinosa, of Chicago, who with seventy in the afternoon, two under par, had a total of 145. Art Longworth, St. Louis Country club, instructor, was third with 148, and several others tied for fourth place with scores of 149.

BY JOE DAVIS.

South Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Success long denied to Robert Tyre Jones Jr. of Atlanta, came today in the finals of the twenty-eighth annual amateur championship of the United States Golf association when he smothered George Von Elm of Los Angeles, 9 and 8 in the 36 hole final at the Merion Country club. It was the greatest margin ever attained by a champion since 1895 when C. B. Macdonald of Chicago defeated C. E. Sands of St. Andrews 12 and 11 in the inaugural tournament at the Newport Golf club.

Bobby first got under the golfing calcium in 1916, when, as a 14 year old boy, he made his first shot at the championship over the same course on which he won the classic. In the intervening years he has tried and failed. Yesterday Bob Gardner, Francis Ouimet, Willie Hunter, Davy Herron, Jess Sweetser and Max Marston, all of whom had frustrated his ambitions in previous tournaments, were listed among the earlier casualties and only George Von Elm, former Salt Lake City caddy, now a resident of Los Angeles, alone stood between Bobby and the goal of his ambition.

4,000 Follow Match.

George had won enough honors in his own territory to be looked upon as a formidable rival for the redoubtable Georgian, but facing the greatest test of his career he was quite unequal to the task and was a beaten man at the end of the morning round when he was 4 down. There had been nothing in his play to give hopes that he could make up his deficit and the afternoon play which was followed by a gallery of about 4,000, was a dismal recessional for the blonde coast player. He failed to win a single hole and after the first two holes it was evident he had not the ghost of a show.

It was a dismal ending to a tournament which contained only a few thrills, as the failure of Jesse Sweetser and F. Cyril Tolley, the mighty Britisher, to qualify threw a wet blanket on the start while the luck of the draw threw most of the best players into the top bracket.

Who They Beat.

Jones, coming through the top half defeated W. Thompson the Canadian star, 6 and 5, D. C. Cockran, 3 and 2, Rudy Knepper, 6 and 4, and Frances Ouimet, 11 and 10. Von Elm had a narrow escape when he won from R. Mackenzie of Washington, at the 27th hole in the first round, and then defeated Lawson Wells of St. Louis, 7 and 5, Eddie Briggs of New York, 7 and 6, and went into the final round by eliminating champion, Max Marston, 7 and 6.

Jones' victory was that of a class player, whose performances in the national open championships have placed him on the highest pedestal it is possible for an amateur to attain, against a player whose fame has been achieved in fields of lesser quality and who still needs more campaigning to have the finish that is essential to rise to championship heights.

Their morning cards do not indicate especially good golf but many of the pins were placed in hard places so that pars were safer than trying for birdies. After the first few holes had been played Jones settled and showed the close to par golf that marked some of his earlier matches.

Both Good from Tees.

From the tees there was little to choose between the men, and while Von Elm at times in the morning got closer on his pitches the equality ceased there as through the day Jones was the master of approach putting and was superior in putting. Von Elm's fine putting in some of his earlier rounds was missed and he did not get down a long putt in the entire twenty-eight holes. Jones, on the other hand made a 10 foot putt on the ninth hole, and 15 footers on the eleventh and eighteenth.

They started under cloudy skies but with the course again in perfect shape. After they had divided the first four holes, and halved the next two, Jones went the rest of the morning route in par figures, going once over and once under par. He was 2 up at the ninth hole and 3 up at the eleventh. Von Elm won the thirteenth and this was his last success of the day.

Luck Hurts Von Elm.

He had a possible chance to win the eighteenth but for a peculiar happening. His pitch from a trap at the corner on the green came out so quickly that despite the fact that Referee Lapham pulled out the pin and tried to jump aside, the ball hit the staff and bounced back to the edge of the green. Jones, after making poor third and fourth shots, snatched a half in 5.

Jones won seven holes, two with birdies in the morning round. He had eleven par holes, while Von Elm had nine pars. Jones had seventeen putts going out and Von Elm had twenty. Coming in Jones had fourteen putts on eight greens, not putting out on the thirteenth, while Von Elm took nineteen, being stymied once.

Jones, the new champion, is 22 years of age and has played in seven amateur championships and five national open events, winning the latter two years ago. Jerome Travers of New York, Francis Ouimet, Boston, and Chick Evans of Chicago are the only other amateurs who have held both the amateur and open titles.

MORNING PLAY.

HOLE 1—335 YARDS—PAR 4. Jones' drive was in the rough on the right and his second was trapped at the left corner of the green. Von Elm sent a high pitch thirty feet short of the pin and won, 4 to 5, Jones getting a short out from the trap and missing a 13 foot putt. Von Elm, 1 up.

HOLE 2—523 YARDS—PAR 5. Jones outdrove Von Elm 20 yards. Von Elm's second was 40 yards short of the pin, Jones being 10 yards closer. Von Elm got too much under his ball and just reached the edge of the green. He overapproached 7 feet and Jones, who had laid his third close, won with a birdie 4 to 6 by Von Elm. All square.

HOLE 3—195 YARDS—PAR 3. Jones' tee shot was on the pin and 30 feet by. Von Elm hooked badly wide of the green, but from the rough he made a great pitch, the ball hitting the pin and rolling a yard away. Jones putted to 2 feet and it looked like a half, but Von Elm's putt slid off to the right and Jones won, 3 to 4. Jones, 1 up.

HOLE 4—595 YARDS—PAR 5. Driving into the wind they were even and their wooden seconds were likewise. Jones' high pitch from 140 yards was off the line to the right and he fell into a ditch, but escaped the water. Von Elm pulled hole high in the rough. Jones chopped out from the ditch, but was short. Von Elm ran his chip shot 8 feet from the cup, Jones overplayed his long putt, and then Von Elm laid him a dead stymie which, after careful inspection, Bob played with his niblick and missed, losing 7 to 6. Match all square.

HOLE 5—435 YARDS—PAR 4. Jones again outdrove Von Elm 20 yards, but Von Elm put his second 10 feet from the pin, Jones being 20 feet away, and they halved in fours.

HOLE 6—427 YARDS—PAR 4. Jones was a little off the line, but on the course, but had to carry a trap to reach the green and went in. Von Elm got home with a long iron to 30 feet from the pin. Jones exploded out of the trap, but was 10 feet away. Von Elm putted a foot over the hole and Jones laid him a dead stymie. Von Elm tried to niblick over, but hit the other ball, and they halved 5.

HOLE 7—355 YARDS—PAR 4. Their drives were a few yards apart, but Jones was 50 feet short on his pitch, Von Elm being 35 feet short to the right. Bob ran his uphill approach to one foot, a fine shot, but Von Elm was four feet short and missed his putt, losing 5 to 4. Jones, 1 up.

HOLE 8—350 YARDS—PAR 4. Jones hooked to a trap, Von Elm being down center. This time the flag was in the middle of the green, but Von Elm's pitch went off the line and was trapped at the right. Jones got home 30 feet from the pin and Von Elm chipped out and bye, just stopping short of a trap. Jones ran his third dead and won, 4 to 5, Von Elm playing a little chip shot and missing. Jones, 2 up.

HOLE 9, 170 YARDS. PAR 3—This is a well trapped green guarded by a brook. Jones skied his tee shot and was 60 feet short. Von Elm placing his ball 30 feet proach putt, but holed a ten footer and snatched half in 3, Von Elm sinking a four footer. Jones 2 up.

HOLE 10, 335 YARDS. PAR 4—Jones was straight and had a good opening for the green. Von Elm putted to the rough in a clover lie. VonElm made a great pitch over a trap, but went by 25 feet. Jones' pitch and run shot was weak, stopping at the edge of the green. His third was dead to the hole, and Von Elm who went over on his approach putt had to hole a 6 foot putt for a half in 4. Jones 2 up.

HOLE 11, 378 YARDS. PAR 4—Driving into the breeze they were even and they made regulation pitches, Von Elm being 25 feet away and Jones 15. Von Elm missed and Bob scored a birdie 3 winning 3 to 4 and being 3 up.

HOLE 12, 415 YARDS. PAR 4.—They got even drives, but Jones had the better opening for the flag. His long iron second seemed ticketed for a trap on the left, but it caught the bank and rolled into within 16 feet of the cup, a lucky break. Von Elm played for the middle of the green and was 26 feet from the flag. Jones ran his approach close and Von Elm got a half in 4 by holding a yard putt after going. Jones 3 up.

HOLE 13, 125 YARDS. PAR 3—Von Elm was 18 feet to the left, but Jones rolled over to a trap and failed to get out, taking too much sand. He was just on in three and conceded the hole, 3 to 4. Jones 2 up.

HOLE 14, 412 YARDS. PAR 4—With the breeze behind them they got long drives. Von Elm got home with a fine pitch, but went by 16 feet. Jones played a low pitch and run and went by the hole fifty feet. Once more he got the ball dead and when Von Elm put his third close, they called it a half in 4.

HOLE 15, 360 YARDS. PAR 3.—Von Elm was down the middle, Jones slicing to the rough and leaving himself a long carry over a trap. Von Elm pulled his second and was 50 feet wide of the pin. His approach down the slope slid by 15 feet, and Bobby, profiting by this, babied his ball down to 18 inches. Von Elm missed the putt and lost, 5 to 4, leaving Jones 3 up.

HOLE 16, 435 YARDS. PAR 4—Jones had a twenty yard advantage in the drives, but his long carry over a wide gulley was only just on the green. Von Elm was 55 feet short. Jones again outplayed him on the approach putt, putting his third to three feet, while Von Elm missed and another hole went into the Georgian's bag, 4 to 5, putting him 4 up.

HOLE 17, 215 YARDS. PAR 3—Both reached the green on their tee shots, Bob being away but 15 feet from the cup. They halved in 3.

HOLE 18, 455 YARDS. PAR 4—Both drove down the middle, but Bob sliced to the rough, causing the gallery to spread. Von Elm had a straight shot, but was off the line and trapped at the corner of the green. Jones' third went only 40 feet. Von Elm's pitch from the trap went straight at Referee Lapham, who was holding the flag, pulled it out, but the ball struck it squarely and bounced back to the edge of the green. It was an unlucky break as Von Elm's ball probably had some spin on it and would have stopped much closer. Jones from the rough chipped by 15 feet and Von Elm was four feet short. Bob holed his putt for a 5 and got a half on a hole that belonged to Von Elm. They adjourned with Jones 4 up.

AFTERNOON PLAY.

HOLE 1—335 YARDS—PAR 4. Von Elm was trapped on his drive and on his second, but got on in 3. Jones overplayed the green and was back in 3. He missed a 5 foot putt for a 4, and then Von Elm, in addressing his ball for a 5 foot putt, moved it when placing his club in front of the ball. He made the putt but was penalized a shot and so lost, 6 to 5. Jones 5 up.

HOLE 2—523 YARDS—PAR 5. Jones was 60 yards further up the course on his second shot. Von Elm's third was 14 feet to the right of the pin and he took two putts, Jones putting his approach from 60 feet close and winning, 4 to 5. Jones 6 up.

HOLE 3—195 YARD—PAR 3. Both drove the green, and ran their approach putts close for a half in 3. Jones 6 up.

HOLE 4—595 YARDS—PAR 5. In two shots Jones was 50 yards further up the course, and from the shorter range pitched 30 feet by the pin. Von Elm saved himself by a good approach putt from 75 feet and they halved in 5. Jones 6 up.

HOLE 5—435 YARDS—PAR 4. They both got home on the seconds. Jones was short 8 feet on his third and when Von Elm ran his approach putt close, Jones missed and stymied him. Von Elm's jump shot hit the other ball and they halved in 5.

HOLE 6—427 YARDS—PAR 4. Jones outdrove the coast boy 20 yards and reached the edge of the green in two, Von Elm being just off and having to putt over a rise. He was short 5 feet and missed the putt, Jones getting a par 4 and winning, 4 to 5. Jones 7 up.

HOLE 7—355 YARDS—PAR 4. Both got good drives. Von Elm put his second to a trap at the left and chopped out away over the pin. Jones was hole high in two, 18 feet away, and Von Elm conceded him a win, 4 to 5. Jones 8 up.

HOLE 8—350 YARDS—PAR 4. Both got good drives and pitches and were 15 feet from the cup. Von Elm ran his putt to the lip of the cup, but Bob played wide and got a half in 4.

HOLE 9—170 YARDS—PAR 3. Jones' drive was to the right and short, but Von Elm was off the green to the left. Von Elm chipped back to 12 feet and Jones ran his long approach putt to 7 feet. Von Elm missed and Bobby holed for a win, 3 to 4, and was dormie.

HOLE 10—335 YARDS—PAR 4. Von Elm drove straight, Jones pulling just into the rough. Von Elm's second went 25 feet by the pin and Jones was 50 feet short. Jones ran up close and Von Elm, after missing his 3, conceded a half in 4, and the match was over.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Chicago's struggling White Sox all but clinched the cellar championship for 1924 yesterday at Comiskey park when they dropped the next to the last game of the season to the Detroit Tigers by a score of 10 to 8. In order to lose the game, they had to break down in the ninth inning after two Tigers were out. This they did with considerable flourish, allowing Cobb's men to romp in with five runs when only one out was needed to win.

As matters now stand the Sox are in the cellar one full game behind Boston, if one cares to see the cellar dope at a glance. Chicago has one more game to play and Boston has two. Boston can lose both its remaining games and still the Sox can take the dungeon title by losing its one game today. The final standing of the two teams in that case would be:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Boston	66	88	.429
Chicago	65	88	.425

Of course, if the Sox should win today from Detroit they could nose the Red Sox into the darkness providing the latter would lose both its remaining games to Washington. Sure is a close race.

Sox Come From Behind.

The combat yesterday was most discouraging to the struggling players for they came from behind and took the lead by a fine seventh inning rally that netted four runs and gave them the advantage by a 6 to 5 count. They held this throughout the eighth and until two were out in the ninth and then everything went to smash.

Only one was out when Manush singled in the ninth, but his swat looked harmless a moment later when Cobb popped out making it necessary to get only one more out to win the game. Manush gave them the chance for he dashed away to second, but he was safe. Then, Heilmann was purposely passed and a young man named Burke came up and knocked a low fly to right field. Probably Elsh could have caught the ball though it didn't carry far, but he lost it completely in the sun and it went for two bases, scoring Manush with the tying run and sending Heilmann to third.

Pratt Singles in Two.

Then Mr. Pratt singled, scoring both Heilmann and Burke and Pratt took second on the throw home, from where he dashed home when Gehringer singled. The latter went to second on the peg to the plate and on to third when Schalk failed to stop the ball and he too scored when Woodall scratched a single down the first base line.

In the Sox half of the ninth, they tried desperately to institute another big rally, but it was suppressed with only two men getting around. Thurston pitched the first five rounds and was rapped freely. Blankenship succeeded him and was good until after two were out in the ninth. Whitehill went through seven rounds for the Tigers and Holloway and Wells finished.

After the final game today, the Sox will have two days of rest to get all fired up for the opening of the city series against the Cubs.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question August H. Gelhaus, 6215 South Sangamon street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Which should it be, five or seven games to decide a world's series baseball championship?

Where Asked.

Ohio street at Michigan avenue.

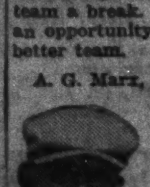
The Answers.

Henry W. Tymick, 3405 Highland avenue, Berwyn, Ill., advertising clerk — A seven game series should decide a championship. It gives each team a fair opportunity to display its ability and gives the fans a better chance to see a game or two without being crushed by the crowd.

Edward Newren, 1619 Byron street, clerk—It should be a seven game world's series to decide the championship. It gives the second and third place teams a good share of the receipts. This will give the fans and also the players a better chance.

Edward Finnigan, 5418 West Congress street, authorizer—It's a good idea to have a seven game series to decide a world's championship. This would give the fans more competition and arouse more interest in the game. It would give the fans a good chance to see more games and get more action for their money.

Carl Christiansen, 2435 North Artesian avenue, authorizer—I think the seven game series to decide a championship gives both teams a better chance, where in a five game series it's three out of five games. This does not give the losing team a break. It will give the public an opportunity to decide which is the better team.



A. G. Marx, 809 Leland avenue, student—I think a seven game world's series championship is better than a five game series. They will play a better brand of ball. It will increase the gate receipts and give the clubs in second and third places a good share of the money.

Crusinberry and Hayes to Score for City Series

James Crusinberry, veteran baseball reporter of The Chicago Tribune, and William F. Hayes, baseball editor of the Chicago office of the Associated Press, have been chosen official scorers for the city series between the Cubs and the White Sox. The series will start Wednesday at the Cubs park.

GIANTS CLINCH FLAG BY WINNING FROM PHILS, 5-1

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—John McGraw and his New York Giants established a major league record for modern baseball today when they clinched their fourth straight pennant in the National league. The Giants secured the flag by defeating Philadelphia 5 to 1 while Brooklyn was defeated by Boston. It is McGraw's tenth championship.

Southpaw Jack Bentley turned in one of his best games of his career to win for the Giants. The former Baltimore pitcher held the Phils to four scattered hits and none of the blows figured in the scoring of the lone run gained by the Quakers in the first inning on a base on balsl and a sacrifice and error.

The Giants pounded their way to victory by slamming Jimmy Ring, the star of the Philly hurling corps, hard and then rapping Harold Carlson, his relief hurler. Score:

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALF

NEW RULES READY IN JANUARY

New laws for auction are expected to be ready Jan. 1, the new code being in the hands of committees from the Whist club of New York and the American Whist league, but the changes from the present code will be slight.

Such things as contract bridge, equalizing suit values, huge slam bonuses, imperial clubs, etc., apparently emanating from psychopathic wards or institutions for the feeble minded have already been judged and condemned.

One change which The Tribune would like to suggest to the committee has to do with the revoke penalty, as follows:

On the first deal of the rubber game, the final declaration was four spades doubled and redoubled. After seven tricks had been played the trump suit was exhausted and the declarer had secured five of the seven tricks. The cards remaining in dummy were six hearts headed by ace, jack, ten. The declarer led the king of hearts from his own hand, small hearts were played from the next two, and fourth hand discarded a club. The declarer then led another heart, played the ten from dummy, and fourth hand won with the queen and took every other trick.

The declarer should have made, except for the revoke, 100 points for his contract, 100 for the extra trick, 250 for the rubber, and 180 below the line, or 630 in all. Instead of that, he secured only 50 measly points.

In equity, the declarer should have secured his 630 points and 50 points for the revoke.

The law should be amended so that when a revoke has been properly claimed and established, if the offending player has gained a trick or tricks by reason of the revoke, he must restore those tricks and pay the revoke penalty in addition.

For game scored in a single deal 125 is inadequate and should be raised to 150 at least, as more nearly representing the value of a game in real auction bridge. Under this method doubling and redoubling may be permitted exactly as in the real game.

Doubling frequently loses games, even in case of free doubles, as illustrated by the deal which follows:

West secured ten tricks.

Had north not doubled, the declarer, after winning the first trick in dummy, would have led a heart from dummy and ruffed in his own hand and proceeded to extract the trumps.

This play would have made his contract impossible to secure as north and south would have eventually made three trumps and one diamond, but the double altered the situation completely, as the declarer naturally asked himself after seeing the dummy what in time north could hold as a basis for a double in such a deal. The answer could be nothing but trumps.

Five or six trumps must be in the north hand, but if the declarer lost nothing but trump tricks his contract was certain, as he could always extract three of the six trumps held adversely. He therefore continued the club suit at trick two and allowed north to trump while the declarer was getting rid of losing diamonds from his own hand.

After the fourth trick the play was virtually over, it being impossible for north to secure anything except the jack of spades.

Doubles which are based upon trump strength alone are usually poor if the ability to locate the trumps will enable the declarer to secure more tricks than he otherwise would do.

BY WALLACE ABBEY.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 27.—A spirited attack, carried out with a vengeance, especially in the third period, brought the Badgers a 25 to 0 victory over North Dakota in the opening game of the season on Camp Randall field here today. The battle was fought in a steady downpour, which greatly handicapped the teams, but did not detract any from the ardor of the 9,000 fans.

These Cardinals outclassed their Flickertail rivals from the west in about everything that pertains to football. The westerners had hopes of springing an aerial attack, but the rain prevented anything but straight football.

Badgers Score Early.

Right in the first few minutes of play Coach Jack Ryan's men, who have been drilling only two weeks compared with five for the westerners, showed their prowess when Doyle Harmon, Cardinal quarter, who with Jack Harris was one of the heroes of the fray, broke through the line and trotted 65 yards for the first score. Harris made a place kick for the extra point.

That was all the scoring in the first period, but in the second, after Harris and Ed Williams had carried the ball to the North Dakota three yard line, the Cardinal captain broke through center for a touchdown, but a line buck for the extra point failed.

Again in the third period these same line smashers, D. Harmon and Harris, each contributed another counter. Early in this period Burrus, Badger end, blocked a North Dakota punt and recovered for his time on the Flickertails' 2 yard line. It took just one punch for Harris to put it over.

Then this same Doyle Harmon, who brought rounds of cheer from the stands every time he carried the ball, wormed his way through the line and raced 35 yards for the final score. Again a line buck for the extra point failed.

North Dakota Tightens Up.

In the final period the North Dakota line tightened and twice the Badgers were forced to attempt place kicks or punt when another touchdown seemed assured. But the field was in awful shape and gaining was next to impossible.

The only opportunity the visitors had to score was in the second session when the Flickertails worked the ball down to the Badger 20 yard line and on the fourth down attempted a place kick. The center's pass was witnessed and the recipient, instead of placing the ball on the ground for the kicker, fell on his nose in the mud and was almost buried there by the Badgers who piled on him.

On the whole Coach Ryan's team showed class which will make it tough for Big Ten rivals. Doyle Harmon performed splendidly at quarter, while Leo Harmon and Stangel looked good at full. Ed Williams took care of the punting nicely from his half, and Capt. Harris all but knocked the North Dakota line dizzy with some of his plunges.

Visitors Make One First Down.

The Badger line held the westerners helpless and only one first down went into the records for the visitors, that coming on a penalty for off-sides.

Harry McAndrews, the sterling little half who runs the 100 yard dash in :09 4-5, was inserted in the second half, but the field was too muddy for a player of his type and the fans were denied some thrills they had expected. Larson was also used at quarter and handled the team well.

The local team came through the battle unscathed, while time was constantly being taken out for the westerners.

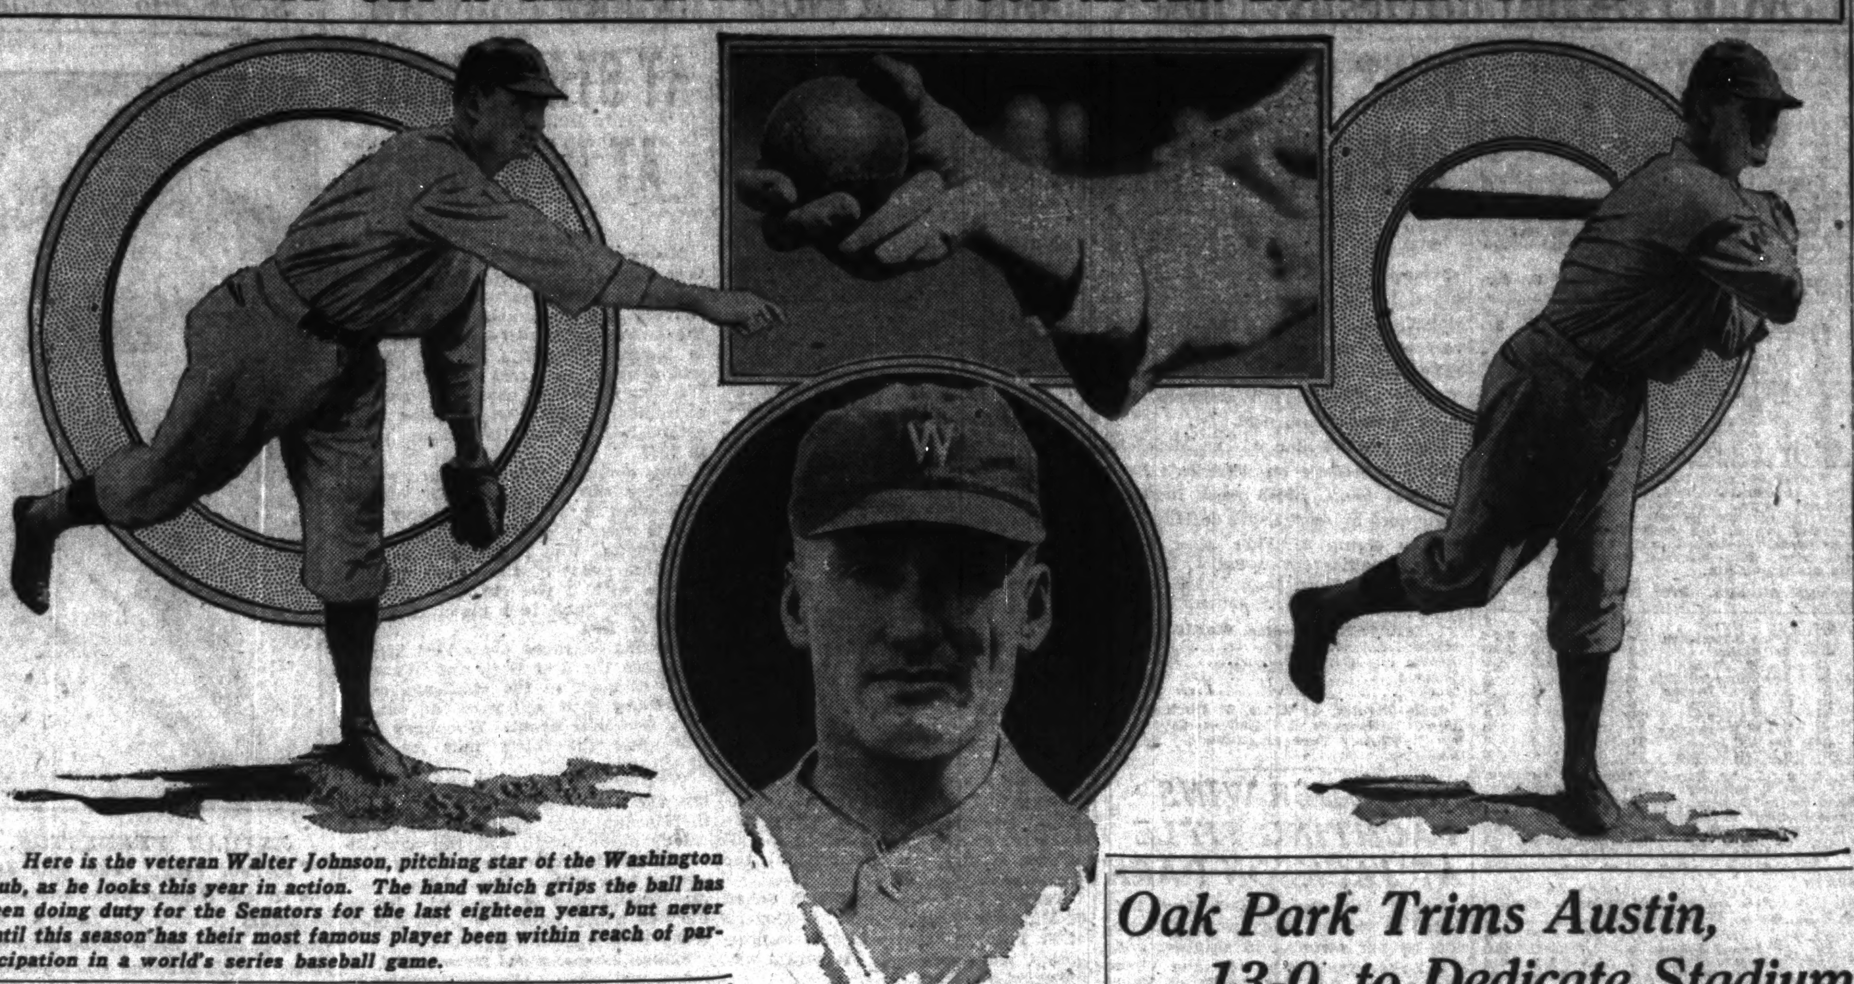
ROSE POLY EASY 65 TO 0 VICTIM OF HOOSIERS

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Indiana had an easy time with Rose Poly and defeated the Engineers, 65 to 0, before a crowd of 5,000 in the season's curtain raiser. Coach Bill Ingram started the game with his regulars, but withdrew them after the first period, after they had scored 15 points. The second team was sent in and made a touchdown in the second quarter. The first string outfit went back in in the fourth period and piled up 44 points. Rose Poly showed lack of experience and was handicapped by a scarcity of reserves.

HE MAY GET A CHANCE AT THE DOUGH AFTER EIGHTEEN YEARS



Here is the veteran Walter Johnson, pitching star of the Washington club, as he looks this year in action. The hand which grips the ball has been doing duty for the Senators for the last eighteen years, but never until this season has their most famous player been within reach of participation in a world's series baseball game.

Harmeson Scores Twice as Purdue Swamps Wabash, 21-7

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 27.—[Special]—Jimmy Phelan's Purdue football eleven defeated the Wabash college team here today, 21 to 7, in the opening game of the season for both grid squads. In 1923 Purdue and Wabash tied in the annual battle, while in 1922 the Little Giants returned to Crawfordsville with the long end of the score.

Harold Harmeson, Don Monroe and Bruno Merkobrad were outstanding backs for Purdue, Harmeson scoring two of Purdue's touchdowns and making good three attempts at try for point after touchdown. Don Monroe's forward passes were excellent, although his receivers were on the job all of the time.

Forky Elliot, Wabash end, and Hobson, Little Giant fullback, looked best for the visitors. Weber picked up a fumble and ran for the Wabash score. Purdue scored early in the contest as did Wabash and the half ended with the score, Purdue 7; Wabash 7. Purdue braced in the second half and did some great playing, using Merkobrad and Harmeson on end run plays, and Bahr and Monroe on line plunges. The Boilermakers scored two touchdowns in the last half, one of them just a few minutes before the end of the game. Lineup:

MAROON SQUAD LOOKS WEAK IN PRACTICE GAME

If yesterday's practice game, between two selected teams from the University of Chicago grid squad, can be taken as an indication of the prowess of the Maroons through the season, their hopes should not run high. Under fire, the players failed to show the excellence in offense which was in evidence during the previous scrimmaging and certainly were no more expert than formerly on defense.

The red clad team, led by Capt. Franklin Gowdy of the varsity, won the tilt, staged before 3,000 University of Chicago student spectators, the score being 3 to 2. Felice Caruso, the diminutive half back of the red team booted the field goal which counted the three points in the third quarter. The blue clad warriors' tally came as a result of a safety, registered by Jean Francis immediately after the kick off which followed Caruso's drop kick. Francis fell on the ball and rolled with it across his own goal line.

PURPLE WINDS UP WEEK WITH STIFF WORKOUT

Northwestern university gridiron candidates wound up two weeks of practice yesterday with a short, stiff workout that was made up largely of rudimentary drill. The session was staged under the direction of Assistant Coach Uteritz, who had the men fagged out when the exercise was finished.

Uteritz was placed in charge of the workout yesterday because of the absence of Head Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite. It was whispered about the campus that he was out scouting on one of the foes that the Purple is scheduled to face this fall.

BOWEN IS BEATEN BY CEDAR RAPIDS

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Bowen High of Chicago lost to Cedar Rapids today, 15 to 6, in a mud battle which made good football impossible. Victory for the Tigers never was in doubt and in the first half they were repeatedly threatening the Bowen goal line, losing the ball several times in the shadow of the goal post.

Bowen's score was made on a fake play with right tackle Smietanka taking the ball and racing forty yards to the 3 yard line from where McGowan scored. Cedar Rapids scored a safety in the second quarter and a touchdown in each of the third and fourth quarters.

Chicago Prep Stars to Enter Harvard University

Vernon Blanchett, former Hyde Park High school basketball player, who was a member of the University of Chicago freshman squad last season; Lester Johnson, captain of the Wendell Phillips five, runners-up for the city championship, and Dennis Simpson and Ruben Spears, both members of the Phillips team, left Friday for Washington, D. C., where they will enter Howard university.

Coach Stagg to Speak at City Club Luncheon

Coach A. A. Stagg of University of Chicago will speak on "The Football Rules" at a Football Round Table luncheon of the City Club of Chicago at the City club tomorrow. This is the first of a series of Monday noon Football Round Tables to be held at the City club throughout the 1924 season.

FOOTBALL WILL OPEN OFFICIALLY SATURDAY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

After three weeks or more of intensive training and the playing of a few struggles yesterday, the 1924 football season will officially open on Saturday, when every university and college eleven of importance in the country will engage in contests, some of which should furnish an idea of the strength of the probable sectional championship contenders.

For the most part the coaches know the players who will compose the varsity elevens. These have been selected after long and strenuous scrimmage drills. No partiality has been shown in the choosing of the teams which will contend for sectional honors. Places have been won on their merits and if even the captains fail to play up to expectations they may be replaced by better players. Such cases have happened in former years and this season may be no exception.

Big Games in Midwest.

In the middle west the clash between Illinois and Nebraska at Lincoln will absorb all attention, although the contest between Chicago and Missouri on the former's gridiron will command its share of interest. Illinois, which tied with Michigan last year for Big Ten honors, is expected to be put to the test by the Cornhuskers, one of the strongest in the Missouri Valley conference since Fred Dawson, the former Princeton athlete, has been head gridiron mentor.

This year's Nebraska eleven will be much heavier than Illinois, but the speed of the Orange and Blue backs is expected to offset this handicap. While the standing of neither eleven will be seriously affected by the result, the game should go a long away toward fitting the elevens for the important struggles in their respective sections. It should be one of the most interesting battles of the year, as each team will extend itself to win.

Chicago, which is an unknown quantity, may have some trouble to win from Missouri. The Tigers, as Missouri is known in the Missouri valley, will cross the Mississippi river determined to take the measure of a team which year in and year out is among the strongest in the western conference.

First Big Ten Clash.

Purdue and Ohio State, however, have the rare distinction of being the first western conference elevens to clash. This struggle will be decided at Columbus and the winner naturally eliminated from all consideration as a championship contender. Both have shown strong possibilities during the strenuous practice season and it will be the first game of the year for the Buckeyes and the second for the Boilermakers.

Wisconsin, after opening its season against North Dakota yesterday, will tackle the Iowa State eleven, generally known as Ames, at Madison. The Badgers are expected to be a strong contender for honors this year, but Ames is sure to give them a battle, for part of the game at least.

Minnesota, which must be considered the dark horse of the conference, will engage North Dakota in its opening contest. Coach Bill Spaulding has some players of know ability on this year's squad and if they come through as expected, Minnesota will make a strong bid for the honors. Coach Spaulding developed a strong eleven last season, one which held Wisconsin to a scoreless tie, but lost to Michigan.

South Dakota Invades Evanston.

South Dakota will be Northwestern's opponent at Evanston. The Purple has better prospects than a year ago and under the able tutelage of Glen Thistlethwaite should make a much more creditable showing than the team of last season. It is understood South Dakota will be represented by an experienced eleven and if such is the case, the Purple will be pressed all the way.

Indiana, after clashing with Rose Poly yesterday, will take on De Pauw at Bloomington. "Navy Bill" Ingram, head mentor at the Hoosier institution, has been developing his team in a quiet manner. He is being assisted by Sundstrom, the star tackle on Cornell last year and who was an all-American selection.

In the east, interest will center around the opening games which involve the larger elevens. Yale will take the field for the first time this year against North Carolina at New Haven, while Harvard will open with Virginia at Cambridge. The Blue and Crimson elevens, according to reports, have enough veterans back in harness to warrant strong teams.

Moderwell, president of the board of education; William McAndrew, superintendent of the public schools; Willis McFeely, president of Oak Park; Henry Struble, president of River Forest, and William Pettigrew, president of Oak Park-River Forest board of education. KALAMAZOO HIGH HOLDS LINDBLOM TO 0 TO 0 TIE

In a game featured by some spectacular playing by individuals of both teams, the football elevens representing Kalamazoo High school of Michigan and Lindblom struggled to a scoreless tie yesterday afternoon at White City park.

Both teams, Lindblom especially, had splendid opportunities to score but poor judgment in the selection of plays prevented possible points. Such is to be expected in the high school ranks so early in the season, and, on the whole, the lads played a pleasing game of football.

Lindblom Errs.

In the opening quarter, Lindblom, aided by a strong south wind, rushed the oval inside the visitors' 10 yard line. With seven yards to gain on a fourth down, an off tackle play was attempted instead of a field goal or forward pass. At the time the team was squarely in front of the post and the wind at its back, perfect conditions for a place or drop kick.

At the end of the second quarter the locals lost the ball on downs on Kalamazoo's 1 yard line just as time was called. A little better judgment in the selection of plays at this time and the calling of time out to talk over the situation might have changed the result of an interesting game.

Kazoo Misses Chance.

In the third quarter, Kalamazoo took the ball to Lindblom's 5 yard line after a series of straight plays and a long forward pass. The Wolverine eleven then tried a field goal after three ground gaining attempts had failed to make much headway. The effort went wide of its mark and went as a touchback. Outside of these three scoring opportunities, the game was staged between the two 20 yard lines.

Lindblom, coached by E. L. Moore, showed a nice line attack varied by some effective off tackle formations. It showed the results of excellent coaching and will improve as the season wears on. Kalamazoo also exhibited a pleasing offense and a strong defense. The team will improve with the playing of more games and plainly shows it has possibilities.

Maher was Lindblom's ground gaining ace, while Halton, Decker, and Black did most of the offensive work for the visitors, while Capt. Westgate of the same team played a strong defensive game. About 3000 enthusiastic high school rooters saw the game.

MARSH SHOOTING FOR RAILS.

September finds the rails in the marshes and the gunner who wants a little easy shooting after a tough couple of hours trying to hit the crazy, erratic flying jacksnipe will find the slow flying rails nothing less than a cinch.

The sora, king and other rails are a mighty interesting group of birds. In the middle west sportsmen as a rule do not pay a great deal of attention to them, but in the east rails and reed birds are quite eagerly sought after when the marshes turn brown and the birds come down from the north. Closely related to the coots or mudhens and the gallinules, the rails are true marsh lovers and the heavier the vegetation the better they like it. Next time you are in a marsh where cattails, tall grass and other vegetation is growing, take a little circle through it and you will very likely put up a short winged, dark brown bird with a feeble fluttering flight. It will fly but a short distance before it drops to the tall grass as if it were exhausted. That's the way these rails perform so they offer easy shots for gunners.

Last fall, while sitting in a crudely made duck blind in Wisconsin (waiting for some teal and mallards to show up), we found plenty of amusement watching the sora rails feeding within a few feet of our canoe. Sitting motionless in our craft, the dainty birds, which are just about eight inches long, did not notice us as they poked around among the cattails looking for food. With their compressed heads and bodies they were able to thread their way in dense vegetation without causing a single stalk or a blade of grass to quiver.

PRO GRIDDERS OPEN SEASON HERE TODAY

Pennant campaigning in the National Football league officially starts today, when the powerful Chicago Cardinals, piloted by Capt. Paddy Driscoll, tackle the Milwaukee Badgers in the inaugural at Normal park, 61st street and South Racine avenue. The kickoff is scheduled for 2:30.

Driscoll, idol of the Chicago football followers, is back at the top of his form and completely recovered from injuries sustained last fall. Among the outstanding newcomers to the Cardinal squad are Bill McElwain, former captain and backfield star of the Northwestern team; Hanke, a flanker from Minnesota, and Munger, a Yale tackle.

The Badgers will present a lineup numbering several gridiron greats from all sections of the country. Red Dunn, last season's quarter back and captain at Marquette, makes his first appearance on a local battlefield, while other notables in the invading contingent are Jimmy Conzelman, Washington U., Weller, famous tackle from Nebraska, and Larson, a Notre Dame center. The lineup will be:

TALENT TRIMMED AT AURORA WHEN GO FOIN FLASHES

BY FRENCH LANE.

Aurora, Ill., Sept. 27.—[Special.]—The overthrow of the famous old sprinter, Dr. Hickman, by the 7 to 1 shot, Go Foin from Missouri, made deep dents in the bank rolls of the players at the Fox River Valley race track here today.

A large crowd had gathered, and about 90 per cent of the folks went to Dr. Hickman when the speculation opened in the Palm Garden. They not only watched their money flicker away by the old Doctor's defeat, but also witnessed the breaking of a track record, for to conquer Hickman, Go Foin had to step five and a half furlongs in 1:06. It was a fifth of a second better than the mark made by the same Dr. Hickman a little more than a week ago.

Cheers Change to Shrieks.

The racegoers let loose with a mighty shout when Dr. Hickman forced his way to the front a sixteenth out. They kept shouting even while Go Foin pulled up on even strides with him on the first turn, but when the Missouri 3 year old continued to race him stride for stride around the turn and then shoved his nose in the lead as they headed into the stretch, it was a shriek of alarm that came from the stands.

After surrendering the lead, Hickman was shaken up by Jockey Bell, and still had enough left to make a brilliant challenge in the last half furlong, but he was never quite equal to the record speed that was sending Go Foin into more and more of a lead, and was finally beaten by a length, with Moss Fox a length back of the Doctor in third place.

Another Favorite Beaten.

The 2 year old contest which opened the program was the only other allowance affair on the card, and it brought out a battle that rivaled the feature race when Doc. McMahon scored a head decision over Modesto. Parnell had been rated as the favorite, but was always out of the running. It was strictly a contest between the two leaders, with Kosman quite a ways back in third place at the wire.

A victory by Tony Barrett's high priced Ponjola marked the running of the second, which brought eleven campaigners into the contention at the six furlong route. Ponjola triumphed in another thrilling finish by the slimmest of margins from Little Smoke and Arrowhead. The latter closed a big gap and was probably running fastest at the finish.

Punters Win on Rapid Stride.

When Rapid Stride came with a belated rush to win the third, it partly made up for the loss suffered by the punters on Dr. Hickman, for the aged gelding had also been supported extensively in the few minutes preceding post time. His victory was the easiest of the afternoon, for he fairly cantered home ahead of Dr. Sisk and War Winner.

Two favorites came along to grab the last two races, Diomed getting the verdict in the fifth, and Eelman in the sixth. There was a downpour of rain between the running of these two events, and the track was slippery when the bugle sounded for the good-night number, but Eelman found the going just to his liking and had no trouble beating out Eddie Jr. and Little Ed, which finished next to him.

INTRUDER WINS YACHTING TITLE AT JACKSON PARK

Yacht Intruder, which has been sailed to victory many times this season by her owner and skipper, John O'Rourke, yesterday won the championship of the Jackson Park Yacht club, defeating the Columbia, owned and skipped by Hal Redmon, runner-up in the series of races which were held throughout the summer.

Intruder finished the 10 mile triangular course, which starts from the Jackson park harbor, in 1:08:33, while Columbia's time was 1:11:50. The time allowance to the Redmon yacht cut this lead down to 1 minute and 4 seconds.

In addition to the club championship the match race also gives the winner possession for one year of the Bennett cup, which Intruder has held for the last year. The cup, given by Commodore Bennett, is one of the historic properties of the club. It has been in competition since 1905.

Intruder's crew consisted of W. P. Whalen, Art Reiman, Eddie O'Rourke and John O'Rourke the skipper. On the Columbia were E. A. Peck, R. Miller, Charlie Caulkie, Irving Rinker and Hal Redmon, the skipper.

RACING CROWNS AT STAKE TODAY AT HAWTHORNE

New racing cars will be seen for the first time today in the midwest title events at the Hawthorne race track. Drivers with two special cars from the factory of the Chevrolet Brothers in Indianapolis and a Ricardo Special will attempt to wrest the title from Woodbury and Wenneston, present champions. The championships were established at the Hawthorne track in 1923.

Two championship races are scheduled for this afternoon. The fifteen mile event is for light and heavy cars and is open to cars of all piston displacements. The thirty mile race is the final event of the afternoon and carries with it the championship for cars of 200 cubic inch piston displacement or less.

The match races are added attractions. In the first Beck and Wenneston will meet in the challenge race. Woodbury then will race the winner in a five mile event. Woodbury also will enter the thirty mile race for light cars.

With Woodbury, Beck and Wenneston, Chicago's leading drivers, entered in this final race against Louis Chevrolet's star drivers and the new Ricardo Special with its revolutionary motor, fans will see one of the great dirt track races of the year. Woodbury is going after the prize money today with three racing cars.

Lillian Boyer, world famous girl acrobat, will make a change from speeding car to plane. She also will drop from a plane to the lagoon in the center of the oval in a parachute. Rain checks from previous races at Hawthorne this year should be used today.

A special train will leave over the Illinois Central from the Randolph street station at 1:30 o'clock. It will make all stops on the way to the track.

100 EXPECTED TO RUN MARATHON

At least a hundred marathon runners will face the starter at the ten mile road race to be held on Sunday, Oct. 19, under the auspices of the Twenty-Fourth ward regular Democratic organization. In addition to the large number of entry blanks for this event that have been mailed to every athletic organization in the central states, Harry Berz, who is in charge of the race, has received requests from unattached runners asking for blanks and information.

A "victory trophy" has been donated by Mitchell C. Robin. There will be a prize for every runner finishing. A survey of the course for next month's race has been made and a special trophy offered to the winner should he lower the record. Entries will close Oct. 14 and entry blanks may be secured from Harry Berz, 1235 South Avers avenue.

He won the 5-mile preliminary for light cars, beating Ed Wenneston by less than a car length, and then got out in front of the field in the 15-mile final and stayed there, in spite of being challenged a dozen times on every lap by both Wenneston and Noreke Larson, who was driving Cliff Woodbury's old car. The time for this race was 13:03 1-5, breaking the old mark of 13:18.

Cliff Woodbury set a record for five miles, beating the record holder, Lee Allen, by several car lengths in a special match race. Summaries:

LAPANNEN AND STEINKE SIGN FOR GO ON MAT

Hans Steinke, the giant German grappler, who has not figured conspicuously in mat circles since he defeated Stanislaus Zbyszko in a one fall match at the stockyards last winter, and Charley Lapannen, the Finn, yesterday were matched to meet in a finish bout at the Coliseum on Oct. 8.

The match was closed by Promoter Joe Coffey and according to conditions they will meet on a winner and loser's basis. The victor will take down 65 per cent of the purse while 35 per cent will go to the loser. Lapannen wanted to meet the Dutchman on a winner take all basis, but Hans refused. Steinke also wanted a winner determined by one fall, but his opponent and Promoter Coffey refused to listen to this demand. Rather than lose the match and the coin which will go with it, Steinke signed the articles.

The matter of a referee will be taken up later, but the principals already have agreed to break at the command of the referee who will be sole judge as to who is on the offensive when they go off the mat. At present both want the man who is underneath to take that position in the center of the ring.

JUNIOR GOLFERS TO DISPLAY GAME FOR ASSOCIATION

HOLE-IN-ONE CLUB

PROF. GILBERT A. BLISS of the University of Chicago joined the Hole-in-One club at Olympia Fields on the fifteenth hole of course No. 2 when he shot an ace.

While more than seventy applications for membership in the recently organized Illinois Juniors' Golf association have been received, the membership committee of the organization has decided not to act on them until the players have been seen in action.

For this purpose, a preliminary event has been scheduled next Saturday at the Big Oaks club, 6600 Lawrence avenue, President Ambrose Krier having placed the course at the disposal of the juniors. The players, however, must finish their round before noon.

The association has under consideration a plan to classify the players in three divisions; from 18 to 21 in the first, 16 to 18 in the second, and 15 to 16 in the third. The preliminary round will determine whether this plan is feasible. Later in the month the first championship tournament will be held. Applications for membership will be received at room 765 Insurance Exchange.

GREENLEAF SIGNS TO PLAY IN THIS YEAR'S CUE RACE

Champion Ralph Greenleaf yesterday signed his contract with the National Championship Pocket Billiard league for the season of 1924-25. As Greenleaf was about the only holdout in this organization all cities are now represented and regular schedules will be announced in a day or two.

Where will R. L. Cannefax, the national three cushion billiard champion go now? This question is being asked following the announcement that the Recreation company of Detroit had signed G. L. Copulos in his place.

Franchise seekers in Chicago, New York, Pittsburgh, and Buffalo, are bidding for his services. The only hitch is that he wants more money than any of them yet have shown a willingness to pay.

Pierre Maupome is playing scratch in the big handicap tournament now in progress at the Jackson Boulevard room, being penalized sixty points while Count Von Mittelman has the lowest handicap, playing only twelve points.

President B. E. Benzinger of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company has returned from a summer's stay in Europe and soon there will be an announcement made as to the arrangement for this year's International 18.2 balk line tournament.

G. L. Copulos, who will represent the big recreation room at Detroit this year, is the youngest player in the National Championship Three Cushion Billard league. He started his billiard career in 1914 as an amateur in the Auto City.

Richard L. Forrey of Evanston, amateur three cushion billard champion of Illinois, yesterday proudly exhibited his silver trophy, the gift of the Illinois Billard association. Having won the trophy three times in succession it now becomes the permanent property of Forrey.

Girls Break World Relay Mark at Electric Meet

A new world's record for the quarter mile relay race, run by girls under 16 years of age, was chalked up at the Western Electric Memorial field yesterday by Tom Eck's latest assembly of fair young contenders. Flying along in perfect form in one of the special events that marked the annual meet of the Western Electric employés in Chicago, Norma Zilk, Catherine Cusack, Dorothy Smith and Nellie Todd swept around the furlong track in 56 4-5 seconds, a full second under the old world's mark.

In the twenty-two events, closed to Western Electric personnel, four new Hawthorne records were placed on the books. How the Long Life of Reo Limits Sales

The Sedan
REO
$1985
at Lansing

THE used car situation this year emphasizes sharply how the long life of the Reo penalizes manufacturer's sales and benefits the owner.

The biggest single factor in the automobile market today is that the people want new cars for old.

Generally the reason why they want to trade is that they want something better than they have.

The number of relatively new used cars advertised in the daily press is, therefore, very large.

But the number of used Reos advertised is very small; those offered are generally old; and in addition they are almost invariably offered by a Reo dealer.

There are three causes for these conditions, and every one shows how the extraordinarily long life of the Reo penalizes the manufacturer's sales and benefits the Reo owner.

The three reasons

First, the number of used Reos traded in each year is a relatively small proportion of those in use, because the Reo owner feels for an unusual number of years that "something new" wouldn't give him something better.

Practically every Reo owner thinks his Reo is the best Reo ever built. Consequently he is loath to give it up.

The famous Reo sturdiness and value minimize both depreciation and upkeep costs.

Second, the few Reos that are traded in are generally four, six, and even ten years old—because the cost of running a Reo remains level for a long term of years.

When they finally are turned in for new ones, it is generally because the owner wants the beautiful lines of a new Reo.

Thirdly, the used Reos are almost invariably offered by a Reo dealer because of the condition expressed by the common saying, "once a Reo owner always a Reo owner."

But the Reo owner keeps each of his purchases for so many years that he buys fewer cars during his lifetime than those who have the habit of buying less long-lived cars.

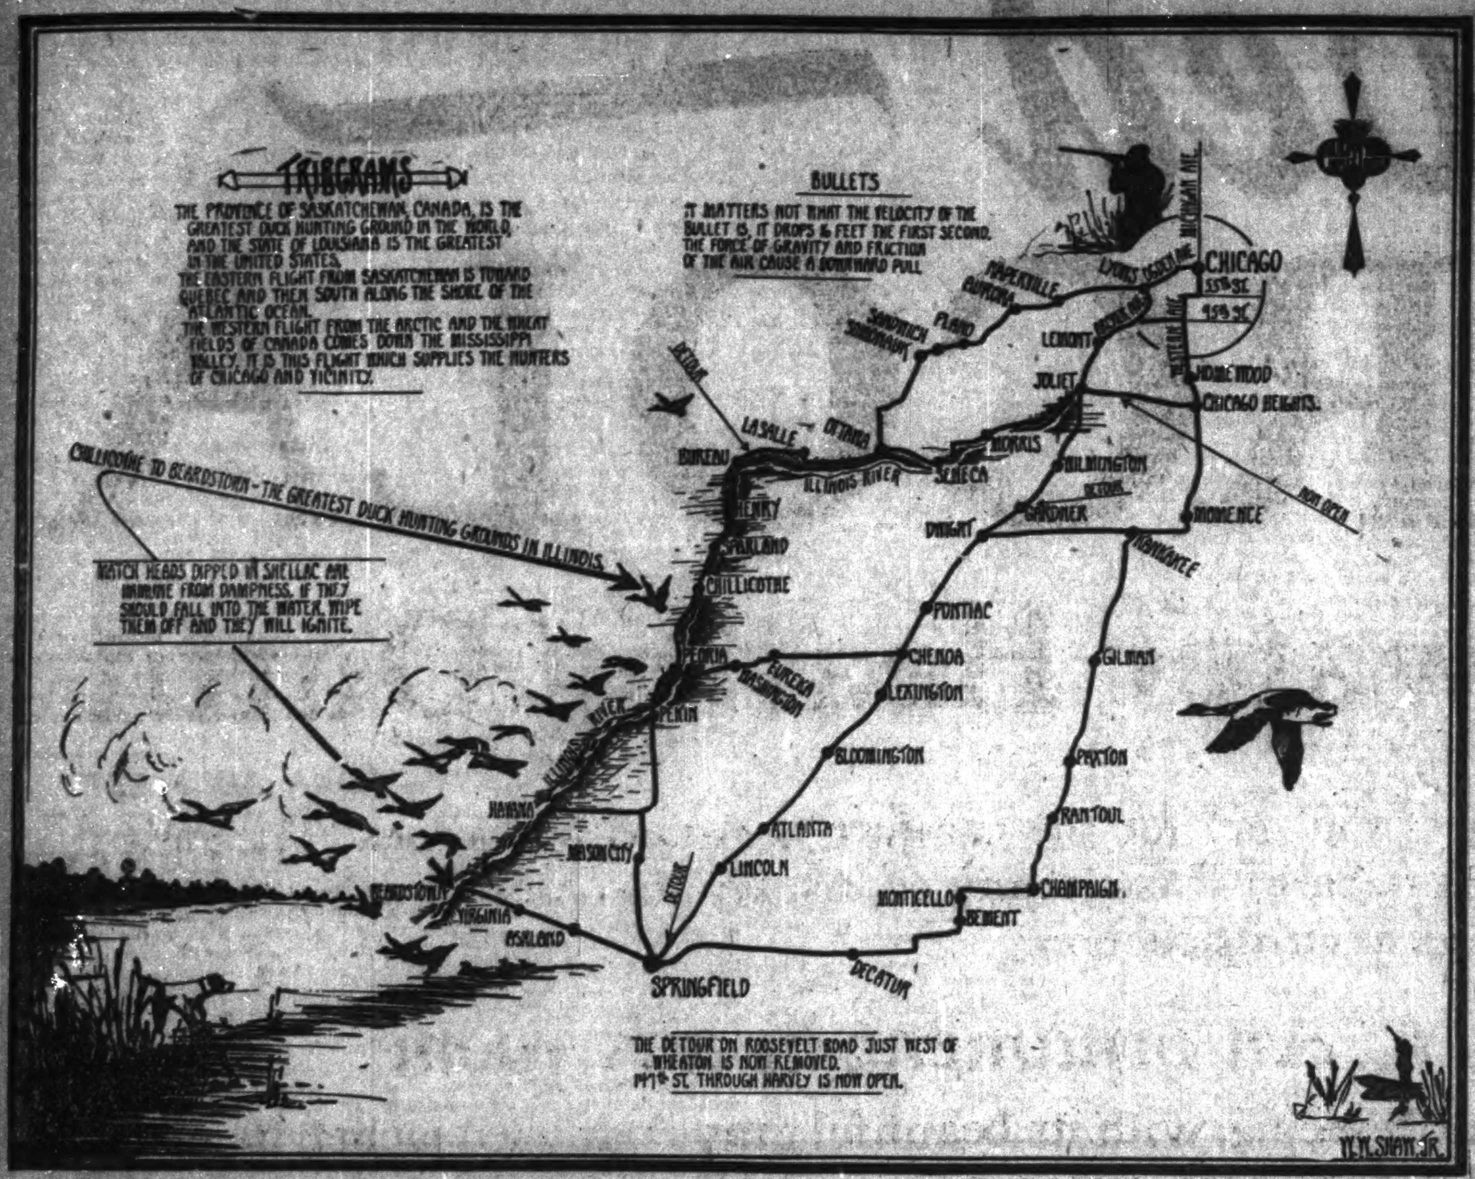
XXIV.—HUNTERS' TRAILS IN ILLINOIS



TRIBGRAMS

THE PROVINCE OF SASKATCHEWAN, CANADA, IS THE GREATEST DUCK HUNTING GROUND IN THE WORLD, AND THE STATE OF LOUISIANA IS THE GREATEST IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE EASTERN FLIGHT FROM SASKATCHEWAN IS TOWARD QUEBEC AND THEN SOUTH ALONG THE SHORE OF THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

THE WESTERN FLIGHT FROM THE ARCTIC AND THE WHEAT FIELDS OF CANADA COMES DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY. IT IS THIS FLIGHT WHICH SUPPLIES THE HUNTERS OF CHICAGO AND VICINITY.

BULLETS

IT MATTERS NOT WHAT THE VELOCITY OF THE BULLET IS, IT DROPS 16 FEET THE FIRST SECOND. THE FORCE OF GRAVITY AND FRICTION OF THE AIR CAUSE A DOWNWARD PULL

CHILLICOTHE TO BEARDSTOWN—THE GREATEST DUCK HUNTING GROUNDS IN ILLINOIS.

MATCH HEADS DIPPED IN SHELLAC ARE IMMUNE FROM DAMPNESS. IF THEY SHOULD FALL INTO THE WATER, WIPE THEM OFF AND THEY WILL IGNITE.

THE DETOUR ON ROOSEVELT ROAD JUST WEST OF WHEATON IS NOW REMOVED.
147TH ST. THROUGH HARVEY IS NOW OPEN.

RIBBONS of concrete now link Chicago with the best duck hunting grounds in Illinois, and the motor sportsman will find any number of attractive highway options this season in his fall quest for birds.

The natural course of the fall flight is south and west through Illinois along the Illinois river valley. Summer rains this year caused a number of washouts in the pavement from La Salle south to Pekin, and the old Spring Valley detour on this Chicago-Peoria highway will continue to interrupt traffic this fall and winter. The road can be negotiated, however, and all repair work is reported well along.

The map indicates other paved options into the Beardstown district, all of them in perfect condition.

Misleading Ammeter.

With the ignition switch off, ampere gauges sometimes show a discharge when no discharge is there. The way to determine whether or not there is a discharge is to disconnect the wires between the generator and the gauge, and if the indicator remains stationary and does not point back to zero, it proves that there is no discharge. Inaccurate adjustment of the ampere meter is to blame, but once having determined no discharge there is nothing to worry about.

VEHICLES INCREASE.

There are now thirty-seven states in the union which individually have from 100,000 to more than 1,000,000 motor vehicles, five more than there were at this time last year.

Destroyer of Engines.

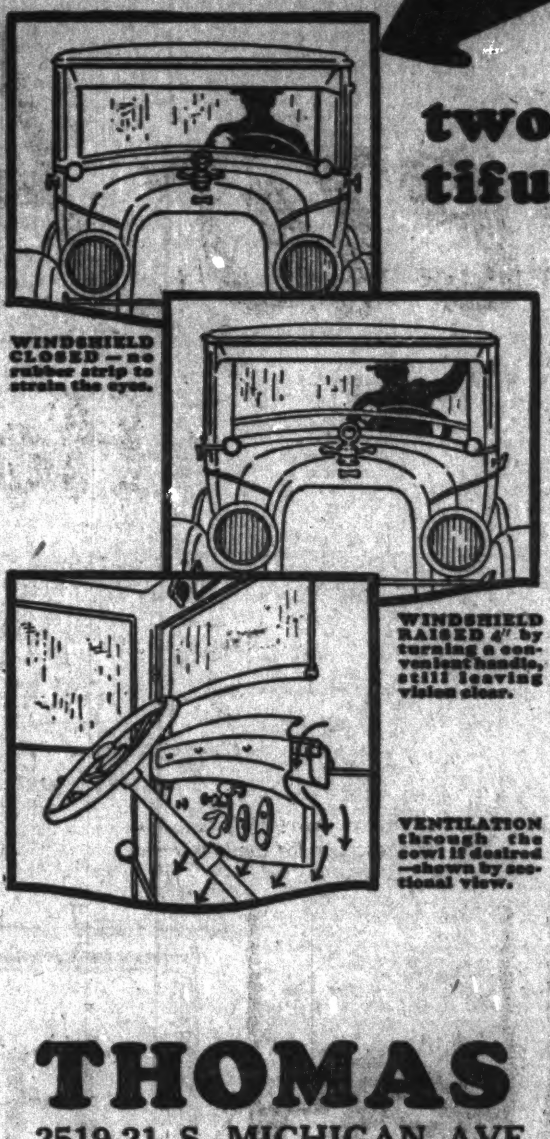
Carbon destroys far more motor wealth annually than fire and accidents combined, yet its destructive work is regarded as ordinary wear and tear. Tests made by treating fuel with noncarbon forming compounds have proved that engines properly lubricated can run forever with practically no wear and tear. Carbon counter agents should be mixed with the gasoline.

NO NOISE.

Noiseless motorcycles have been designed in England. The engine is completely inclosed, also the chain transmission. The frame is triangular and of a new design, giving great strength and rigidity at low weight.

This Advance

in closed car design is a feature of two new, superbly beautiful Chandler Sedans.



WINDSHIELD CLOSED—no rubber strip to strain the eyes.

WINDSHIELD RAISED 4" by turning a convenient handle, still leaving vision clear.

VENTILATION through the cowl if desired—shown by sectional view.

THE diagrams at the left show why the V.V. Windshield ranks as a really radical improvement in closed car construction.

This is one of the notable features on the new Chandler Sedans—The Metropolitan Sedan DeLuxe and the Chummy Sedan.

To their rich, impressive beauty it adds elements of convenience and safety unknown to any other windshield types.

It slides up and down instead of tilting—has no rubber strip to strain the eyes or leak air and water—operates by a convenient handle, and can be quickly and easily adjusted for full ventilation or ventilation through the cowl.

Although moderately priced these models satisfy every requisite of comfort and beauty, and still afford that masterly performance which has won world-wide fame for the Chandler chassis with its Pikes Peak Motor and Traffic Transmission.

(The Traffic Transmission is built complete in the Chandler plant under Campbell patents.)

Maxwell is One of the Staunchest Cars Built Today

At all vital points, you will find that metals and construction of the good Maxwell are the same as in cars costing three to four times as much.

In proportion to its weight and power, it is actually stronger than the most expensive cars built today.

That's a big thing for us to be able to say about a car of the good Maxwell price; and it is one of the Chrysler superiorities that put Maxwell so far ahead of its own field.

Yet it is only one of the sound, fundamental superiorities which make us proud to be factors in its production. You have probably heard about Maxwell pick-up—how in a flat 8 seconds, it accelerates from 5 to 25 miles an hour.

You are also probably acquainted with the fact that the simple device of a platform spring under the front end of the motor, combined with the balancing of reciprocating parts to the fraction of an ounce, practically eliminates any sense of vibration.

Are you aware, however, that all the way through the Maxwell chassis, you find chrome nickel or other high grade alloy steel for those parts which must stand heavy stress and strain—just as in cars of highest price?

The front axle, and all the parts on which depends the control of the car, are almost unreasonably over-strong.

A bull-dog for powerful pulling—this car; but it can't pull too hard for transmission and rear axle.

The steering knuckles, and the king pins upon which they turn, are of chrome nickel steel, heat-treated.

The thoroughness of good Maxwell strength is well illustrated by the frame, which is unusually deep, and braced by six stout cross members.

Good Maxwell strength, in a word, is a match for Maxwell performance and dependability.

All these are a part of that complete and unusual goodness which scores of thousands of owners declare makes the good Maxwell the most care-free and economical motor car they have ever possessed.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan.

An American Radiator in each room

IDEAL ARCOLA Heating Outfit is a central heating plant for small dwellings. Set in the living room or dining room, and connected by small pipes with an American Radiator in each room, ARCOLA keeps the whole house at even, healthful warmth.

Saves more than it costs

Science has gone the limit in designing the new ARCOLA to give the most heat at the least cost. It will pay back its first cost in the fuel it saves in a few years. Each year thereafter, it will put into your pocket money that would otherwise go into the fire. ARCOLA is a real investment in better warmth.

Saves time and steps

With surprisingly little fuel, the new ARCOLA almost runs itself—thanks to its wonderful new system of self-regulation. No running up and down stairs to shut or open the dampers. No trouble and care and worry. No dust or dirt. But maximum comfort with minimum attention.

As cheery as an open fire

Through ARCOLA's pyrex-glass door panels the hot coals glow with the genial friendliness of an open fire. And its glistening gray enameled jacket can be cleaned like fine china.

Scout Car Brings Home Picture of Northwest Tours

Big Improvement Found Along Popular Routes.

ROAD SURVEY CAR NO 1 of the Chicago Motor club, in charge of John Graham, has returned from a 5,000 mile jaunt in the northwest and reports that highway work is progressing even in the sparsely populated states.

The car was on the road seven weeks. Starting from Chicago, the route led over the Yellowstone trail to Livingston, Mont., back over the Custer Battlefield highway to Sioux City, south to Omaha, west to Cheyenne on the Lincoln highway, south to Colorado Springs, back across Kansas and the D. L. D. route to Omaha, from this point south to Hiawatha, Kas., then over the Pikes Peak-Ocean to Ocean highway to Hannibal, Mo., and from the home of Mark Twain back into Illinois.

According to Graham's report, Montana has no system of state maintenance and the roads look it. South Dakota is doing much relocation and road straightening. Within eighteen months' time the Custer Battlefield highway will be gravel surfaced across the state.

Wyoming also is doing a great deal of road work. There are no long detours and the detours are well marked.

The $60,000,000 road bond issue recently passed in Missouri is pulling the "show me" state out of the mud gradually. There is much gravel in Nebraska and the roads are well graded.

Iowa's roads are proverbially splendid in dry weather. There is more hard road activity noticed in this state this year than ever before. However, not enough to give the tourist on a rainy day much joy.

Colorado has eliminated twenty-four railroad crossings in its relocation work. The roads in Minnesota are generally good and well marked. The roads in Kansas are mostly dirt.

The highest altitude registered by the aneroid on the survey car was 9,666 feet in the Big Horn mountains in Wyoming, and the steepest grade indicated on the gradeometer was 17 per cent, while the average mountain grade was estimated at 10 per cent.

"This may come as a surprise to many motorists who believe that they climbed 20 and 25 per cent grades," says Graham. "A 17 per cent grade is a stiff grade. The average tourist making a northwestern trip for the first time is likely to set out without enough heavy clothing. The mornings and evenings are cold and heavy coats or sweaters should be carried.

"The campers this year have among their number many people of means, those who prefer that style of touring and to whom expense is not an item to be considered. The most expensive cars made frequently pull into the tourist camps, or are seen hauling trailers. Many chauffeur driven cars are to be seen in tourist camps.

"Tourists entering Yellowstone Park are sometimes fearful that guns will be taken away from them and when they are asked if they have firearms they say they have not. Guns are sealed upon entering the park and the seal is removed when leaving. There is no charge for this service.

The Colorado state law requires motorists to stop at the first court house they come to, give their names, addresses, make of car and engine number, and then they receive a guest tag. This precaution has done much to reduce automobile thefts, for when the car of a visitor is stolen, the county officials have all the information handy and broadcast it over the state.

Saving the Clutch.

It is considered better practice not to release the clutch on down grades. Not only do you get better and safer braking power with clutch engaged, but you prevent injury to the clutch mechanism. It is better not to drive with clutch depressed unless absolutely necessary.

Imagine a Garage Required to House This Composite Car

If the material used in manufacturing motor vehicles in 1923 had been used for one huge car, here is what it would contain:

Iron and steel, 2,434,300 tons; 121,940,150 pounds of copper, 91,514,000 pounds of aluminum, 41,229,500 square feet of plate glass, 60,000,000 square feet of leather, 347,443,544 pounds of rubber, 1,163,232,000 board feet of hardwood lumber, 135,349,000 pounds of lead, 7,900 tons of tin, 6,375,000 pounds of nickel, 166,219,000 square feet of imitation leather, 19,036,000 yards upholstery cloth, 30,383,000 top and side curtain material, 40,370,000 pounds of hair and padding, and 60,000,000 feet of asbestos.

No More Garage Door Troubles

Doors STAY open—just where you want them—no matter how wet or icy the ground or cement—or how strong the wind.

Bus Rolls In to Rescue Traction Lines in Illinois

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — [Special Correspondence.]—Illinois cities, confronted with problems of unprofitable street railway operation, have in some instances decided upon a plan of unified operation of trolley cars and motor buses. In those communities where motor buses have proven to be costly competition, the trolley companies have threatened to retire from the field unless given protection. They have presented figures showing the steady decline in earnings and have charged this to the motor buses.

Decatur, faced with such a condition, was the first in Illinois to try out the unified system. The street railway corporation purchased all of the motor bus lines and was given a franchise that permitted exclusive operation of buses in conjunction with the trolley cars. The old vehicles secured when the bus companies were absorbed were junked and twenty of the latest improved type of bus purchased as substitutes. The company then, in coöperation with the city council, revised the routes of the buses, bisecting those of the trolley cars at desirable intervals, and exchanging transfers without additional charge. The rate of fare on either trolley or bus was fixed at 6 cents, or nine tickets for 50 cents. The receipts of the company have shown a steady increase month by month as compared with last year, when there was competition, while the receipts from the bus passengers is estimated as twice as much as that when there was independent operation and antiquated vehicles.

All sections of the city and suburbs are now adequately served by either trolley or bus and the city believes that it has solved the problem, while the utility company claims to show a reasonable profit upon the investment as compared with the preceding year, where there was a loss.

A similar situation exists in Streator, where the street railway company has been losing money for a number of years. The owners asked for permission to suspend operation. The city council has granted this permission, and the indorsement is now up to the Illinois commerce commission. Motor buses will immediately take the place of the trolley cars. There are some leading citizens, however, who favor the adoption of the same system which has been found so successful in Decatur, and it may be decided to give this a trial before discarding the trolley cars and tearing up the tracks, as proposed.

Popular Camp.

The motor tourist camp located in East Potomac park, near Washington, D. C., was used by 44,358 persons during the last fiscal year. Tourists are given a camp site free, but the concessionaire is permitted to charge a small fee, 25 cents per night per party, which is used to defer the expense of caring for toilets, showers, buildings, grounds around the camp sites, furnishing lights and water for toilets, baths, washing cars, and for police protection.

WORK-BENCH WISDOM

RING MYSTERY REVEALED.

BY ERWIN GREER.

THERE is nothing mysterious about piston rings used in automobile engines, even though repairmen will tell you that new rings of a certain sort will elevate your engine into some new state in which it produces twice as much power and speed as before. There is a good deal of misinformation about piston rings, and because of it automobile owners spend millions each year for such parts, in many cases getting no results from the expenditure.

Piston rings are supposed to pack the cylinder, so that the gas does not leak downward and oil upward. In order to be an ideal device it must do this without exerting too much pressure against the cylinder wall and the pressure must be evenly distributed all around. The ring must fit the cylinder perfectly; it must fit its grooves in the piston so that it will be neither too tight nor too loose.

Such piston rings will run perhaps 20,000 or 30,000 miles, but a time must come when the rings no longer make a gas tight joint. It then is necessary to find out why the rings no longer fit well. The average repair man will tell you that when wear takes place only the rings become worn, so that all that is necessary to put the engine in first class shape is to replace the piston rings. How the repair man knows is one of the mysteries of this world. The fact is that no one can tell whether the rings are worn or whether the cylinders are worn or just what the condition of these parts is unless the parts themselves are examined and measured.

This explains a great deal of the trouble owners have because so called oversize rings were installed in the cylinders. In the first place the cylinders should be made true either by grinding or some other process, and new rings obtained to fit the new bore. In this way only can one be sure of a perfect fit.

To say that new rings will lap themselves into an oval bore is wrong, for they will not, nor will new rings in worn cylinders take the shape presented by score marks or hard spots in the cylinder metal.

When your engine lacks power, when the compression is poor, when it pumps oil and uses too much fuel, it usually is a sign that the rings do not fit properly, but it is not a sign that new rings alone will cure these troubles. You must find out the condition of the cylinders into which the rings fit. This means the grooves must be trued in a lathe to the exact size of the new ring.

Parts Service.

A good idea in breaking in a new car is to drive it around to the authorized service stations which cover various parts such as tires, rims, ignition apparatus, horns, starting devices, batteries, speedometers. These are usually guaranteed by their respective manufacturers and service stations may make initial adjustments at no charge that may save you many a dollar later.

Florida Prepares for Annual Flood of Auto Visitors

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Early registrations in Florida winter resort cities indicate that approximately one-third of those who migrate from north to south each winter travel by motor car. During the late winter months, the railroads carry a larger percentage of visitors than do motor cars, but the comparison in early fall is an indication of the universal adapatability of the motor car.

There is one thing in favor of the automobile in the comparison between railroad and auto traffic, and that is travelers by automobile almost invariably carry more baggage than when they travel by train. The roads of Florida and other southern states are crowded with heavily laden motor cars, carrying everything but the family cat and canary.

The influx of thousands of cars each winter creates a real traffic problem for many winter resort cities. St. Petersburg has adopted automatic light systems for traffic control on and crossing Central avenue, its main business thoroughfare, and parking is restricted to one hour from November to May.

The automobile plays an important part in activities at the winter playgrounds of the south, and thousands of winter residents either drive or ship their cars for use during the winter months. Good roads in the state of Florida make it possible to enjoy a number of motor tours through the state, and the road building program of the state, as carried out by counties, will provide a network of fine highways covering all of Florida within a short time.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to N. Hall, Polar Ice company, Evanston, Ill.

The Question.

What would you suggest as the best fall motor tour?

Where Asked.

Tower garage, Chicago avenue, east of Michigan.

The Answers.

A. G. Miller, 809 Leland avenue, student—I think the best fall tour on tap is up through central Michigan—Jackson, Kalamazoo, Lansing, and over to Detroit. Good roads run through that district. They are well marked and the country is full of little lakes and beautiful scenery. The woods are at their best in the fall months and hotel and camping accommodations are good.

Isadore Schulman, 4844 North Sawyer avenue, garage worker—Wisconsin offers the best touring in the fall. The roads, gravel and earth, in the northern part of the state, are at their best, and most of the tourists have gone home. Wisconsin is the easiest state to reach from Chicago. The main roads are paved to the north.

George Niles, 1131 Rush street, mechanic—The best tour I can think of is one down to Washington, D. C., and around to take in the world series games. The roads are all paved to Washington if you go by way of Indianapolis and Wheeling, and the weather at this time of year is perfect. A trip down to Atlantic City would be the best way to finish up the tour.

James Shears, 1340 North Dearborn, manager—The best fall tour is a trip to Florida, just before the big movement starts to the south. Roads are usually better in the south at this time than later in the year, and accommodations are better. I do not care for northern stuff in the fall. The weather is too uncertain.

William Thorne, 7040 Eggleston avenue, chauffeur—My suggestion is a fall trip to Colorado. Mountain scenery is at its best in the autumn and Colorado is wonderful at this time. The roads are usually better in September and October than during mid-summer, and the weather should hold good for the two months.

Weak Condenser.

Condenser or coil should be replaced if weak. Don't wait till you're caught on a rainy night ten miles from the nearest garage.

Use of Gas.

Ninety-nine per cent of all the motor vehicles operated in the United States are propelled by gasoline engines.

Auto Maker Gives Eleven Keys to Traffic Safety

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 27.—Eleven ways by which the daily toll of traffic accidents can be stopped were outlined by George M. Graham, chairman of the traffic planning and safety committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, speaking at the convention of the International Association of Casualty and Surety Underwriters here.

The speaker proposed that through revocation of licenses, jail sentences and impounding of the car for a period depending on the gravity of the offense, the operator convicted of recklessness resulting in serious injury or death should be made to realize that highways are open only to those who can use them lawfully.

The platform of points presented was as follows: Accurate statistics, frequently presented; community organization, through various kinds of publicity; education of the child; education of the adult pedestrian; educating the driver; developing standardized signals; adequate protection of grade crossings; city planning for future needs; highway designing, such as banking of curves; coöperative organizations, stimulating and supporting official efforts; vigorous punishment for traffic offenders.

We Ask You To Say Which Is Best

IT IS CONCEDED by the most eminent authorities, that this Rickenbacker "Vertical-8-Superfine" is one of the three best cars in America—and that is the same as saying, in the world.

OF COURSE EACH of the makers of the three outstanding examples of sound engineering and fine workmanship, would claim that his is best of all.

NATURALLY WE BELIEVE that this Rickenbacker product is entitled to that distinction.

BECAUSE WE BELIEVE, it represents the broadest experience and most advanced ideas in design, while the shop-practice under which it is made is second to none.

MATERIALS AND WORKMANSHIP that go into the fabrication of this "Vertical-8-Superfine" are the best the world affords. That is a fact easily proven.

BUT THE FINAL RESULT of all the engineering, all the progressive ideas,—of all the care in selecting, testing, proving, is to be found in—performance.

THAT IS THE ULTIMATE result striven for—that the only real proof as to whether we have achieved that which we sought.

WE CLAIM—AND OTHERS CLAIM. How are you to know whose claims are justified?

WHEN YOU CONSIDER that there is a great difference between prices of Rickenbackers and other Vertical-8 cars—with the margin in favor of this product—you are, perhaps, inclined to doubt that this car can out-perform all rivals.

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY for you to prove to your own satisfaction whether that is so. Drive this "Rickenbacker-8" yourself.

SO WE LEAVE IT TO YOU. We invite you to drive this wonderful "Vertical-8-Superfine" and then drive other fine cars for comparison.

WE STRONGLY ADVISE that you take the word of no one else—the experience of no one but yourself—in this.

FOR YOU CANNOT SENSE what a car is doing—even when you sit beside the driver—as well as when you hold the wheel yourself. Insist on doing that.

YOU WILL EXPERIENCE an entirely new sensation when you first drive this Rickenbacker "Vertical-8-Superfine."

WE DON'T ATTEMPT to describe that sensation—simply because it is indescribable.

WORDS WILL NOT DO IT—you must feel the marvelous smoothness of this motor; you must feel the swift acceleration; you must feel the softness of the 4-Wheel Brakes—and their wonderful retardation.

YOU MUST FEEL these springs to realize what strides have been made in the science of spring making.

SPEED—more than you will ever use. Power—always a surplus.

HILL CLIMBING—there are no hills!

NO USE COMPARING THIS CAR with ordinary cars. There is no ground for comparison.

ONLY CARS OF THE HIGHEST CLASS are worthy of comparison with this "Vertical-8-Superfine."

WE ASK YOU TO DO THAT—and then say, without reference to price, which is the best automobile you have ever had your hands on.

P. S.—You are only one of thousands who never yet have, but who are eager, to drive a "Vertical-8" car and learn for themselves the reasons for this type of car. ¶ So we suggest you phone at once, stating when it will be convenient, and we will reserve the time—or have a demonstrator at your door. ¶ Don't delay—there is a treat in store for you.

MOTORDOM

Kimball Avenue to Open New Gateway for City Traffic

Official Approval Given by Through Route Project.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

CHICAGO'S latest traffic relief measure was launched to a flying start last week when members of the board of local improvements, the Chicago Plan commission, and property owners organized to open and pave Kimball avenue from Palmer square on the south to Devon avenue on the north, to afford a through boulevard connection in the city's west side between north shore towns and Blue Island.

Final plans for the important trunk line route were perfected at a meeting in the Sovereign hotel arranged by Benjamin Felix, Chicago Plan commissioner, who first suggested the big improvement. J. J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements; Charles Wacker, chairman of the Plan commission; Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, officials of the Illinois Automobile club, North Shore Motor club, and others directly interested all advocated immediate action and formed a Kimball avenue improvement association to advance the work.

The street—one of the narrow thoroughfares typical of the northwest side—runs straight north for the entire distance with the exception of two blocks between Milwaukee and Wellington, where the street will be cut through by order of the city council. When widened and repaved it will connect directly with the new highway link dedicated by property owners in the section between Devon and Peterson avenues which will form the Chicago gateway for the new McCormick boulevard now under contract along the sanitary district canal, connecting with Sheridan road in Wilmette. The Kimball plan is considered one of the most important and least expensive improvements ever considered by the Chicago Plan commission.

"This big relief measure is not a matter for debate," declared J. J. Sloan, president of the board. "Chicago has natural potentialities which inevitably lead to its becoming the greatest city in the United States. Transportation facilities form the last remaining barrier to city development. This plan, coupled with all of the other projects which are laying 100 miles a year in new streets and drives, is a necessity.

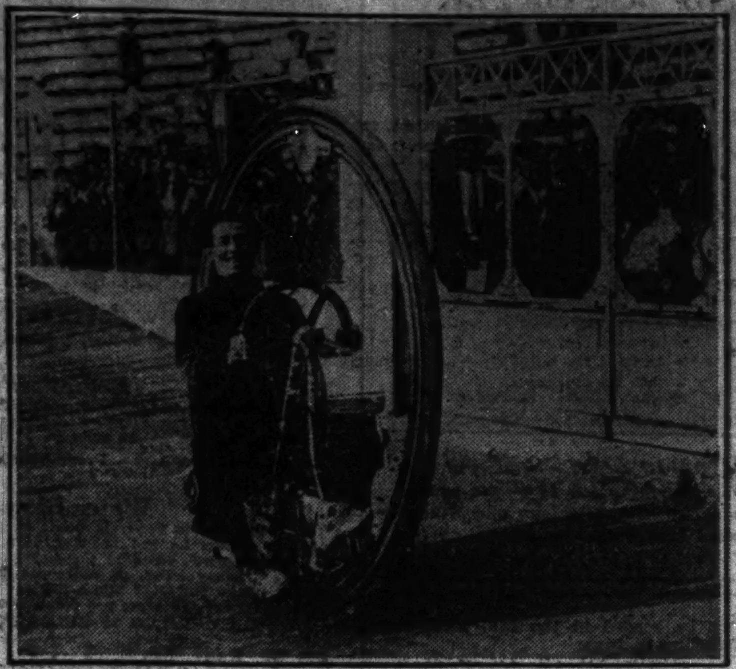
"Chicago is growing at the rate of [illegible] a year. It is a mobile population, a city on wheels. With 400,000 motor vehicles operating here today and new ones pouring in from every point of the compass, traffic congestion has become the greatest menace of the city. The board is ready to proceed with this plan immediately."

Charles Wacker pointed out that the Kimball avenue improvement will make it possible for traffic from the north using Sheridan road, Green Bay road, the Waukegan highway, Rand road, and Milwaukee avenue to come directly through the city from Devon to 31st street on straight and connected boulevards and to reach the Western avenue gateway to the south without touching loop or lake shore traffic congestion. He declared that the commission is unqualifiedly for the improvement plan, and added that detailed surveys will show it the cheapest improvement of the kind ever considered by the board.

On Oct. 22, it was announced, the city council will open proceedings to continue McCormick boulevard south to Peterson avenue by receiving the gift of land needed for the road. Property owners along the proposed link between Peterson and Devon have dedicated a strip 100 feet wide to street purposes. McCormick road, now under contract, will carry a forty foot pavement, with a ten foot sidewalk space on either side.

The commission plans to widen Kimball avenue to a uniform width of eighty-six feet from Peterson avenue south to Wrightwood and to boulevard a strip of Homan avenue in order to connect with the west parks boulevard system. It is estimated that 30 per cent of the through traffic now using Sheridan road and the congested loop district in threading the city north and south will be diverted to the midwest through artery by the improvement.

FOR NARROW ROADS.



Loop drivers who vainly attempt each day to jam their cars in spaces about wide enough for a bicycle may come to this mode of transportation while waiting for the subway. The Italian inventor of the strange vehicle calls it a "velocita." He sits behind the motor which drives the large wheel and lets it revolve over him.

[Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.]

Silent Shifting.

Easy gear shifting is a matter of "feel." A skilled motorist has an uncanny sense of touch enabling him to change quickly and silently. A good plan is to depress clutch, shift from low to neutral, then from neutral to second, and release. This double maneuver almost invariably assures a silent shift.

KEEP MOVING.

It eases the steering process when worming in and out of a parking space to keep the car moving, if only creeping, when tugging at the wheel.

Valve Logic.

Weak valve springs, which have become weakened due to the loss of temper of the wire also will cause sluggish action as they cannot hold the valve to its seat. Weak valve springs can be located when the engine is running by inserting a screw driver between a pair of coils and giving it a slight twist so as to increase the tension of the spring.

If the engine picks up in speed it is a sure sign that the spring is weak.

The exhaust valve springs will give the most trouble, as they lose their temper, owing to the heat they are subjected to, and when they become weak they should be replaced with new ones. A little study of the spring with disclose that the tension is dependent upon the deflection of the coils that form the spring, and it is readily evident that a spring which has lost its temper will not stand the deflection that one which is properly tempered will.

Correct Choking.

The "choke" is a much abused device. Cars that smoke indicate a negligent driver. A choke is rarely necessary for more than a few seconds—even in the coldest weather. Have the carburetor adjusted. Driving with the choke out collects carbon and "shoots" oil. Carbon destroys engines. Keep the choke in and the carbon out.

Brake Adjustment.

Brakes that aren't adjusted and equalized rattle, clatter, and squeak. The tread of one or more of your tires is soon worn down, the frame of the car is distorted with strain, the wheels lose their perfect alignment. Brakes should be adjusted every thirty days.

MOTOR ACCIDENTS.

In New York City are 9,000 passenger car accidents, 3,600 motor truck accidents, and 2,000 taxi accidents in one year.

Connecticut Plans New Survey Into Highway Values

AN investigation to determine, with such facts as are available, the effect on property values due to the existence of state highways, including a study of the tax laws and methods of financing the state highway functions, is to be carried on in Connecticut.

Through an agreement reached between the United States bureau of public roads and the Connecticut highway department a study of all manner of road conditions in this state has been decided upon. The investigation is designed to supplement the research made a year ago concerning density of traffic, etc., which produced much valuable information and has since been used as a model in a number of other states.

Among other objects sought in the proposed survey is the establishment, if possible, of a basic distinction between trunk line motor highways and roads which are of service chiefly to the lands in their vicinity and which are known as land service highways. It is also desired to allocate the cost of road service between passenger cars and trucks and business and nonbusiness motor vehicles.

The survey is expected to produce facts as to the cost of maintenance of all roadway types, including the expense to date a mile and a square yard, classified with respect to the several types of road surface or pavement. The plan further contemplates classification of the administrative and engineering expenses of the department and the development from the date assembled of the cost of service on the state highways in Connecticut.

LEAN MIXTURE.

When it is necessary to employ the low gear for a considerable period it is possible to obviate the overheating that would ordinarily result by keeping the mixture in the leanest possible condition.

Cleaner Streets May Follow This Appeal to Motor Owners

KEEN interest on the part of the average car owner in the national movement to preserve and respect the countryside has encouraged the Chicago Motor club, to suggest the need for greater civic pride to be displayed by motorists.

Other clubs affiliated with the American Automobile association have already noticed that while many motorists are learning to keep picnic spots clean they seem to feel no restriction when driving in the city.

"It has been noticed that motorists toss miscellaneous forms of litter into the streets as thy ride along," says the club report. "This sort of thing is as unnecessary as it is unsightly. Unlike the pedestrian the motorist can easily carry unwanted articles with him until he finds a suitable place for them.

"One of the most unnecessary nuisances is the car with a leaking crankcase. Every time such a car crosses the pavement to enter a driveway oil is deposited and tracked around by tires and shoes. Such conditions are often found near some of the city's most attractive buildings and points of interest."

Dealers Object to Classing Motors with "Wild Bulls"

A MOTOR vehicle is not to be classified with poisons, dynamite, vicious bulls, ferocious animals, evilly disposed mules, and spring guns, according to the objection presented yesterday by C. A. Vane, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers' association. The objection was placed before the motor vehicle conference committee.

Vane's contention before the conference committee advocating the impounding of cars after accidents was that the proposal advocated by the Automobile Manufacturers' association automatically classified the motor vehicle as a dangerous instrumentality and completely upturned the law of liability as to its ownership, operation, and care. In a previous communication to the manufacturers he had characterized the bill as one that transferred guilt from the driver of a motor vehicle to the vehicle and exonerated the driver while it condemned the car.

"Such a bill," the dealer association manager declared, "insists that automobiles are to be classed with ferocious animals and that the laws relating to the ownership of such animals be applied. It is not the ferocity of motor vehicles that is to be feared, but the ferocity of the drivers. No step to curb the wanton misuse of a motor vehicle by its driver or its negligent use can be too stringent, but the guilt should be fastened upon the driver and not shifted to the car. To do otherwise is a direct encouragement of recklessness."

Sharp issue is taken by the dealer association with the statement of the manufacturers' organization that "fines are not a great worry to the prosperous, and it is hard to get a jury to impose jail sentences. It is felt that the impounding method of depriving the owner of the use of his car for a given period is more severe than a fine and that the justice of the measure will appeal to jurors."

Gossip of the Auto Trade

C. W. NASH, president of Nash Motors, dispelled some of the mystery surrounding the recent formation of the Ajax Motors company yesterday by announcing that this subsidiary of the great Kenosha organization will build a complete automobile, and not merely a motor, as has been rumored. He declined to reveal the character of the car which he will produce in the plant developed on the old Mitchell site in Racine, but promised a highly attractive car.

Deliveries were started last week on the new Auburn eight-in-line models, which recently caused considerable interest in Chicago motor circles. Four wheel brakes and balloon tires are standard equipment on the model.

The new Reo transcontinental bus reached its home port in Lansing the other day after having covered the distance between the Atlantic and the Pacific twice since leaving the factory July 14. The car was reported in perfect order after having rolled up 9,338 miles.

Greatly enlarged manufacturing facilities completed during the summer, has made it possible for the Badger Products company, 1908 Indiana avenue, to equip all makes and models of cars with winter tops this season, the company announced yesterday.

Refinements in design and workmanship, coupled with full balloon tire and hydraulic four wheel brake equipment, have made the 1925 Moon roadster, latest production of the St. Louis plant, one of the most attractive models produced by the company.

Company records were broken last week at the initial showing in Chicago of the fifteen new Studebaker models. It is estimated that more than 2,000,000 people viewed the cars in the 3,000 Studebaker showrooms throughout the country.

For the first time in sixteen years of manufacturing the production of the Velie Motors corporation is on a basis of 100 per cent closed cars this season. Factory officials declared yesterday that the plant has been turning out closed models only for the last four weeks.

LICENSE PLATE SCHEME.

Motor vehicle license plates in Pennsylvania, when the number 100,000 is passed, will carry letter prefixes. Under the plan a different letter, beginning with A, will be used for each 100,000 plates issued.

Announcement

The Stutz-Chicago Company becomes a factory branch effective today

This change from private ownership is in compliance with a new general policy of the Board of Directors of the Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, Inc.

Of greater significance, however, to present and prospective owners of Stutz cars, is the closer and intimate relationship of factory-to-owner that the new policy creates; one that is admittedly the remedy for the existing evils of service and dissatisfaction so prevalent in the industry today.

Unlimited Stutz resources make this policy amount to a pledge with the determination that the car which made good in a day becomes the fact for all time.

No other car has this combination of features:

DUPLEX BODY and ROLLER ENCLOSING CURTAINS—the definite solution of the closed-open car problem.

GENUINE BALLOON TIRES—the big tires with the little wheels—size, 21x5.25.

STEERING GEAR, SPRINGS and FENDERS designed for balloon tires.

INCLINED-VALVE ENGINE with connecting rods and crankshaft machined on ALL surfaces for vibrationless balance.

GENUINE SPANISH LEATHER, chrome tanned; high grade fittings and equipment; a gasoline gauge on the dash, good clock, an automatic windshield cleaner, lighting control on the steering wheel, plus the usual equipment.

SURPLUS-STRENGTH FRAME with six cross members, including two heavy tubular torque members. Engine subframe.

STUDEBAKER 4-WHEEL HYDRAULIC BRAKES—optional equipment. Surpassing in simplicity, safety, dependability, braking power and ease of operation any system on any other American car.

ONE minute the DUPLEX is a comfortable, weather-tight closed car—deeply cushioned and richly appointed. In less than thirty seconds it becomes a delightful open car, with all the unhindered freedom every motorist likes and enjoys. Its double utility satisfied a most urgent need—it is as revolutionary as the self-starter and electric lights.

And the price is the same as that of the open car—with advantages in finish, fittings, room and comfort no open car could ever give!

Framed and shaped in steel, the upper part of the Duplex Body is built integrally with the lower part—it functions perfectly with the lower part—it is permanently beautiful.

But even without the "double-value" of the Duplex Body the new Standard Six would still be the same great Studebaker success. For its introduction marks the beginning of an era in the automobile industry when fine cars of real quality, plenty of room and comfort, impressive appearance, splendid power and performance may be had at a price the average buyer can afford to pay.

Surpassing mechanical superiority is obvious in every mile you drive it. Power, smoothness, silence you expect in any good six-cylinder car; but in this great car your expectations will be exceeded. You cannot anticipate such performance-perfection in any car even within hundreds of dollars of the new Studebaker Standard Six price.

The proof is easy to establish—drive it yourself, try it out on your favorite hill, test its speed on the straight-away. Sense what "ease of operation" really means in terms of effortless steering, velvety clutch action, easy gear shifting and instant brake application.

Experience what real comfort means in plenty of room, soft deep cushions; genuine balloon tires; long, supple springs.

The new Standard Six will tell you a story as it has never been told before by any other car at the Standard Six price.

Whether you are in the market now or next year—you should see this new Studebaker. It is a car that will revolutionize values in the automobile industry!

FARM AND GARDEN

All Gold Does Not Glitter in Dairy Sections

Northwest States Find Neglected Wealth in Marl Mud.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

FARMERS in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin have found a new money making trick where they transform "white gold" into "green gold" right out in the field. Their experience in uncovering the hidden secret almost parallels that of the prospectors at Cripple Creek, Colo., when they discovered white gold years ago. When the old miners first found white gold in their pans they threw it away, so the story goes. They expected to find a yellow colored substance in their pans.

Later they found that the white material was gold—their fortunes were made, and Cripple Creek became one of the greatest gold mining centers in the world.

About the same thing happened with the farmers in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin when "white gold" in the form of marl was discovered in the lake beds. Fishermen and hunters, paddling their canoes over the thousands of lakes in the three states, have been attracted by the peculiar colored mud. But it has only been within the last season or two that farmers have recognized the value of this whitish mud, which is marl, containing a high percentage of lime used in correcting the acidity of sour soil and making it possible to grow alfalfa, "green gold."

Millions of Tons in Lakes.

Millions of tons of marl have been found in the bottom of these lakes, right under the farmers' noses. Like the Cripple Creek prospectors, they have been figuratively tossing the marl out of their pans, not knowing they were throwing away "white gold." That is the term commonly used by farmers in referring to marl, which is an age long accummulation of snail shells practically decomposed into a light colored powder and other deposits of lime containing from 60 to 100 per cent of lime carbonate. The lime carbonate is the substance so badly needed by the soils in these dairy states if alfalfa, clovers and other legumes are to be grown.

The greatest development in the use of marl as a substitue for limestone, commonly used to sweeten soil before attempting to grow legume crops, is around Stevens Point, Portage county, Wis. The marl movement there is headed by Harry Noble, farm adviser, who is coöperating with preachers and extension crop experts from the state university.

Vast Change Resulting.

It is a new idea with the farmers and they were at first skeptical about the value of marl on their land. The crops this year have convincingly proved the need of this material in the growing of alfalfa and clover—the two crops that promise to aid dairymen—cutting down their feeding costs and the buying of so much expensive western hay.

"I believe the extensive use of marl and other cheap forms of lime will gradually change the complexion of this part of the state," says Mr. Noble. "This territory is in the light soil district of the state and farmers generally find it difficult to raise sufficient clover hay to feed the already small herds of cattle in this section. The herds have gradually been cut down in size because of the difficulty in producing roughage. It is this fact that makes it so necessary for our farmers to get into the alfalfa game.

"When I came to Portage county not quite two years ago there was little or no interest shown in the use of marl deposits to get alfalfa started. We had slightly more than 200 acres of alfalfa in the county, practically all of which was due to the use of commercial lime stone shipped in."

Special Devices Manufactured.

Clover failures were common in Wisconsin that year and Mr. Noble and his co-workers held a series of meetings in the county, emphasizing the use of marl and paper mill lime sludge in the growing of alfalfa. The farm advisor arranged with excavating companies who began about that time to manufacture special buckets for the handling of marl.

The marl was dragged out on the lake shore, dried and sold to the farmers at $1 a cubic yard. Most of the farmers bought from 15 to 50 cubic yards.

Today there are three commercial excavating companies digging out the marl the year round, and many small home made outfits are operating several months in the year, digging marl out in winter when the lakes are frozen over with a thick layer of ice.

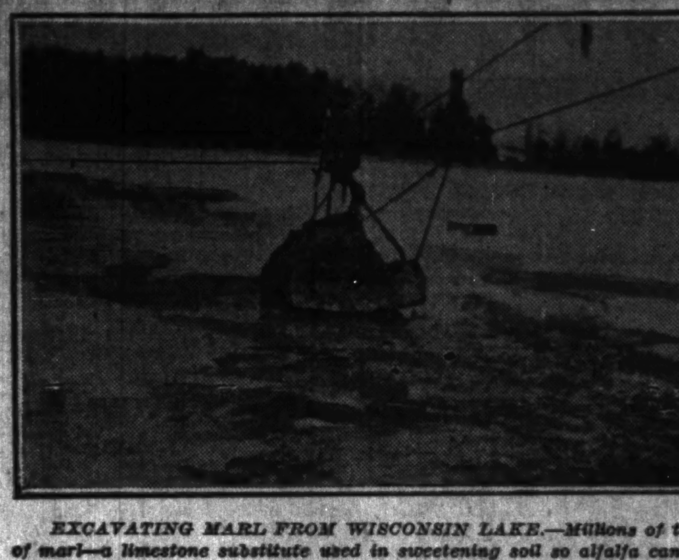
"After the first year of digging and the sale of marl at $1 a cubic yard, it was found by the operators that they could dig it cheaper and today prices range from 50 cents to 85 cents a cubic yard to the farmer," added Mr. Nobel. "During the first year in the neighborhood of 5,000 cubic yards of marl were taken from seven lake beds, and practically all of it was bought by the farmers and applied to the soil either last fall or this spring. Our farmers have taken hold of the marl proposition in good shape. I believe the average tonnage of limestone used in this county annually before we started using marl would not exceed the 300 mark.

"In getting this marl business started I had the coöperation of Prof. L. F. Graber of the university and several Polish priests. It was at a meeting of farmers in the basement of the Polish church at Fancher where I first met two men who are now commercializing the excavation work. Shortly after the meeting these men built a scraper and by horse power they pulled the marl up through holes in the ice. They have improved their machinery, and this season they will excavate about 5,000 cubic yards."

WHITE FACE QUARTET.

FAMOUS CANBY CALVES—There isn't going to be a calf shortage on this farm. The Hereford bossy shown here came out of the pasture the other day with these four calves—all her own—on Robert Schwartz' farm near Canby, Minn.

DIGGING "WHITE GOLD"



EXCAVATING MARL FROM WISCONSIN LAKE.—Millions of tons of marl—a limestone substitute used in sweetening soil so alfalfa can be grown—are being found in the lakes of Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota. This picture shows the type of marl bucket used in excavating the marl through holes in the ice.

Garden Notes.

The latter part of this month and the first of October are ideal times to plant hardy annuals. If they are seeded now they will bloom in the spring. The reason more annuals are not seeded in the fall is that many gardeners have the impression that all such flowers are sown only in the spring or early summer. Bachelor button, annual larkspur, and shirley poppies are among the annuals that can be seeded in the fall, producing blossoms in June.

It is not necessary to buy new bulbs from the seed man every year. Cannas, gladioli, dahlias, and giant or summer hyacinths are among the tender bulbous plants that must be stored during winter. They must be lifted and stored, for if left in the ground they will be killed by heavy freezes in this section. If properly stored, buying new bulbs will not be necessary.

ADDRESS

HOW AMERICA LEADS WORLD AS A WORKSHOP

BY SCRUTATOR.

"Cobden's prophecy, 'England is and always will remain the workshop of the world,' is ridiculous."

Is this statement of some rampant American high tariff advocate, proud of the fact that in the last ten years the United States has stepped out in the lead as the first industrial nation of the world—so far ahead of the others that their standards scarcely apply to us any more?

No, it is the deliberate utterance of a British publicist telling his countrymen that it is about time for social agitators foisting schemes for spending public money to quit talking about "England is the richest country in the world." The British radical is about as far behind the world's events as his sort over here, where it is the "Progressive" who talks the economics of 1900 in 1924.

His analysis of America's position will be news to as many Americans as it is to Englishmen, however, if the chatter of a presidential campaign is any index to the state of popular knowledge.

Get this: "It is frequently said that the United States owe their great wealth to the possession of their great natural resources, to the possession of a fruitful agricultural plain, extensive forests, rich mines, etc. That explanation is fallacious. The United States are foremost in the world not only by the productivity of their wheat fields, cotton fields, forests, coal mines, iron mines, but also by the output of their manufacturing industries."

Go deeper. The industrial greatness of the United States is due to the fact that we have stressed production rather than "trade." Consequently we have not made an idol of cheapness.

The Britisher calls attention to the fact that the American workingmen have everything that vast numbers of the British middle class hardly dream of acquiring.

There was no intrinsic reason why the United States ever should have outstripped Britain.

Within the British empire are resources vastly greater than ours, except for coal. And Britain is second in coal, with the advantage of having its coal near the sea.

The United States is the only real modern continental power, as the industries and rail transport of all others are tied to blue water.

But that was no advantage, certainly not at first, for even with railroads that haul freight cheaper than any others in the world, the ocean ship still has the advantage, as our own lake traffic testifies every day.

For the assembly of raw materials for manufacturing Britain's water bound possessions actually have a better position. Charley Schwab's steel plant at Sparrow's Point, Md., can bring iron ore from Brazil about as cheaply as South Chicago can get it from Duluth, as far as the transportation on the ship is concerned. Where speed is no object, and it is not in the "heavies," Britain's position at the center of her far flung dominion packed with every imaginable raw material compared favorably with that of any industrial sector of the United States.

But Britain never produced an Alexander Hamilton. Great men she had bred a-plenty, but she needed one of that kind at the beginning of the Victorian age. She never then would have sacrificed self sufficiency to the more immediate advantages of free trade.

COTTON PRICES LOWER

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—COTTON—Had a shark break and closed nearly the lowest of the day, with losses of 26 to 39 points, except on July, which was off only 13 points. In the early trading there was a sharp advance due to buying on predictions of colder weather and short covering. Near the close profit taking was on a liberal scale and early advances were more than lost. Hedging sales are becoming more effective. Prices follow:

NEW ORLEANS—COTTON—Closed 29 to 30 points lower, with hedging sales a feature. Weather predictions were for lower temperatures. There is not enough buying to hold values on the bulge and the close was at nearly the lowest prices. Prices as wired to Thomson & McKinnon follow:

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1924: Fairchild News Service.]

LONDON.—Piece goods manufacturers of Great Britain today expressed no surprise that the American Woolen company had advanced its prices, saying the new American prices correspond to recent markups by British concerns. However, the British manufacturers believe the advance will help the sale of British woolen goods in the United States, as now there will be no such a disparity in costs of the two fabrics.

BOSTON.—Employés of the cotton goods mills of S. Slater & Sons at Webster have been given the choice of a wage cut or of having the mills operate on half time. The management told the workers that conditions in the industry necessitated either one of the courses and gave the workers until Oct. 1 to decide which they preferred.

WASHINGTON.—Treasury officials today issued a circular to American manufacturers calling attention to the law of 1905 which provides that domestic trademarks and patents which it is desired to protect from foreign simulation can be registered with the treasury department. This registration is free and offers a more expeditious way of protection than the course provided by the patent office.

LEIPZIG, Germany—The soviet fur auction closed here today with American houses buying wolf and lynx.

RAILROAD NOTES

Revenue freight loadings on lines operating east from Chicago and St. Louis showed up well in the last week and the total compares well with the figures of a few weeks ago. General merchandise movement is liberal, and there is quite a free run of grain from the farms to terminals. Southern roads are sharing in a big movement of lumber and also are profiting from a liberal run of wheat to the gulf ports.

The New York Central lines were authorized by the interstate commerce commission to assume liability in respect of $20,955,000 of equipment trust certificates to be sold at an average price of not less than 96.89 per cent of par. The proceeds will be used to purchase new equipment.

Railroad equipment manufacturers had good business this month, bookings to Sept. 27 aggregating 22,845 freight cars, 250 passenger cars, and 115 locomotives. This was a heavy increase over the same month in 1923. Orders for 103,443 freight cars, 1,405 passenger cars, and 1,005 locomotives were received in the nine months this year against 71,876 freight, 1,483 passenger cars, and 1,836 locomotives a year ago.

Proposed schedules increasing the rates on live stock from stations on the Rock Island and a number of its connections in southwestern territory to Omaha were ordered suspended to Jan. 25. An investigation of the new rates will be made.

The Northern Pacific railway applied for authority to construct fifteen miles of main line in Mason county, Washington, at a cost of approximately $500,000.

PENNOK OIL CO. REORGANIZATION NOW APPROVED

New York, Sept. 27.—Reorganization of the Pennok Oil company, providing for liquidation and dissolution of the present organization and the transfer of its properties to the newly formed Pennok Oil Corporation of Delaware, was approved by the directors today. The company operates oil properties in Kansas, Texas, and Oklahoma.

On completion of the plan, stockholders of the Pennok Oil company will receive for each share now owned one-third of a share of the new corporation, $5 in notes of the corporation and about $8 in cash. A special stockholders' meeting has been called for Oct. 15 to act on the proposal.

The reorganization involves the sale of the Pennok Oil company's operating properties to the corporation without the transfer of its other assets. These, including approximately $3,600,000 in cash and $250,000 in notes of the new corporation, will be distributed pro rata among stockholders on the company's dissolution. The corporation's $150,000 capital stock is already held by the Pennok company.

For Investment!

Wm. H. Britigan Recommends these North Shore Wooded Tracts at $250 and up

Tremendous profits are being made on the North Shore. Still greater profits will be made in the future. You can secure these profits under this new plan.

Now, Wm. H. Britigan offers at extremely low prices a limited number of restricted tracts on the North Shore—property of a character that would ordinarily be cut into lots and sold at high prices, but now offered in quarter acre, half acre and acre tracts, at $250.00 per tract and up.

Two railroads serve the property, Chicago and Northwestern and North Shore Electric on the east with stations a short distance away. On the west is the Wisconsin division of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad and the right of way of the new extension of the North Shore line, a logical site for additional stations on both roads to be within four blocks of the property.

These tracts adjoining the Green Bay Road are directly in the path of the impending North Shore development. They are high and wooded in a location exceptionally good for high grade residence. They are closer to the lake, closer to the city and closer to transportation than many tracts now being sold at far higher prices.

Some Very Valuable Green Bay Road Frontage is Included

Purchase here is recommended for investment. Not for immediate homebuilding, although streets are being put in and you can build if you wish. But your greatest opportunity, and the one we recommend, is to hold this property and take the profit brought by the increase. Those who have dealt with the Wm. H. Britigan Organization know its record for marketing property that has increased many times over in value. This property, frankly for investment and much underpriced in comparison with surrounding property, offers an even greater investment opportunity.

There are only a limited number of tracts here, and those who before have taken the recommendation of Wm. H. Britigan will be eager to get the profits which the completion near this property of development now under way will bring. The terms are very convenient.

Decide now to learn the facts. Send the coupon for further information and exact location. Mail the coupon today.

It is the one type of heating boiler which will burn any kind of fuel without smoke. It does away with the necessity for high-priced smokeless coal. And it never fails. It is on the job every minute. With hog receipts about the smallest on record at 1,000 offerings in different classes were not large enough to establish a fair list of quotations on the week-end session.

Market was on a "catch as catch can" basis although tendency ruled strong to mostly higher, with a big share of better grades showing 10c advance. The day's top and average prices moved up to $10.50 and $9.70, respectively, the latter being within 5c of the highest this year, while top hogs were as high as any time since Aug. 5 and 40c above last week's close.

Quality of Hogs Slumps.

Quality rated poorest in some time during the last week, offerings including a liberal proportion of pigs and underweight hogs. Only six of the fourteen packers purchased hogs yesterday, leaving about 5,000 in the pens at the close, mostly of inferior quality.

Hog receipts last week at 96,400 were smallest since June, 1921, being 22,800 smaller than previous week, 60,900 smaller than a year ago and 17,400 below the ten year average. Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 242 lbs equaled the lightest since week ending Aug. 9, being 1 lb lighter than previous week, 1 lb lighter than a year ago, 9 lbs lighter than the unusually heavy average two years ago, but stands 7 lbs above the ten year average. General average price last week at $9.55 equaled previous week, which stood within 5c of the highest since July, 1922, being $1.60 above a year ago and $2.35 below the ten year average.

Cattle Market Lower.

Probably influenced by smaller supplies early last week, cattle market recovered some of the recent sharp break, but reacted again after midweek and closed weak to slightly lower than a week ago. Common and medium weighty native beef steers, due to narrow outlet for heavy carcasses on the dressed beef market, showed most weakness. Yearlings held steady with previous week's close. Choice 969 to 1,000 lb yearling steers brought the week's top at $11.50, which equaled the highest since early in August. Top 1,219 lb averages reached $11.00 and best weighty steers, averaging 1,506 lbs, $10.65. Fancy 802 lb heifers sold at $10.65. Cattle receipts last week at 59,400 were 10,000 smaller than previous week and 20,000 below arrivals a year ago, with western range stock decreasing 15,000 since a year ago, when westerns totaled the largest in 1923 at 23,500.

Sheep Receipts Decrease.

Sheep receipts last week at 106,900 decreased 30,700 compared with a week ago and 13,100 compared with two weeks ago, being 25,700 smaller than a year ago. However, barring the two previous weeks, last week's offerings stand largest of the year. Despite the decrease in supplies, fat lambs met irregular and unsatisfactory markets as far as salesmen were concerned, with closing prices steady to 25c lower compared with a week ago. Aged sheep and feeding stock shared in the general weakness. General average price of lambs last week at $12.95 stands lowest of the year and, barring 1921, is below any corresponding week since 1916.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 24,000 cattle, 23,000 hogs, and 27,000 sheep, against 21,756 cattle, 25,708 hogs, and 22,350 sheep a week ago, and 25,793 cattle, 33,608 hogs, and 39,372 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Cotton goods markets ended the week with signs of increasing demand and higher prices. The American Woolen company has withdrawn many women's wear woolens linens from sale and several mills' products in men's wear woolen also have been withdrawn. The easing in raw silk prices has done much to encourage silk merchants in their spring sales plans. Linens were in better demand for household uses. Heavy knit lines continued to move better, especially knitted outerwear and dress fabrics.

IN FOREIGN MONEY MARKETS.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Bar silver, 35d per ounce. Money, 2⅜ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 3⅝ per cent; three months bills, 3 11-16 per cent.

"Our Experience of Every Day"!

A VITAL FACTOR TO THE INVESTOR

IS IT NOT of considerable importance that every detail of the loaning process come within our actual experience? and that if it is not within the bounds of our experience is it not reasonable to suppose that we find ourselves on strange ground?

Thus, to avoid ever being on strange ground, we are within our province only when the loans we make are on properties we might manage within our own experience.

In consideration of these facts we have included in our loan operations only such projects with which our property management department, which has successfully operated for 69 years, is thoroughly familiar.

There are convincing arguments of safety in every issue offered by Baird & Warner.

WHEAT MARKET ERRATIC DESPITE WORLD BUYING

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Foreign buyers apparently have taken fright over the world's wheat situation, and the seaboard estimated sales of 3,500,000 bushels, largely of American grain, made to Europe during the day.

Italy was in the market for supplies for the first time in some weeks, and the removal of hedges against the business was instrumental in advancing all deliveries of futures to a new high on the crop.

Heavy profit taking with weakness in Winnipeg made a strong reaction toward the last, and the finish was about the bottom with September ⅛c higher, and the deferred futures ⅛@⅜c lower. All deliveries of rye also sold at a new high on the crop and closed 2⅛@3⅜c higher with September leading.

Forecast for light to killing frost in the corn belt brought in heavy buying of futures and prices advanced sharply, at the top showing 8@10⅛c over the low on Thursday, and the finish was at net gains of 3⅞@4⅝. Oats gained ⅛@⅜c in sympathy with corn.

Wheat Higher for Week.

Development of an extremely bullish situation abroad with heavy export takings of wheat were largely instrumental in keeping values on the upgrade the greater part of the last week. At the last net gains were 6⅝@7¼c as compared with a week ago. Rye showed more strength than wheat and gained 9⅛@12⅜c for the week. Corn after breaking 13¼c from the high of the previous week rallied as rapidly as it went down and deferred futures were 3⅜@5⅜c higher while September was off ⅛c, the latter being affected by increased offerings of grain to arrive. Oats were ⅞@1¼c higher for the week. Lard gained 60@65c, and bellies 2½c for the week, while ribs were 10@20c lower.

Better Weather for Canada.

Forecast for clearing weather in the Canadian northwest was largely responsible for the weakness shown in the wheat market there after an early bulge to a new high for the season. The finish was 1¼@1⅜c lower. Liverpool closed 1⅜@2d higher with October there selling around $1.62½ or nearly 28c over Chicago September. Winnipeg October was 10c over Chicago September at the last. Routine news and individual operations attract little attention at the present time. September here closed at $1.34⅞, December at $1.38⅝@1.38½, and May at $1.44⅛@1.44¼.

General short covering was on in corn and also free buying by commission houses as the result of the forecast for frost over part of the corn belt, and the finish was about the top in the face of heavy commission house selling at times. September closed at $1.14⅛, December at $1.10⅝@1.10⅞, and May at $1.13⅛@1.13⅛. The country took advantage of the upturn in futures to sell some old corn to arrive, and there were also offerings of new corn for deferred shipment.

Less Demand for Rye.

Foreign demand for rye was less in evidence and sales for the day were estimated at 200,000 bu at the seaboard. There was a good class of buying of futures with all deliveries in new ground for the season.

Lard was bought by commission houses on the strength in corn and reports of a good cash demand and closed 5@17½c higher. Ribs were unchanged and bellies unchanged to 5c higher. Prices follow:

MARKET QUOTATIONS BY RADIO.

Introduced by the hubub of the "wheat pit," W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune radiocast on the Drake hotel [formerly WDAP], broadcasts quotations direct from the Board of Trade every half hour while trading is in progress. Market summaries are broadcast at 1:25 and 5 p. m.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign buying of cash wheat at the seaboard was the heaviest in some time, with sales in all positions conservatively estimated at 3,500,000 bu, the United Kingdom accepting a cargo of hard winter just at the close. The latter country with Italy and the continent in general were aggressive buyers throughout the day, and some of the leading seaboard exporters were talking much larger sales than reported. Italy was in the market for the first time in a long while. Some of the sales abroad were understood to have been made as much as 3c per bu apart.

Duluth No. 1 northern was wanted by the United Kingdom in volume, and to a large extent the day's sales were of American grain. A few small lots of Manitobas were put through. Rye sales were 200,000 bu with the basis ½c higher and little offered.

Chicago handlers sold 160,000 bu wheat, 90,000 bu rye, and 30,000 bu barley for export, and there has been a liberal business under way in malt. Foreigners have bought barley futures at Winnipeg for several days. Domestic shipping sales here were 15,000 bu wheat, 70,000 bu corn, and 45,000 bu oats. Deliveries on September contracts aggregated 173,000 bu wheat, 136,000 bu corn, 75,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu rye.

Demand for cash wheat was fair with prices unchanged to 1c higher. No change was made in the local spot basis. Receipts, 116 cars.

Offerings of cash corn were fair and the basis easier at September price to ½c under for No. 2 mixed, and 3 under December for No. 2 yellow and white. Receipts, 250 cars. Outside markets were ½@2½c higher.

No. 2 white oats on spot was here at 1½@1¾c under December, and No. 3 white at 3¼@3½c under. Receipts, 94 cars.

Meadows, at Room 30, Board of Trade Building, as to whether they will handle business in cotton in the Chicago market.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Profit taking by holders of wheat and rye give prices a setback from all bulges which are taken advantage of by foreigners and exporters to pick up the offerings. The market has taken a big line of wheat the last few days, and while advances have not held it is regarded as a bull market and a purchase on breaks so long as the foreign situation is the dominating factor.

Selling of long wheat in Winnipeg, particularly by the country, carried prices down after a big advance, making the close 1¼@1⅝c lower for the day. The trade is looking for large receipts to carry prices down, while all offerings are being accumulated by exporters. An English version of the wheat situation abroad is very bullish.

For nearly a week traders who have taken profits on the bulges in grain have almost invariably paid more money to get their grain back unless they were satisfied with small profits. This is particularly the case with the wheat traders.

Board of Trade memberships are $8,500 net to the buyer, an advance of $5,000 from the low point early in the year.

"With weather over the Canadian northwest generally unsettled and with foreign crop news continuing bullish, September, December, and May wheat made new high levels for the crops," say Jackson Bros. "Our seaboard advices say that foreigners are taking anything that is offered."

A new feature that may affect the grain trade is the discovery of foot and mouth disease in Texas. This will also affect the cattle industry.

A local trader who is a close student of world's wheat conditions estimates European requirements as high as in 1923, when they took 752,000,000 bu.

George A. Carruthers, a Montreal grain man, sends out notice to the grain trade that somebody has been cashing forged checks in his name, two grain firms in Chicago having cashed several.

"MAXIMUM SECURITY THROUGH MODERATE LOANS"

Investment Value

It is difficult to judge real estate security merely from the appearance of the structure. Its magnitude may baffle the average investor.

But it can be judged if the property is of moderate size so you can appraise it yourself—see the rental demand and the income and determine the investment features.

Such are the properties that are security for Capital Mortgage investments.

Send for our booklet T 12 and learn about "Maximum Security through Moderate Loans."

The New York Times.

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—The stock exchange, today presented little but repetition of the recent daily movement. Highly speculative shares were bid up the usual 2 to 3 points or more with standard investment shares standing motionless.

Both the railroad and industrial groups participated in the upward swing of prices. Among the standard dividend paying issues, Atchison was the leader, moving up to 107¾, a new high record for the current year. U. S. Steel common gained nearly a point and the independent steels moved up in sympathy.

Crude Oil Cut Ignored.

Other issues which attracted attention because of their gains included Cast Iron Pipe, Dupont, Remington Typewriter, Famous Players, Nash Motors and National Biscuit. Further reduction in crude oil prices in the middle west had little or no effect on oil stocks.

In bonds there were some declines today as well as advances, but the general trend was quite unmistakably upward. No other government bonds imitated the treasury 4¼ per cents of Friday by going into new high ground, but several of them ended at higher prices than the previous day.

Professionals Control Market.

The movement of stocks has come under the auspices of professional speculators of the less important sort. It attracts a following which enjoys the excitement of a venture which takes no account of wearisome facts and is soon over, and that is as much as it contributes to the financial situation.

The only inference to be drawn from such markets as that of last week is the obvious fact that the people who wish to speculate are disposed to speculate for the rise. This may or may not have real significance for the immediate future.

Week Shows Price Gain.

Increased activity prevailed in both the securities and commodities markets during the last week, and taking the movements on the whole, the trend was again upward. In the stock market, the averages recorded a gain of about a point for the week in fifty representative issues, but some sensational gains, ranging from three to as much as ten points or more, were recorded in speculative specialties.

The statement of the New York clearing house banks as of the close of business Sept. 27 showed the following changes for the week: Loans, discounts, demand deposits, decreased $133,357,000; net demand deposits, decreased $2,123,000; time deposits increased $17,818,000; circulation decreased $80,000, and excess reserves decreased $80,027,700. The decrease in excess reserve left a deficit of $9,587,030.

WALL STREET NOTES

Nash Motors was the individual feature in yesterday's stock market. The shares soared 11 points to 161, the highest price since the distribution of a stock dividend two years ago. Other motors improved in sympathy, Packard touching a new high at 14, and Studebaker, Maxwell "B," and Spicer Manufacturing duplicating their previous 1924 peak prices. Reports of increased car sales formed the basis for the buying of these issues.

Public utilities continued to respond to reports of high earnings and rumors of increased dividend disbursements, Laclede Gas, Pacific Gas and Electric, Standard Gas and Electric, Public Service of New Jersey, and Consolidated Gas of Pittsburgh breaking through their previous top levels.

St. Louis-San Francisco railroad issues continued to discount the expected declaration of a dividend on the preferred stock at next Wednesday's meeting of the board of directors, the common touching 31 and the preferred 66⅝. Atchison moved up more than 2 points. Southern Pacific, Lackawanna, New York Central, and several others improved fractionally.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe was bid up nearly 4 points to a new top at 115 on urgent short covering, easing later to 113½. Good buying also was noted in Commercial Solvents B., Du Pont, Iron Products, Remington Typewriter, and Norfolk and Southern, all up 2 points or more. American Tobacco, American Sugar, United Fruit, General Electric, and National Lead were among the heavy spots.

In the bond market, United Kingdom 5½'s of 1937 and Swiss 5½'s achieved new high prices for the year, and a broadened inquiry embraced Austrian 7's, Belgian 8's, and Netherland 6's. South American bonds, however, yielded to the pressure of realizing sales. Frisco income 6's gained more than a point. Heavy spots included St. Paul and International Great Northern Railroad bonds, Wickwire-Spencer Steel 7's, and U. S. Rubber 7½'s touched par for the first time this year.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The local unlisted securities market ended a week of considerable activity, with general advances of from 1 to 7 points.

Interstate Iron and Steel preferred improved about 7 points to 57 bid at the close, with limited offerings at 59. J. L. Kraft & Bros. common was actively traded in between 7 and 8, and closed at 7¼ bid, 7⅝ asked. The preferred, ex-dividend $2, was slightly better at 95¼@98. Kellogg company common continued strong, scoring another point improvement, with sales between 21 and 22. Numerous buying inquiries were noted in National Tea preferred, which closed at 102½ bid, with small lot offerings at 104. Although the bid price of Federal Electric preferred was 1 point higher at 22, offerings were limited.

By-Products Coke had a sharp advance in the late trading to high sales at 39, closing at that price bid. Goodman Manufacturing was in demand throughout at 53. Union Stock Yards of Omaha was traded in ex-dividend $2 around 120. Wahl preferred was also ex-dividend, but neglected at 80@83. H. O. Stone common, after selling at 25, closed in demand at 23, ex-dividend 25c. The units "ex" $2.50 were fractionally higher at 97@100. Butler Bros. sales moved within a narrow range at 33¼@33¾.

Irregularity was noted in the motor group. Paige-Detroit was active at improved prices, high sales being recorded at 14½. Stock was later offered at this figure, with bids of 14. Ford of Canada sold off 10 points to low and last sales at 445. Motor Products was steady around 88@90. Timken Axle eased off fractionally to 4 bid, 4¼ asked.

Interest centered largely in the public utility group, many issues making new highs. Continental Gas and Electric at 78 bid scored another 4 point advance. United Light and Power class A common warrants made a new high in selling at 14½. Commonwealth Power Corporation rose 2½ points to closing sales at 108½. American Public Utilities prior preferred was heavily dealt in between 80 and 90, with closing sales at the latter figure. The common was without material change, sales ranging between 90 and 93. American Super Power reached a new high at 26. Stock was later offered at 25½, with buyers at 25c.

Government Bonds.

Government bonds as a class are the safest and highest grade investments in the world. There are, of course, as many grades of government bonds as there are types of governments, but, taking them as a class, the list of national or governmental defaults is so small in comparison with the billions of dollars of public bonds issued that it is safe to say that no other class of bonds has shown so small a percentage of defaults.

Government bonds are quite different by nature from corporation bonds. The latter often have behind them a great deal of mortgage or collateral security, while government bonds are simply promises to pay.

The ability of governments to pay, however, rests upon almost unlimited taxing powers, which corporations lack and taxes constitute a lien which is prior in rank to the mortgages themselves. Furthermore, mortgages would be worthless but for the possible appeal to courts and governmental agents as a means of enforcement, so that, from this viewpoint even the mortgage bond depends for its value upon the good faith of government institutions.

The financial history of governments shows that a defaulting government by no means places the investor in as hopeless a position as does a defaulting corporation. Adjustment and settlement with bondholders usually is made eventually and there seldom has been a frank repudiation of a bona fide obligation contracted by a government. Mexico, after being in default for over ten years, during which time governments have come and gone, has reached an agreement with bondholders, which is temporarily in suspense, and even little Honduras, in default over fifty years, has at last proposed an agreement with her creditors. Soviet authorities, too, are beginning to show some willingness to discuss resumption of interest on part, at least, of the Russian debt.

An important element of security behind government issues is the yearning of all governments not only to spend money for public improvements, military purposes, etc., but also to avoid the unpopularity incident to raising huge sums by taxation. The alternative is to borrow, so that even the politician who is quite out of sympathy with investors or big business desires to maintain high credit standing for his government.

Another element of security is that all classes of population will flock to the rescue of their government if threatened with bankruptcy or conquest, whereas only a few thousand stock and bond holders, at most, feel directly concerned with the permanent life of a corporation.

The investor in the bonds of foreign governments may bear in mind the fact that, whatever course a government may be forced to adopt in an emergency towards its own nationals as bondholders, a peculiar sanctity usually has characterized the obligations it has assumed towards investors of other nations. This fact is an element of added safety and is due to a realization that sound credit and international progress depend on the maintenance of good faith among nations.

In these abnormal times the market prices and fluctuations of the various foreign government issues are not always indicative of their relative security as investments. Quotations rise and fall not merely as a reflection of intrinsic values, but also as a result of such influences as demand and supply, the banking control, the political aspects of the countries represented, the prejudices of buyers, etc.

It is especially true in such times as the present that prices of government bonds respond more directly to economic developments than to the more specific factors which go to make up their individual security. An example of this is the United States Liberty loans which sold close to par when issued, but declined steadily after the close of the war and did not recover to par until 1922. During all that time, however, they were equally secure investments.

The Elements of Safety in Real Estate Investments
Are Easy to Understand and Impossible to Question

Shelter is a vital necessity of mankind.

The need for buildings in which to live and to work has established the values of improved real estate on a solid foundation. Especially is this true in large cities where the history of such values is one of steady, unhesitating increase.

When land and a modern income-producing building are pledged to secure a loan of reasonable proportions, the form of security is ideal. It cannot disappear. Title to the land is guaranteed and the building is insured against all normal risks. The income of the building is used first to meet the requirements of the loan.

According to modern methods in this type of bonds, each month a portion of the earnings of the property is applied to reducing the amount of the loan. By this means any possibility of depreciation of the property is guarded against in advance, and the outstanding indebtedness is secured in ever increasing proportion.

The earning power of improved real estate is most dependable, for certainly money will be paid for shelter before it will be spent for railroad tickets, street car fare, telephoning, electric or gas bills or almost any other commodity except food.

The careful investor will not permit himself to be influenced by generalities in the selection of securities. In every type of bond he buys whether it be industrial, public utility, real estate or municipal, he will consult only an investment banker with a long public record of fair dealing and of thorough knowledge of the particular type of security which he offers.

The Straus Brothers Company has specialized in investments secured by improved real estate for 64 years and offers you a service based on this experience.

Turning Success Into Failure

The Story of Archibald Fewclothes, the Best Playwright of Wichita, Kansas

By GEORGE M. COHAN

ARCHIBALD FEWCLOTHES, 21 years old, of Wichita, Kansas, had a perfectly good job in a hardware store and had always been known as a normal human being with a light heart and a sunny disposition.

But, alas, the day came when Archie turned turtle on himself and became a grouch of the deepest dye.

All the folks in Wichita began to discount the nice things they had previously said about Archie because of the sudden transformation in the lad's way of going along.

Instead of the bright smile and snappy manner for which he had become famous, he passed everybody up with a "cold pan" that would frighten a big league umpire.

"What's come over the boy?" the neighbors began to inquire.

"I don't know. I can't understand him at all," replied Archie's father, when the question was put to him.

"He's certainly acting strangely of late; he isn't the same boy at all," said Archie's mother to Archie's brothers and sisters.

This wasn't any particular information to Archie's brothers and sisters, however, because they, too, had noticed the change in the lad.

Even the local hardware dealer for whom Archie worked began to wonder what was on the boy's mind and had gone so far as to discuss the matter with several of his customers who had also noticed that Archie looked and acted as though he carried the weight of the world on his shoulders. A change in his entire makeup had taken place. His jaw was set, he refused to talk, his face was absolutely expressionless—his brow wrinkled—a peculiar look in his eyes. He was bent over, seemed almost deformed. In other words, young Fewclothes had turned into a different sort of man over night.

Little by little, he became the subject of consternation throughout the entire town of Wichita. Everybody finally agreed that the lad's case was proof conclusively that Robert Louis Stevenson's weird story of "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was a little something more than ordinary fiction after all.

THE truth of the matter was that Archie was writing a play.

It all came about through reading the published dramas of Eugene O'Neil and the accounts in the Sunday papers of the fabulous royalties received by Avery Hopwood, Owen Davis, and all the other American dramatists who had palatial homes on Fifth avenue and beautiful country estates on Long Island.

There was no particular reason why Archie should have turned playwright outside of the fact that he was sore on his job in the hardware store and had a mad desire to get a peek at New York.

Why he should have picked the great American theater as a pathway out of Wichita was a mystery and will more than likely always remain so.

Nevertheless, these are the facts. One evening after a hard day in the hardware store selling nails and monkey wrenches to a lot of hard shelled guys, Archie came home, pulled off his boots, lit his corncob pipe, grabbed a copy of "Beyond the Horizon," by O'Neil, leaned back in the rocking chair, and read the entire play before he went to bed.

"I don't think so much of that junk," thought Archie, as he started to undress and prepare for the hay.

"So that's supposed to be a great play, is it?" he murmured to himself as he blew out the lamp and hopped into the feather mattress.

He pulled the red blanket up around his neck, laid on his back, closed his eyes, and began to think.

"Town houses, country estates, Rolls Royces, ten per cent of the gross receipts—a million dollars a year—gee, I wish I could write a play!"

Archie turned on his side and tried to go to sleep. No use—his mind was too busy.

He laid on his back again and started thinking harder than ever.

"Broadway must be a wonderful place. Gosh, I'd like to see what it looks like! Just my luck to be born in a burg like this—it's like being born in prison."

After a few seconds he repeated, "born in prison." He closed his eyes and said it again, "born in prison." He sat up in bed and said it once more, "born in prison." He smiled to himself. "Gee, that would be a great name for a play, 'Born in Prison'—wonder what that would look like in print."

He jumped out of bed, lighted the lamp, dug into his vest pocket for a lead pencil, and printed it out on the back of an envelope.

"BORN IN PRISON."

He stood the envelope on end, leaned against the lamp on the table moved back a few feet, and sized it up with a critical eye, just as a theatrical manager might pass on a stand of lithographic posters.

He read it aloud: "BORN IN PRISON."

He shook his head and scratched it with glee.

"Gee! That's more than a title; that's an inspiration," thought Archie.

He picked up the pencil again and added another line under the title:

Written by Archibald Fewclothes.

Once again he stood back and studied the thing—it was the first time his name had ever been connected with anything except his immediate family.

"And to think I thought this whole thing out myself! Gosh! I never thought it was in me."

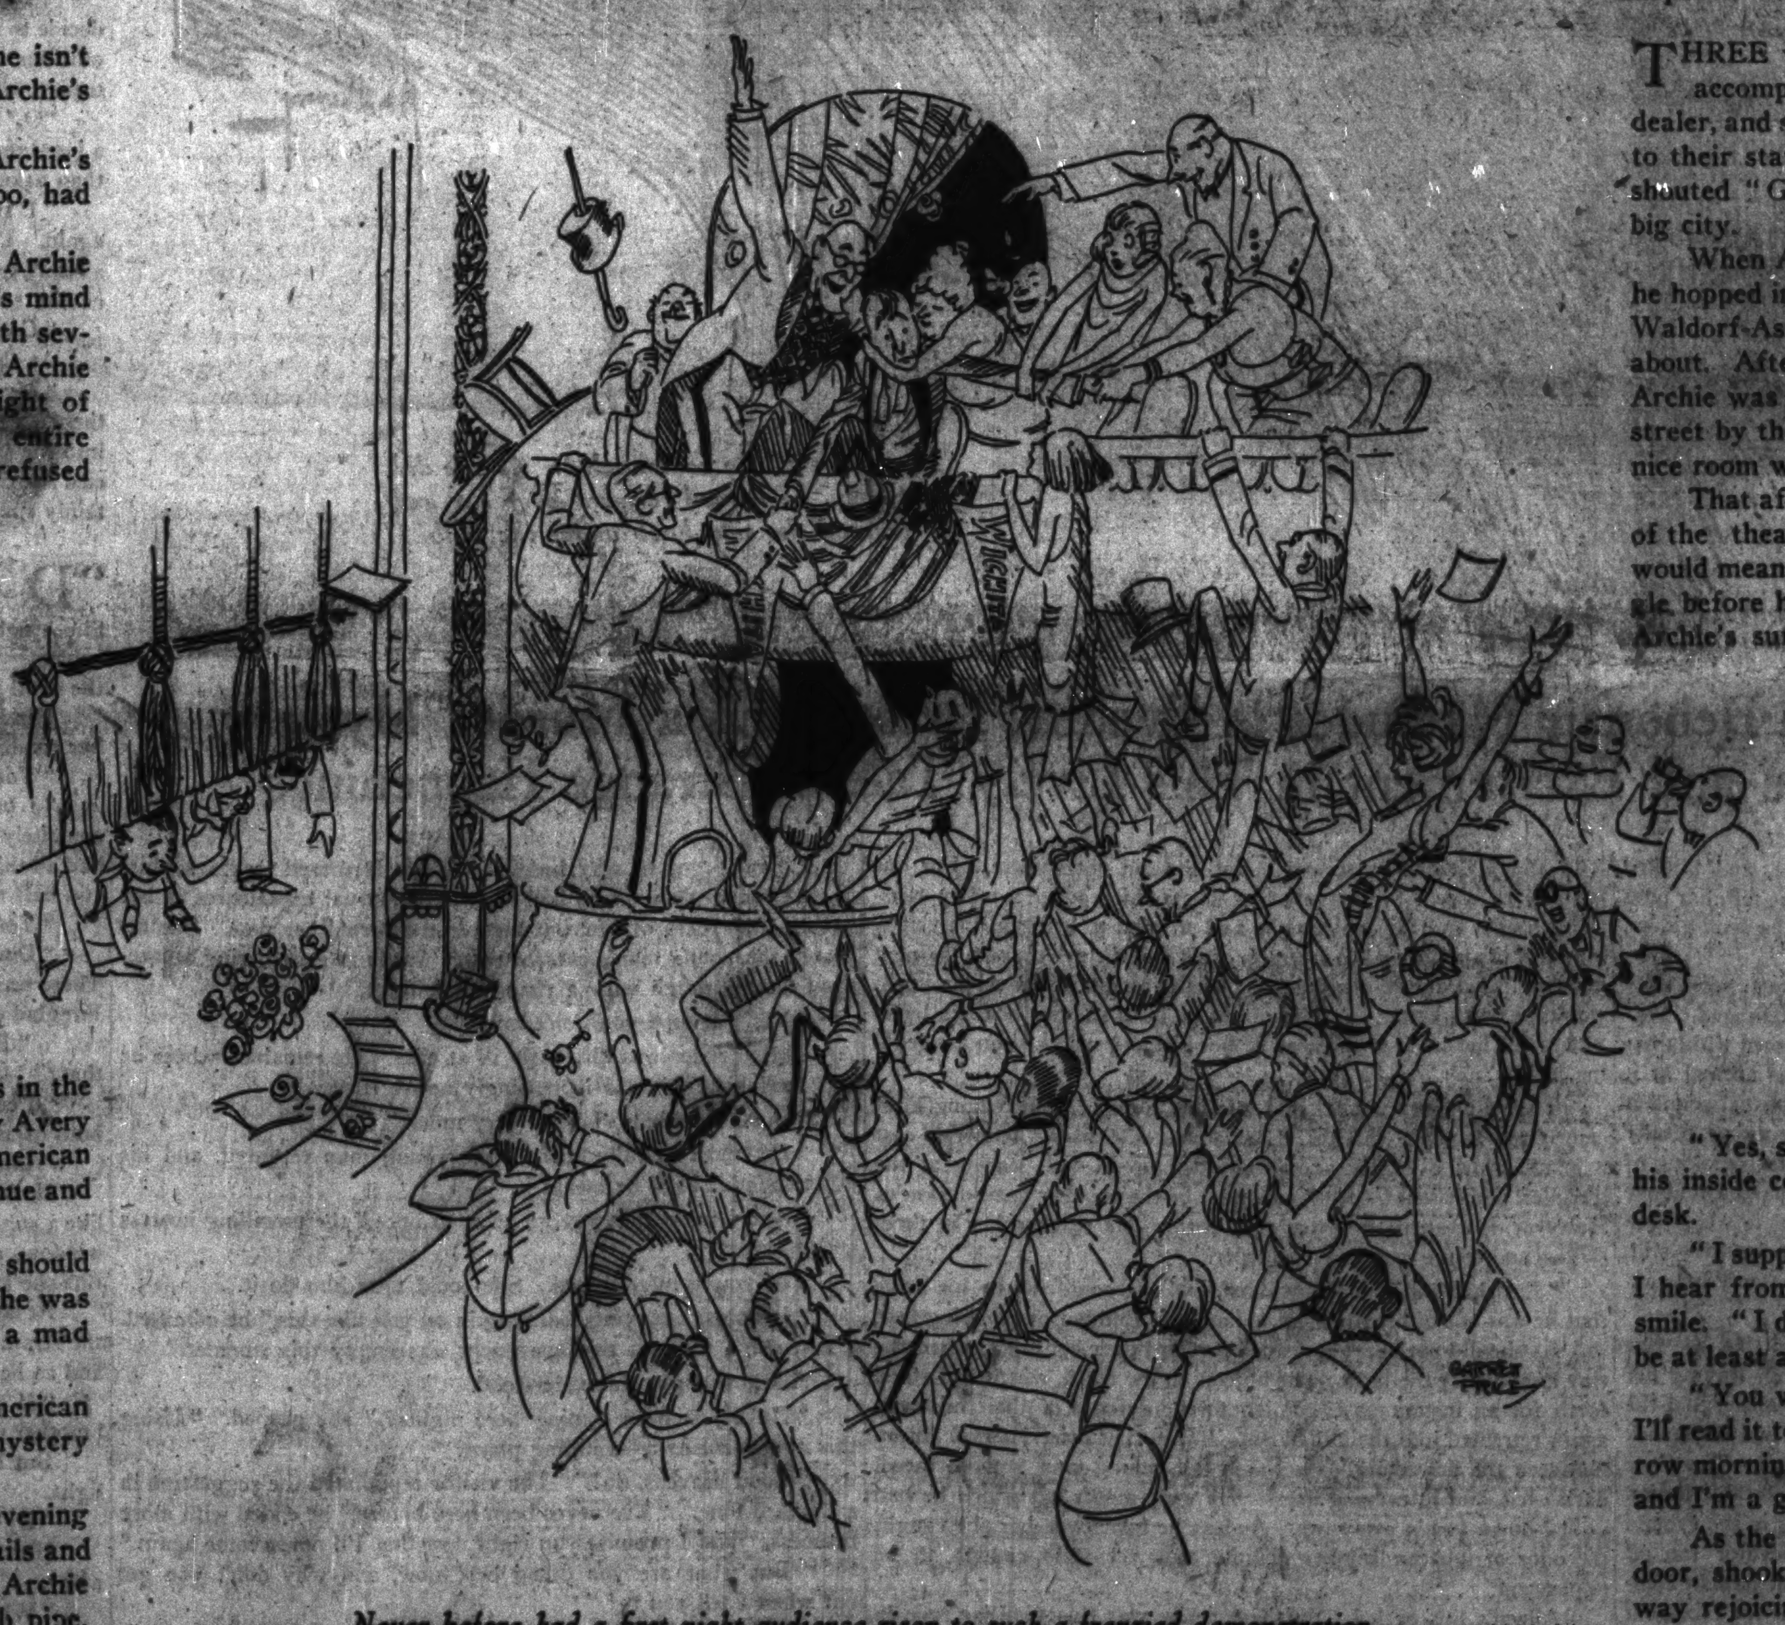
For fifteen minutes Archie stood there and read the thing over and over again.

"BORN IN PRISON."

Written by Archibald Fewclothes.

After a while he took the pencil and enlarged the letters of his name and then admired it all the more.

"I'll bet Eugene O'Neil never thought of anything like that—gee! maybe I've got dramatic talent and never knew it," and he walked up and down the room, repeating the title to himself again.



Never before had a first night audience risen to such a frenzied demonstration.

AND then another line of thought struck him. "Why should a man who can think up great ideas like this be working in a hardware store?"

"Why should Hopwood and Davis and O'Neil and all these guys I've been reading about have all this graft to themselves?"

After this outburst he stood in the middle of the room and glued his eyes to the ceiling in deep thought—dramatic thought—plot, situations, all came fast and furiously. His brain was on fire—he was constructing a story. It ran as follows:

A lad born in prison grew to manhood and became engaged to marry a millionaire's daughter, but the warden of the prison where he was born recognized him on his wedding day and denounced him as the offspring of a convict. The millionaire, refusing to allow Shaman to marry his daughter, calls off the wedding and drives the lad out of town.

The lad starts out to vindicate himself, and ten years later returns with absolute proof that the reason he was born in prison was that his poor, starving mother had been arrested, convicted, and sentenced to life imprisonment for stealing a loaf of bread.

The warden who denounced him turns out to be the owner of the bakery from which the bread was stolen, and the whole thing resolves itself into a frameup.

The repentant millionaire gives the lad his daughter and six hundred dollars a day for spending money, and the curtain falls just as the warden drops dead from heart disease.

Archibald Fewclothes thought this whole thing out in the middle of his room in the middle of the night in Wichita, Kansas, in exactly eleven minutes and a half.

"Good God, to think of the years I've wasted!" shouted Archie, as he rushed to the table and began putting the thing on paper.

For the following forty-six nights Archie's kerosene lamp burned on and on. The manuscript kept piling up and up and up until a hundred and fifteen pages were filled with words and full explanations of the gestures.

No wonder the poor lad became eccentric and hard to look at. A man of concentration—a student of the drama—a sudden discovery of hidden genius.

At last the drama was completed, and Archie fainted in the middle of his room in the middle of the night, just as he signed his name to the tag line of the play.

His family heard the thud as his exhausted body fell to the floor and rushed to the attic, where they discovered Archie buried in a mountain of manuscript, foaming at the mouth.

It was then that the terrible truth broke loose. Mr. and Mrs. Fewclothes and the brothers and sisters realized for the first time that there was a playwright in the family, and they all knelt down and prayed fervently that Archie's first play would be his last and that he'd soon recover and be himself again.

The news spread about town that Archie's affliction was of a serious nature, and the local doctor declared that he had come in contact during his medical career with several cases of the kind and that there was only one cure—BROADWAY.

Archie would have to go to Broadway to get rid of the play writing bug which was tearing down his constitution and destroying his mind.

"It's a small town disease called 'playwritus,'" explained Doctor Pillsberry. "Of course, there are some cases in the big cities, too, but it breaks out more frequently in the backwoods. Broadway is his only hope—it will either kill or cure him."

THREE weeks later the entire Fewclothes family, accompanied by Dr. Pillsberry, the local hardware dealer, and several of Archie's intimate friends, paraded to their station, lifted him aboard the day coach, and shouted "Good-by!" as the train pulled out for the big city.

When Archie arrived at the Grand Central station he hopped into a taxicab and had himself driven to the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, which he had read so much about. After a short conversation with the hotel clerk Archie was directed to a boarding house in West 21st street by the Waldorf house detective, where he got a nice room with a carpet for six dollars a day.

That afternoon Archie started out to do the rounds of the theatrical offices, thinking, of course, that it would mean weeks and weeks of persistency and struggle before he would ever get a hearing, but, much to Archie's surprise, the first manager Archie talked to became deeply interested the minute the lad pulled the title, "Born in Prison."

"That sounds like sensational box office stuff," said the producer, as he gave Archie a fifty cent cigar and asked him to sit down.

"That's what I thought when the idea first struck me. It all came to me suddenly in the middle of the night," Archie explained.

"O, I can understand that," said the manager. "No one would ever think of an idea like that in the daylight. Have you got the manuscript with you?"

"Yes, sir," and Archie pulled the manuscript from his inside coat pocket and threw it on the producer's desk.

"I suppose I'll have to wait five or six weeks before I hear from you," remarked Archie, with a knowing smile. "I dare say you're such a busy man that it will be at least a month before you get a chance to read it."

"You won't have to wait twenty-four hours, son; I'll read it tonight and let you know the answer tomorrow morning. The title hits me right between the eyes and I'm a great believer in hunches."

As the manager said this he showed Archie to the door, shook hands with him, and sent the lad on his way rejoicing.

ARCHIE was excited—thrilled—he couldn't sleep that night for anxiety and nervousness.

At ten o'clock sharp the next morning Archie was ushered into the producer's private sanctum by an overpolite attendant who told him the boss had telephoned he'd be a few minutes late, but to be sure Mr. Fewclothes was made comfortable and happy until he arrived.

"That sounds pretty good," thought Archie, as he copped a fifty cent cigar from the box extended toward him by the polite attendant.

Ten minutes later the manager arrived and broke into the office, apologizing all over the place for keeping Archie waiting.

"It would be just my luck to get a flat tire on a day like this," explained the producer, as he tore off his coat, threw it to the attendant, rushed over to Archie, and shook his hand.

"O, that's all right," said Archie. He couldn't think of anything else to say, so he let it go at that.

The manager, out of breath, puffed away to his desk and picked up the phone.

"Hello, Bill." He was speaking to his general manager in the front office. "Have you got that Fewclothes contract ready I telephoned you about from Long Island? You have, eh? All right, bring it right

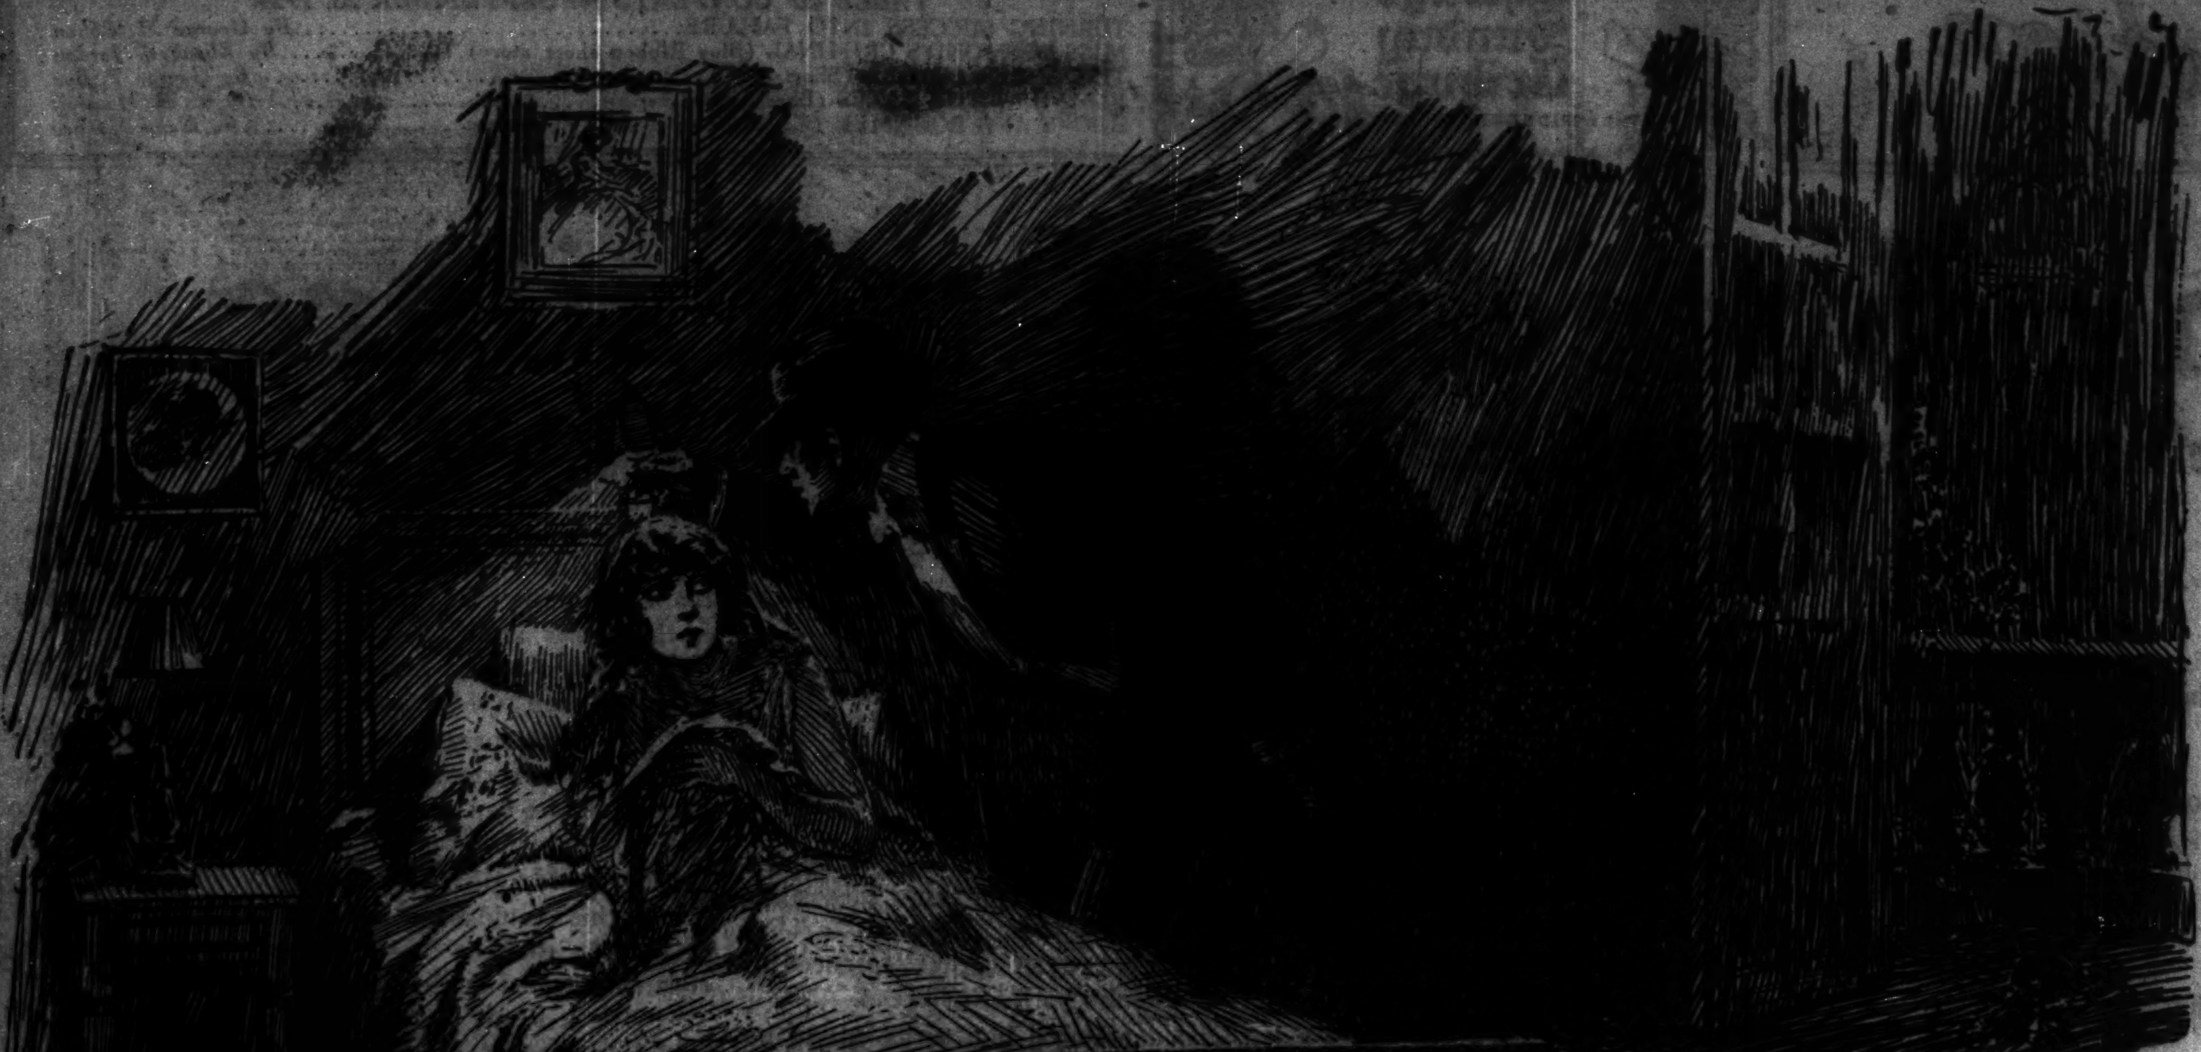
Miss



"Put that out," he commanded. As she did not obey, he leaned forward over her and pressed the tiny knob under the bulb.

Night and a Girl—a Debonair Marauder in Evening Dress—and a Murder Mystery There's Adventure and Excitement in This Lively Tale of Strange Happenings

AILEEN DESMOND started, opened her eyes, and blinked uncertainly at her surroundings. They were the familiar ones of her bedroom, looming reassuringly out of the semi-gloom. Somewhere in her apartment a clock struck one.

It was annoying to wake at that hour, but she was not yet wholly out of the deep abyss of sleep in which she had been plunged. Possibly she could sink back into it again. And yet far down within her some subconscious instinct warned that all was not as normal as it seemed. She had been awakened by a sound—an unusual sound it must have been, for she was in the habit of sleeping peacefully through such minor annoyances as flapping curtains, the creaking of unlatched doors, or even the pad of heavy feet in the apartment above her own. Her upstairs neighbors kept late hours. But this had been something different, and something quite near Aileen lay very still, feeling more intensely awake with every second that passed, and considering the matter.

With a grimace at her own expense she admitted that she was nervous. She had run into town for a day's shopping, leaving her mother in their country home, and, though she had realized that the caretaker of the apartment was never in it at night, it had not struck Aileen that she herself would object to being there alone. The place was aired and in order and altogether much more comfortable than a hotel. She could have her breakfast the next morning in the ground floor restaurant of the building. The passenger elevator ran all night, and if she desired the soothing knowledge that human companionship was near she could get it from the sound of the recurrent opening and closing of the elevator doors. The night elevator operator was a strong and willing worker, and he had never acquired finesse in the handling of those doors. But now, though Aileen listened, she missed the usual carefree crashing and banging that accompanied his trips. Even the night hawks of the big apartment house must be in by this time, and probably the elevator man was snatching a nap.

All these reassuring reflections passed through Miss Desmond's mind in much less time than it takes to set them down. Nevertheless, she found herself shivering slightly and, yes, waiting for something—subconsciously expecting the repetition of that sharp, unusual noise.

It came—from outside of the French window of her bedroom, a window to which a small balcony was attached. This balcony was intended largely for decoration. Incidentally, one or two persons could stand on it and drink in the view of the opposite wall of the Gothic building—a wall divided from the observers by a small square court. Certainly the balcony was not designed as an entrance to the building—being four stories from the ground. Yet it was as an entrance that this particular balcony was being used now. Even as she stared, her heart dropping a beat and then pounding wildly, she saw a figure outlined there. The next instant it had moved through the open window into her room. Its motions now were noiseless. What had awakened her must have been the intruder's unexpected descent upon some flower pots filled with red geraniums and confidingly left on the balcony railing by the caretaker.

MISS DESMOND recovered her breath. So she had a burglar to deal with! She had often wondered what she would do in such a contingency. She did not wonder now. Her heart had resumed more normal functioning, though it was still working too fast for comfort, and her brain acted with gratifying clearness. The wise move was to frighten the burglar away. A scream might do that—a loud and far-reaching scream. But she did not scream. For one reason, she was not quite sure that she could produce a really satisfying sound, and for another she had no wish to bring in the neighbors and the police and to figure in court and the newspapers the next morning. No, if she could get rid of the man without screaming it would be much better. A light might do it—a sudden, brilliant light. She raised her hand to the head of her bed and switched on her reading light.

The result was not all that she had hoped. The reading light came from one bulb, softened by an amber silk shade. It merely cast a gentle glow over her as she now sat up in bed, staring at the intruder, and it still left the remainder of the room in semi-darkness. However, it evidently startled the visitor. He reached her in three strides and spoke in a sharp whisper.

"Put that out," he commanded, and she could tell by his voice that he was out of breath, as if he had been running or climbing fast.

As she did not obey, he leaned forward over her and pressed the tiny knob under the bulb. The objects in the room, which had stood forth for an instant as if coming to the defense of their mistress, again retreated into their shadows. But in that brief interval Aileen had seen the newcomer. He was a tall, young man, smooth faced, dark eyed, and in evening dress. He wore a soft hat which he had pulled down to his eyebrows. And as he bent over her she caught the odor of tobacco smoke, definite, not yet stale enough to be unpleasant.

Aileen's lips curled. So there really was this familiar type in life as well as on the stage—the "Gentleman Jim" beloved of authors. Her heart was still beating too fast, but her brain was no longer afraid of him.

He had immediately moved away from the bed, and he now stood near the window he had entered, still breathing hard and hesitating as if not knowing quite what to do next. Possibly she had frightened him, after all. Possibly he meant to leave as he had come. But even as the faint hope was born in her, it perished. He had no intention of leaving. He was simply keeping quiet, and listening intently. His back was now toward her, she could see that much, and he appeared to be expecting some sound froh the court. She spoke incisively.

"Take what you want and go."

He wheeled at that, but still remained where he was, though she knew he was looking in her direction. Her heart beats quickened again. The knowledge of those unseen eyes, peering at her through the darkness, was almost more than she could endure. Then she heard an unexpected sound. Was it—could it be—a slight laugh. She had no time to decide, for he answered her at once and as quietly as she had spoken.

"Unfortunately, it's not quite as simple as that," he said.

THERE was something amazingly reassuring about his voice. It was not only the voice of an educated man, but it was an unusually agreeable voice, deep, rich, and really musical. Aileen subconsciously took in these facts and the comfort of them before she spoke again.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, simply that I can't leave just now. I know I'm frightening you," he added apologetically, "and I'm most awfully sorry. I assure you I'm not a burglar and that you have absolutely nothing to fear. But the cold truth is, I've simply got to stay here for a little while."

"You've got to stay here?" Aileen Desmond was a sophisticated young person who had had some unusual experiences in her twenty-four years of life, but her poise deserted her now. She repeated the young man's extraordinary words in stammering amazement shot through with a rising excitement.

"Yes. I hope you don't mind."

The intruder was obviously ill at ease. He remained where he was, and his tone was increasingly apologetic.

"But I do mind. I mind very much."

"I'm most awfully sorry," the young man repeated, and his voice sounded as if he meant it.

"And I insist that you go away at once," the unwilling hostess ended urgently.

The young man sighed. She could hear him do it.

"It's most annoying, bursting in on you like this," he admitted. "You see, I thought this apartment was empty this summer."

Aileen thought she understood.

"Have you been coming here nights?" she gasped. "Using this apartment as a—a hiding place?"

"Good heavens, no!" The visitor repudiated the suggestion in a shocked tone. "I've never been here before," he ended with more firmness, "and I promise you right now that I'll never come again."

"But what are you doing here now, and why don't you get out when I tell you to?"

Aileen asked the question in a voice that was almost a wail. As he took it in silence, she ended desperately, "All right. Then I'll have to scream."

As if the words had touched a spring in him, the young man sprang forward again.

"Don't do that!" he cried imperatively, with a sharp change of voice. "Don't dare to do that!" As if the sound of his own words had startled him he caught himself up. "Really, I couldn't think of letting you do that," he added, more quietly but firmly.

Aileen, who was still sitting up in bed, settled back against her pillow and stared up at him with an increased sensation of bewildered helplessness. Her eyes were becoming accustomed to the dimness of the room. She could now clearly see the outline of the figure towering above her, the gleam of its white shirt front, the oval of the smooth shaven face under the down drawn hat. This was the most amazing experience! Possibly it wasn't really an experience at all. Possibly it was merely one of those bad dreams in which one is half awake and conscious where one is.

"If I scream, how could you stop me?" she demanded, and was pleased to observe that he hesitated again, as if she had asked him a poser. But his hesitation was only momentary.

"With this," he said simply, and picked up her extra pillow. She was appalled.

"You wouldn't dare?" she quavered.

"Oh, yes I would. I'd dare almost anything rather than leave this room for a few minutes. I'm sorry I'm inconveniencing you, but I can't let your nervousness upset my plans. You may as well understand that at once. Come now, let's have a show down," he suggested in a more friendly tone. "I've told you I'm not a burglar and that you're not in the least danger. I've also told you I've got to stay here for a while. Why not make the best of it?"

"How long have you got to stay here?"

Aileen despised herself for the slight quiver in her voice but the situation was getting on her nerves. He responded in a different tone, gently, even kindly.

"I don't know. Perhaps ten minutes—perhaps half an hour—perhaps even longer."

"Couldn't you go into another room and wait?"

He hesitated.

"I wish I could. I'd prefer that myself—but how do I know what you'd do when I turned my back? No, I'd better keep you under my eye."

"Suppose I gave you my word that I wouldn't raise any alarm?" The suggestion was on the tip of Aileen's tongue. Her lips were parted to utter it, but they slowly closed. Could she endure the thought of this man sitting just outside of her room or wandering through her apartment? She knew she could not. Better, much better, follow his plan with her and keep him under her eye. She asked another question.

"Do you expect to go down to the street the way you came up?"

"I suppose I'll have to." Plainly the prospect did not appeal to the visitor, for his tone was dry.

"Why don't you leave quietly now, through my front door, walk down the three flights of stairs, and go out properly through the main entrance? The night man will think you have been having a late supper with some one in the building—say Mr. Cullen on the floor above me. His friends come and go at all hours."

She saw him turn and walk slowly toward the window, evidently considering the suggestion.

Then he shook his head.

"Too much risk," he decided aloud. "The night man might decide to investigate. One can never tell when those fellows will get officious. Besides, there's a policeman loitering just outside the entrance, who might recognize me."

"O." The girl's exclamation was involuntary. "Then you are a law-breaker—whether you're a burglar or not." She stated rather than asked.

"I suppose you might put it that way." His tone was dry again. Plainly the interview was getting on his nerves, as it had already got on hers. He moved restlessly about in the limited space of the small bedroom.

"Couldn't you wait on the balcony?"

At that he turned and looked at her.

"My dear woman," he said impatiently, "haven't I told you there's a policeman lurking below?" She saw him thrust his hands into the side pockets of the light evening coat he wore, and she fancied she could see his annoyed expression through the darkness. Certainly she could imagine it.

"DON'T call me your dear woman!" she flashed.

"I won't. But I will admit that you've got a lot of pluck." She caught the gleam of his white teeth, heard him chuckle again, evidently in restored good humor. "Most women would be raising the devil by this time," he cheerfully admitted.

His impertinence, as she interpreted it, added the final touch to her combined fear and anger.

"You're intolerable!" she hastingly exclaimed.

"I beg your pardon! I was forgetting myself!" He spoke so contritely that to her surprise her anger cooled. "I know just how bad all this seems to you. I force myself into your room and frighten you half to death——"

"You don't frighten me!"

"Don't I?" He seemed surprised and again a little amused. There was a faint suggestion of his now familiar chuckle. "At least I'm glad of that," he ended, politely.

"But I simply loathe having you here. Do you understand that?"

"I certainly do, and I loathe being here. It's very annoying for both of us."

"Annoying!"

He took that in a silence which deepened till it lay between them like a substance. He had retired to the room's remotest end, near the window, and was resting a shoulder negligently against the wall. But she knew his caution and watchfulness were unchanged.

At last Aileen, her nerves now at the snapping point, could endure the strain no longer. Abruptly she again switched on the night light, and as he started forward she spoke.

"If you move another step," she said quickly, "I'll scream. Smother me if you want to. I can't endure this another instant——"

But he had started back, staring at her through the room's soft light.

"By jove!" he gasped. "You're a young girl!"

Her reply sounded odd to her own ears—very faint, very far away.

"What—did—you—think—I—was?" Her head was whirling, and he and the room seemed whirling with it.

"Why—I—naturally I thought you were an older woman—here, I'll clear out. I'm going! For God's sake don't faint!"

She saw him take two strides to the balcony, was vaguely conscious that he swung over it, that he dropped.

WHEN she recovered consciousness the night light was still glowing above her. She stared, wide eyed, at the spot where the intruder had stood. He was gone—or had he been there at all? The whole experience seemed more than ever like a bad dream. Probably it had been a bad dream. Yet, if she had dreamed, why was the reading light burning and why—slowly and shiveringly she got out of bed to investigate—yes, why was one of the flower pots on the balcony broken? And why was that thick ivy on the wall at the right of the balcony torn away and hanging in tattered festoons?

No, it had not been a dream. She closed the French window, locked it securely, and drew closely together across it the wide chintz window curtains. She forced herself to make an inspection of the entire apartment. Every window was shut and fastened, every door was locked or bolted. Everything, in short, was normal. As if in further emphasis of the normality of the atmosphere, the passenger elevator had stopped, seemingly on the floor below, and she heard the bang of its opening and closing door. The big clock in the center hall of the apartment struck two. It had struck one when she was aroused. How long had the intruder been there? How long had she been unconscious?

She went back to her room and returned to bed. It was a September night but she was still shivering. She drew the bed clothing close to her chin, clenched her teeth tightly to keep them from chattering, and resolutely summoned all her will power to help her to go to sleep. Her first impulse had been to telephone to some friend to come to her for the rest of the night—some older woman who would also advise her as to whether or not it was her duty to notify the police of what had happened. But though she had many friends, few of them were back in town so early in the autumn season, and though she summoned these before her in mental review she found no one among them she felt justified in calling up at such an hour for such a service. The thought of telephoning to the police was even more unpleasant.

At last her common sense reasserted itself. The experience had been unpleasant but it was over. It could not be repeated. She was as safe here in her locked apartment as she would be anywhere. She would get through the night as calmly as she could, and the next morning she would take the first train to her country home, where her mother would give her better advice as to her future course than any one else could offer. Having reached this proper decision, Miss Desmond turned out the reading light, sternly ignoring a strong inner disinclination to do so. She then resolutely composed herself for slumber and, to her amazement when she subsequently realized the fact, fell asleep almost at once.

When she awoke a brilliant sun was vainly trying to force its beams through the chintz window curtains, and the unventilated room was warm and close and subtly suggestive of tobacco smoke. The visitor, she knew, had not smoked, but he must have been smoking just before he entered her room. She remembered that the odor of tobacco had hung around him. She sprang out of bed, opened the French doors and threw them wide, parted the curtains slightly to let in the fresh air, and hurrying into her bath room set the cold water running into the tub. She always awoke like a giant refreshed, meeting a jocund morning with a spirit as jocund and remaining undashed even by gloomy weather. This, obviously, was a day after her own heart, and as she splashed in the cold bath she again inclined to the belief that the night's experience had been simply an unpleasant dream.

AS she dressed, however, her mood sobered. She had taken another look at the broken flower pot and the torn and tortured ivy, an impulse she hardly understood made her find a pair of scissors and cut off the ragged ends of ivy near her balcony. Also she swept up the pieces of the broken flower pot with the fresh earth that had spilled from it, and wrapping these with the ivy hid them all in the corner of the linen closet under an impressive heap of winter blankets and quilts. Then, looking as charming as usual, and feeling almost as well as she looked, she entered the elevator to go down to the first floor dining rooms for breakfast. She had had an adventure—a real one. It would be rather good fun to tell her friends about it later on.

It was barely eight o'clock, but Kelly, the day operator, came on duty at seven and, as usual, he had lightened the toil of his first hour of service by a careful perusal of a morning newspaper. He liked Miss Desmond, who was always generous in the matter of tips, and he greeted her this morning with the added expansiveness of one who has news to impart.

"That's the kinda neighborhood we got!" he punctuously announced, and held up the first page of his newspaper. The black type of a scare head met the girl's eyes.

JAMES F. CROSBY MURDERED IN HIS HOME

Aileen turned away with a shudder of distaste.

"I never read accounts of murders," she told Kelly. Kelly was disappointed but not surprised. Some women were like that.

"But Mr. Crosby lived right across the street," he explained. "You must of saw him often."

"O, was it that Crosby?" Aileen was appalled. She knew of "that Crosby" only as a rich, idle, hugely dissipated young man with a reputation which kept nice girls from knowing him better. He had been a classmate of her brother at New Haven, but Jack had never liked him. Still, after all, he was a neighbor.

"Sure, it was." Kelly was off again. "His butler found him dead in his library at one o'clock this mornin'. They don't know yet who done it.

Aileen turned to face the lad, and he observed that there was no lack of interest in her expression now.

"You mean," she asked slowly, "they haven't caught the murderer?"

"Course they ain't caught him. It's got so now a guy can walk in your house any time he wants to an croak you, an walk out again, an go about his other business. The newspapers prints a lot of clews that don't mean nothin'," Kelly ended disgustedly. "What d'ye know about that?"

His question was purely oratorical, for Kelly was sure Miss Desmond knew nothing whatever about it. Miss Desmond herself was not so sure. An icy chill was wriggling down her spine.

"You say the butler found Mr. Crosby dead at one o'clock this morning?" she asked, forcing the words through lips that felt stiff.

"Yes'm. He'd only been dead five or ten minutes. He was kinda warm. The butler musta heard the shot. Anyway, he heard somethin'—and he listened awhile and then finally he went down stairs——"

The listener ruthlessly interrupted the freshet of words.

"Will you lend me your newspaper for a few minutes? I don't suppose I could get one in the dining room."

While she waited she read the newspaper.

"Sure!" Kelly willingly handed it over. He was getting a rise out of Miss Desmond now, all right, all right. He guessed she didn't like the idea of murderers runnin' loose in this neighborhood any more than he did.

"You was alone last night, too," he added, as a final thrilling touch, when he opened the door to let her out. That got her. He distinctly saw her shiver.

AILEEN went into the dining room, and sitting down at a small table in a retired corner ordered a pot of coffee and some hot milk. She was not sure she could swallow it but she had to order something and the coffee would be good for her if she could get it down. While she waited she read the newspaper, holding it before her with surprisingly steady hands. Of actual news there was little beyond what Kelly had told her. The rest of the first page was given up to the hectic life story of young Crosby—a story which was not pleasant reading and which almost reconciled a reader to the young man's violent passing.

Some emphasis was laid on the detail that the young man seemed to have been alone on the night of the murder. As a rule, solitude was a condition he had carefully avoided. Late parties were his specialty—supper parties and card parties. That night he had come home alone just after midnight, and abruptly ordering the servants to bed had retired to his study to smoke and look over his accumulated mail. His valet had left him with the conviction that his master expected a late visitor—or late visitors—who he himself would admit or who had latch keys to the house, which Crosby had given to some of his intimates. That sort of thing often happened.

But no servant had heard any visitors come or go, which was not surprising, as all of them had promptly and relievedly retired to their distant upstairs quarters. If the murderer had used a noiseless pistol, the murder would not have been discovered till morning. As it was, the butler heard the shot only by chance, as he was passing through the upper hall. At first he had thought it merely a popping cork—a familiar sound in this house at these hours. He had even gone on to his room before he decided to come down and investigate.

When the police arrived there was only one suggestion that a visitor had been admitted. The two cigar stubs found in the ash tray by the dead man's easy chair were the stubs of two different brands of cigars—one of them not the kind of cigar Crosby smoked himself or had on hand to offer guests. However, it was a good cigar, and of so well known a brand that it offered little help to the police. Thousands of men in the crowded city must have smoked the same kind of a cigar last night. Also, of course, some one might have given it to Crosby during the day and he might have smoked it that night because it had been in his cigar case.

Miss Desmond's delicate nostrils quivered. Suddenly and almost as definitely as if it were in the room the odor of cigar smoke returned—the faint odor which had hung almost imperceptibly over her room during the intruder's visit and which she had again detected that morning after the room's unventilated night.

Her coffee came to her and she drank it. Then she returned to her apartment, restoring Kelly's newspaper with a word of thanks as she entered the elevator and discouraging with considerable tact the youth's obvious desire to discuss further the details of the murder. At the threshold of her bedroom she hesitated, shuddering. She felt she could not enter it, would never sleep in it again. But she forced herself to go in, to repack hurriedly the small handbag she had brought to town, and to write a note to the caretaker, whose leisurely habit it was, according to Kelly, "to drop round" about nine in the morning. Then she summoned her taxicab, caught her train, and within an hour was in her mother's arms.

ORDINARILY Mrs. Desmond would have been touched by the unusual fervor with which her only child clung to her after so brief a separation, but today she appeared to see nothing odd about it. She was too frankly relieved by Aileen's return and too concerned with a new anxiety of her own to be especially observant. For a long moment her face, oddly like her daughter's and up till recently surprisingly young and fresh, rested wearily against Aileen's.

"I'm so glad you're back, dear," she said heavily. "I've had an awful night—with the same pain that's bothered me so much lately. I've decided to follow your advice and have Doctor Chapin look me over. I meant to wait till afternoon, but I think he's in his office now—and since I've made up my mind I'd like to have it over. Suppose you telephone and make an appointment."

Aileen telephoned, with a sinking heart. She had been worried about her mother for weeks, but Mrs. Desmond had robustly and steadily attributed her frequent attacks of pain to neuralgia. This morning the girl was shocked by her appearance. Her mother looked actually gray.

Doctor Chapin made an immediate appointment, and he showed further consideration by not keeping his patient waiting when she reached his office, though every chair in the waiting room was occupied. Mrs. Desmond went into his private consulting rooms with her handsome head held high and a little spot of color on each cheek. Aileen knew those signs. It was thus that Honore Desmnd had always met the crises in her life. With just that look, and just that poise of her head, she had taken the news of her husband's death in an automobile accident. It was with just that expression, that poise of head, that she had slowly risen from her knees after closing in death the eyes of her only son five years before. Watching her mother now, Aileen knew, for the first time, what Mrs. Desmond expected to be told—and turning her eyes from her mother to the face of the old doctor, as the examination progressed, she also realized he was about to tell it.

He made it as easy as he could. An immediate operation, of course—the next day, if possible. Dr. Chapin would make all the necessary arrangements at once. And there was hope—yes, yes, beyond question there was hope. Out in the waiting room, for example, there was at this moment a charming woman who had gone through the same thing two years ago and who was now getting on very well, but still dropped in twice a year for observation. Mrs. Desmond's temperament was also immensely in her favor. She had such pluck, such resiliency.

Honore Desmond checked the optimistic outpouring with a smile, and rose.

"Of course, there's hope," she said cheerfully. "We'll motor into the hospital this afternoon, when we hear you have made all the arrangements; and I'd like the operation tomorrow morning, please—as early as possible."

To Aileen she said on the way home, "We're going to have a busy day, my darling. We must telephone Mr. Rawling to come out from town at once. I expect to live, but I'm going to put my 'house in order' just the same—and to leave nothing to chance. Thank God, that though you may be alone in the world you won't have any financial worries. Life will give you all that money can buy, anyway."

"All that money can buy!"

AILEEN repeated the words to herself six months later, as she sat alone in a compartment of a night express traveling from Cologne to Ostend. She had a horror of foreign sleeping cars, and she never traveled at night if she could help it. But she was hastening to Ostend in response to the sudden summons of her closest friend, Harriet West, who had unexpectedly arrived there with her father, who had been summoned to Ostend on professional business. The Wests would be there only one more day, and Harriet had telegraphed Aileen—who had recently left them in London—to meet her and go back to London with her. From London the three were going to Plymouth to take there next Saturday's ship, on which it had been agreed that they would sail for home together.

The prospect of Harriet's companionship was exhilarating. Aileen, who had come to Germany on a side visit to a former schoolmate, had not expected to see her friends again till they met on the steamer. She felt a lightness of heart she had rarely experienced in the long half year following her mother's death—months in which she had passed through the chill and desolate loneliness known only to those who have not a blood tie left in the world. Money? Yes, as her mother had promised, she had plenty of that. But each day was teaching her how little money can really buy. Friends? Yes, plenty of them. But friends were all more or less absorbed in their own families—more or less bound by family obligations. Aileen had not known there could be such loneliness as that she had experienced since her mother left her. However, she had kept her independence and freedom of action, had definitely refused hired companions and the position of paying guest in the homes of others. Loneliness was to be preferred to the wrong sort of companionship. Which sage reflection was even now sharply emphasized by the discovery that the train had stopped at a station; that the door of her compartment was opening, and that an undesired companion was joining her.

Aileen frowned. One of the things money could buy was supposed to be privacy. She had reserved this compartment—had tipped the guard most lavishly on the distinct understanding that she was to remain in it undisturbed. Also, the compartment itself was plainly labeled as for ladies only. Yet here was a man coming in, bag and baggage—the latter borne by the puffing and overladen guard who, under cover of his burden, directed appealing glances of apology at Aileen.

"This will do nicely, thank you."

At the crisp words the girl started as if a spring in her had been touched. The next words were addressed directly to her.

"I'm sorry to disturb you"—the tone was cold and formal—"but the train is crowded and there was no other place." There was a familiar and disconcerting flash of white teeth. In the next instant a startled word in a wholly different tone.

"You!" the newcomer jerked out, and he added slowly, "By Jove!"

HISTORY, Aileen dully reflected, was repeating itself. He had been startled, had exclaimed "By Jove" in leaving her. He was startled on seeing her again, as well he might be, and again he was calling on Jove. But this exclamation seemed one of pure amazement. There was no fear in it. He had the poise, the sang froid of the typical criminal. Even as she stared at him, incredulously and with whitening cheeks, he went on with an air of easy assurance.

"But I beg your pardon. I shouldn't have spoken. Naturally you may not care to renew our—may I say acquaintance?"

Yes, he was smiling—there was no doubt of that. And the smile swept Aileen back over six months of time, and into the dark bedroom she had never slept in since that night. For a moment the nightmare of that hour repeated itself. Then her nerves steadied. She was no longer the girl of that occasion. She was a woman, steadied by life and death and suffering. In her devotion to her dying mother she had almost forgotten this creature of the underworld who for an hour had terrorized her. He could no longer terrorize her and she knew it. The blood returned to her face. Subconsciously she took in the odd similarity in the setting of their two encounters. The hour was—must be—about the same. She herself was in a corner of the compartment, near a window, and directly under a reading light. She had an open book in her hand over which she had stared speechlessly at the newcomer.

In the brightness of the light thrown down upon her he now saw her head rise and two spots of color come to her cheeks. Honore Desmond's daughter had come into her inheritance of courage.

The newcomer sat down in silence. The guard had closed the door of the compartment and departed. The two passengers were locked in together until the train reached the next station.

"It seems to be my fate to frighten you to death," the stranger murmured discontentedly. "But I can't see quite why you were in such a panic just now. If there was any way to get out, short of jumping through the window," he went on, "I'd take it."

Aileen found words.

"Please don't speak to me!" she said quietly.

The stranger flushed.

"Certainly not," he agreed, "if that's the way you want it."

He took off his traveling cap and overcoat, hung them up, opened a small bag, found a book in it, and establishing himself in the opposite corner, away from her, prepared to read. Aileen looked at her wrist watch. To her dismay it was not running. She had forgotten to wind it in the excitement of starting on this all night journey. The stranger took out his watch and glanced at it.

"One o'clock," he said pleasantly, and he added, with an irrepressible smile—"our favorite hour for a tete-a-tete!"

Aileen lowered her book, and looked at him. She had decided what to do. At the next station she would turn him over to the authorities; even though to do so meant delay and publicity from which her soul shrank.

"I'm shut up here with you," she said coldly, 'and short of stopping the train and raising a general alarm I can't get rid of you. But if you continue to annoy me in the meantime, I shall certainly ring for the guard."

At her first words the blood had rushed to his dark, good looking face, but his eyes met hers calmly and without resentment.

"I KNOW I gave you a horrible fright that night," he said gently. "I've been wishing ever since I could meet you again and explain——"

He stopped, as her hand rose toward the bell, and with an almost imperceptible shrug he picked up the book he had put down and settled himself more comfortably in his corner.

Aileen also kept her eyes upon the printed page before her, but she did not turn it. Her brain was working busily. She was sure that in such an emergency Harriet West would come to her assistance, bringing her father. Mr. West was a lawyer and a famous one. He would know what to do in this crisis and how to protect Aileen, his client, from any save absolutely necessary participation in the horrible affair. She wished now she had discussed the matter with her mother but, of course, her plan to do so had been upset, almost wholly lost sight of during the strain of the operation and the subsequent hopeless fight for life. Even on Mrs. Desmond's "good days," of which she had so few, the subject was obviously not one to be discussed. It would have excited and alarmed her.

Aileen herself had deliberately taught her memory to keep away from the incident. She had read no more newspaper accounts of the Crosby murder. She had not followed the trial or discussed the killing with anyone. To drop the slightest hint of that midnight visit to her room might mean she would be drawn into the hideous mess—to the distress and probable injury to her mother.

But now her mother had gone. Now no one but herself and the criminal would suffer if she performed the duty that came so clearly before her. As she thus reflected, deep in her subconscious soul, she was aware of an instinct that refused to accept as a criminal this quiet, handsome young man, with his look of race and breeding. Suddenly he rose, and she started violently. He threw down with a hopeless gesture the book he still held in his hand.

"I'm only going to put on my overcoat," he patiently explained. "It's getting chilly."

As he slipped into the heavy garment he looked at her curiously, reading aright the expression in her eyes.

"By Jove," he exclaimed again, "you have an actual horror of me, haven't you?" He stood staring at her, as if dazed by the shock of this discovery, the overcoat still half on and half off.

"You act as if I were a criminal," he added slowly. Abruptly, as once before, the nerve tension the girl was under snapped.

"What else are you?" she demanded, and then stopped, startled by the sound of her own words.

He drew on the coat, buttoned it, sat down again, and looked at her.

"So that's it," he said thoughtfully. "You still think I'm a murderer. I knew at the time you might, as it was the night of the Crosby affair that I dropped in. But surely you've read the newspapers since then. You know that the woman who murdered Crosby has just confessed, don't you?"

Aileen did not reply. She merely looked at him, uncertainly, wondering whether to accept or reject this story. He took her silence as permission to continue.

"I suppose being over here you didn't read about it—though both the English and French newspapers had reports of the trial this month. Crosby had cut quite a swath in Europe, too, it seems, and a lot of Europeans knew him——"

HE had gone on talking to give her time to think. Now she broke in suddenly.

"Is it true—what you have just said?"

"I assure you it is," he said, quietly, but you needn't take my word. When you get to Ostend, you can go over the newspaper files and find the printed reports. It was the old story with Crosby. The woman—she was merely a girl and she had been a nice girl—had been abominably treated by him. She was half crazy, for she still loved him. She went to his house that night by appointment, carrying a revolver with her. They had a quarrel and she shot him. She hid for a few months and she could have got away entirely but she suddenly decided to give herself up. It seems she had hardly eaten or slept since the murder. The jury acquitted her, I'm happy to say."

"Then what were you——" Aileen brought out the words with an effort. Her dominant feeling was incredulity, shot through with an amazing sense of relief.

"What was I doing in your room? That's what I've wanted to explain to you ever since that night. May I do it now?"

"Yes," she said simply. Of course, all this might be a lie, but she would at least hear his story. Perhaps, after all——

He leaned forward.

"This is between us," he began. "It must always be between us. No one else knows it or will ever know it so far as I'm concerned but—I saw the shooting!"

"You saw it?"

He nodded.

"I was there. Crosby and I were classmates at college. I despised him then and I've despised him ever since and I had nothing to do with him. In fact, we only met twice since we left New Haven. But the day of the murder he telephoned for me, on one of his sudden impulses. I'm a lawyer and he had quarreled with his last batch of lawyers. He was always quarreling with the people associated with him and calling on a new set," the speaker interpolated. "So he happened to think of me. He wanted me to come that evening and fix up some sort of financial settlement for the girl and her child. He was willing to do that on condition that she agree to let him alone henceforth."

He stopped and waited an instant, but Aileen did not speak.

"I didn't care for the job," he went on, then, "and I told him so and explained I had an important dinner and theater engagement that night—a semi-business affair with some out of town clients. He said I could come late, so I agreed. We had supper after the play and I didn't get to Crosby's house till after twelve. The girl wasn't there yet, so we smoked and waited till she came. When she finally arrived Crosby was high handed and brutal as usual, and the girl lost her head over something he said. Any girl would. It made me want to knock him down."

He looked at her apologetically.

"I'll make it as short as I can. She shot him through the heart and he was dead when she struck the floor. Neither of us touched him. She gave me one look, dropped the pistol in a pocket of the coat she wore, and slipped out of the house like a shadow. I followed her as far as the sidewalk, and then we separated. Neither of us had spoken a word. There was no one in sight and she got away safely. I crossed the street and saw a policeman coming around the corner. He was at such a angle that he could have seen me coming down the steps of Crosby's house. I didn't know whether he had or not. I don't know yet, but I don't think he had. Anyhow I didn't dare to walk into our front entrance under his eyes."

Aileen interrupted him for the first time.

"You mean that you lived there—in our building?"

"Yes, in the fourth floor apartment right next to yours. I moved in in May, just after you and your mother left for the country——"

"But why did you——"

"That's what I'm telling you. I walked around the corner, doubled back behind the Belvedere on the side street, and got into our court. My plan was to shin up the wall near the balconies and get into my apartment through the window of my bedroom, which is always open. I had done it last June on a wager, after an alumnae dinner, so I knew it was practicable. But when I got up my window was closed and locked for the only time that summer! That's what they call the irony of fate. Your window was open. I knew your apartment was empty, so I plunged in. You see, I hadn't much time to think. When I found some one in the room I thought at first it was the caretaker, and after you spoke I decided that it was your mother, in town for the night. I had caught a glimpse of the officer just as I crawled over the balcony. He was on the street below, looking around, but not upward. I thought he had not seen me, but of course I couldn't be sure."

"BUT why—the girl had got away."

"Don't you see? I was the only witness of the murder. If I was recognized and held as a witness, I'd have to tell the whole story. My sympathies were all with the girl, and I wanted to save her if I could. To do it I had to keep out of the way. Crosby's valet knew the girl and I were coming, but I didn't think he'd mention it. He was a decent chap. Probably he was playing a waiting game, as I was. I was simply giving the girl her chance. I had no idea of dying in the chair for her or any nonsense of that sort, and if I had been dragged into the dirty mess I'd have told the truth. But I wanted to keep out of it. Luck was with me, as it happened. I had engaged my passage for Europe the following day. I didn't go on that ship, but I sailed on another and lay low, even over here, till the girl gave herself up. Since then I've been getting ready to go home, and I'm sailing for New York on the Oceania next Saturday."

"Are you really? So am I."

Aileen's tone was so warm and friendly that he smiled.

"That's nice, isn't it?" he said. "Perhaps I can make myself useful. I've got a lot to make up to you. I can't tell you how I worried over you——"

"Over me?"

"Yes, over the after effect of such a shock to a girl." "Then," his voice dropped and his eyes ran over her somber garb, "I read of your mother's death and that it had left you alone. You see, I read the newspapers carefully."

ONE point still puzzled Aileen.

"But why didn't you slip out of my apartment that night into your own? You had a latch key, didn't you?"

"Of course I did, and my first plan was to go home. As I said, I hadn't much time to think. But when I saw the policeman I was afraid to move. I knew that any minute some one might come rushing out of Crosby's house with the news, and if the valet happened to mention who Crosby expected it wouldn't take the police five minutes to be battering at my door. So I stayed exactly where I was—as you have reason to know—and when I left I went straight to Hoboken and got on a ship that sailed in the morning. Fortunately I had plenty of money on me, as I had expected to sail the next day, anyway. Of course, I was taking a big chance, for I might have been arrested as accessory to the crime," he ended cheerfully.

"Did you know the girl?"

"Never saw her before or since that night," said the young man. "But she's the right sort. She was mighty careful not to drag my name into the case when she gave herself up. There was a hint during the trial that the valet had cherished a hopeless passion for her. Probably that's why he kept his mouth shut. But I'm forgetting my credentials."

He put his hand in his pocket and taking out his card case handed her a bit of pasteboard.

MR. JULIAN AVERY
The Metropolitan Club.

Aileen looked up, her eyes glowing.

"Jack's chum?" she breathed.

"Yes. Your brother and I were roommates at New Haven. You were in Europe during most of our vacations, and when he died I was in the hospital with appendicitis. So you and I never met. But I had met your mother."

"She admired you so much. She said you were wonderful to her when you came to see her after you got out of the hospital." Aileen's hands went out to him. "And you were wonderful about that poor girl, too—giving up six months of your life for her."

Julian Avery was a young man who recognized an opportunity when it came his way. He held the hands tightly.

"I want to give up all the rest of my life to you," he whispered. "I haven't thought of anything but you since that night." His voice changed. "But I mustn't frighten you again by telling you so too soon, must I?" he added, contritely.

"No," she agreed, "you musn't tell me—too soon."

Aileen's eyes met his with a smile in them.

TURNING SUCCESS INTO FAILURE - - - By George M. Cohan

in. Mr. Fewclothes is here now, waiting to sign it." Then he turned, with tears of joy streaming down his cheeks.

"I read the play, Fewclothes," he said. "I'm showman enough to realize that the basic idea in the title itself, 'Born in Prison,' spells real theatrical success, so I'm giving you a contract for five per cent of the gross receipts and five hundred dollars in advance.

"Of course, you'll get full credit for the authorship and I'll guarantee that your name will appear as big as the title of the play. Is that satisfactory, Mr. Fewclothes?"

"Anything at all is agreeable to me," replied the dumfounded Kansas author.

The general manager from the front office brought in the royalty contract, which Archie joyfully signed, and upon receiving the check for five hundred advance shook hands with the producer and promised everlasting gratitude, hurried back to the boarding house, packed his grip, arrived back in Wichita three days later, and announced to his family and the entire population of the town that his maiden dramatic effort, "Born in Prison," would soon be given a big Broadway production by one of New York's greatest managers.

Archie was the toast of the town. All the rich men's daughters made a pass at him, but Archie played no favorites in the great series of royal entertainments that followed in Wichita's smart set in honor of the rising young dramatist and his impending triumph.

SIX weeks later Archie was invited by the manager to come to New York and bring his entire family at the management's expense to witness the premiere performance of "Born in Prison."

All Wichita expressed a desire to make the trip, and a few days later Archie, his father, mother, and all his brothers and sisters, along with old Doc Pillsberry, the family physician, and the hardware dealer for whom Archie used to work, all piled aboard the New York express and arrived in the great metropolis the morning of the opening night.

Two upper stage boxes were reserved for the author and his family and friends. The one in which he, Archie, was to sit was draped with Wichita pennants and American flags.

Upon his entrance into the theater that night a few minutes before the rise of the curtain a great round of applause (which was started by the lady ushers) went up as Archie and his family crowded into the decorated box.

The word was whispered about the audience that the young man of the party was the author of the play, and opera glasses were aimed at the Wichita contingent from all over the house.

Archie was thrilled; so was Archie's father; yes, and his mother, too. So were his brothers and sisters. Even old Doc Pillsberry and the hardware dealer confided to each other that they got a real kick out of Archie's reception from the first night crowd.

The curtain went up and the play began. Archie sat on the edge of his chair, nervous as a newborn kitten. At the end of the first act seven or eight curtain calls had to be taken by the members of the cast before the applause subsided.

The audience then stood up in a body and turned its attention to Archie's box, while the people in the orchestra applauded and shouted their approval of the opening scene.

A crowd of New York society women in the adjoining box began showering Archie's entire family with cut roses which they tore from their corsages, and then insisted upon leaning over the railing and shaking hands with the heretofore unknown playwright.

Archie was livid, rigid; he could hardly move. His mother bent over and kissed him. His father started to cry, while all his brothers and sisters waved their hands to the applauding first nighters on the floor below.

"That's a great piece of writing, Archie," said Dr. Pillsberry, as he slapped the boy on the back.

"I should say so," exclaimed the hardware dealer. "I never knew it was in you, Arch."

Archie never uttered a word—just sat there without a murmur or a sign of emotion throughout the ten minutes' intermission, and never batted an eye. The boy was thinking hard, but what was running through his mind no one but Archie knew.

THE second act curtain rose and the play resumed like a whirlwind and ended in a riot. Never before had a first night audience risen to such a frenzied demonstration. Men threw their hats into the air; women screamed at the top of their voices, "Great, wonderful, marvelous! Hurray! Three cheers for Fewclothes! Author! Author! Author!"

A hundred and twelve curtain calls, by actual count.

Archie's entire family stood up in the box and acknowledged the great reception. Even old Doc Pillsberry and the old hardware dealer stood up and took a bow. But Archie absolutely refused to move out of his chair or make a sound or say a word of any kind.

The manager rushed into the box and grabbed Archie by the shoulders.

"For goodness sake, man, stand up and say a few words to these people. This thing is the biggest hit New York ever had—why, your name will go down in theatrical history! Nothing of the kind has ever happened in the American theater before. I just sold the English rights for a hundred thousand dollars. I'll get a million for the motion picture rights. You're rich! You're famous! You're the biggest man that drama has ever produced! For the love of all things sensible, stand up and say a few words!"

The demonstration which had been going on now for fully five minutes grew louder: "Fewclothes! Fewclothes! We want Fewclothes!" shouted the frantic audience.

The audiences from the nearby theaters ran out on the plays they were looking at and rushed to the front door of the "Born in Prison" playhouse in an effort to get inside and learn what in God's name had happened to bring about a demonstration that could be heard twenty blocks away. Traffic policemen ran from all directions and horses started running away at the sound of the shrieking voices. Three fire alarms were sent in and the whole New York fire department appeared in front of the theater. The streets were roped off and ambulances sent for.

The audience continued to scream. The manager continued to plead. Archie's entire family knelt down on their knees and begged him to respond to the reception, but the lad refused to move or utter a syllable.

The treasurer of the box office out front ran into the box and shouted at the top of his lungs that the mayor had just telephoned from the city hall that unless something was done to quell the disturbance without delay he would give orders to dynamite the building and save the entire city from insanity.

ON hearing this, Archie jumped to his feet and yelled: "All right, I'll speak! I'll say something! Show me to the stage. I want to face the audience and say what's in my heart."

"Follow me, son," shouted the manager, and he led the lad down the back stairs and through the side door to the back of the stage.

Archie's father and mother gave the high sign to the shrieking audience that Archie was on his way to the footlights, and then bedlam broke loose for fair.

Up went the drop curtain, out walked Archie in full view of the mad, hysterical mob, and his reception lasted exactly one hour and thirty-five minutes before he was permitted to say a word.

This was Archie's speech:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I want to state that the version of 'Born in Prison' you have witnessed tonight contains but three words of my original manuscript and these three words are 'Born in Prison.' I cannot accept credit for work I did not do, nor can I accept money for another man's brain child.

"I intend to return to the management the five hundred dollars advanced as royalties and to make him a present of the title free and clear. I'm going back to Wichita, where I belong, and stay there for the rest of my life, because I much prefer being known as an honest man than a great playwright. On behalf of the author, whoever he is, I wish to thank you. Good night." And he walked to the entrance and disappeared.

THE audience was dazed; came not a sound. The curtain rolled down in absolute silence. The stillness was such that if a ten cent piece had fallen to the floor it would have sounded like a peal of thunder.

This condition lasted for at least thirty seconds, and then things began to happen.

Archie's father fell out of the upper box, and thirty-five women on the orchestra floor fainted. Two of Archie's brothers shot and killed themselves in full view of the audience. The crowd became panic stricken and began to tear up the orchestra chairs and beat each other over the heads with them in the mad scramble for the exit doors. Those lucky enough to reach the sidewalk found themselves roped off and piled into ambulances and police patrol cars and hurriedly driven to the insane asylum.

Archie's mother and three sisters escaped and rushed to the East river and jumped overboard.

Old Doc Pillsberry poisoned himself and the hardware dealer hit himself on the head with a hammer.

Not one of the Wichita contingent ever returned home. No one knows to this day whatever became of Archie, but there's one thing about him we know: wherever he is, he's happy in the thought he gave New York the greatest night the theater has ever known, and, what's more, he's an honest man.

"Born in Prison" was not a success. Archie's speech crabbed it all. It was the only play ever opened in New York that closed before the last act was given.

The manager who presented the play has never sent any of his attractions to Wichita from that day to this—which only goes to prove that theatrical managers have no sense of humor at all.

THE CHEER LEADER

By George T. Bye

BILL thought she was far too pretty a girl to be hidden away in the solemn reception room of a corporation president.

"And your business?" she asked twinkingly.

"Just tell him I'm from Harvard, please," Bill answered.

Against her instructions the pretty girl took the cardless young man's name and businessless identification into the president of the Five Seas Navigation company.

"BUT I have no jobs for college graduates," President Gregory declared a moment later. "This is not a department store where clerks can be trained over night. We run lines of steamships, and there's nothing here for you—unless—"

"Yes, sir," Bill picked up hopefully.

"Were you ever involved, or mixed up much, in college theatricals, sports, entertainment?"

"Was I?" Bill swiftly rattled off his list of college distinctions, his presidency of the dramatic club, authorship of the annual musical comedy, tennis championship, and his unanimous election as cheer leader.

"Well," said President Gregory, "we've been running specially conducted cruises, and we've a round-the-world liner about to go out now. Passengers on ships are terrible sticks and the job to organize them for entertainment purposes is too much for a steward.

"We thought of hiring some one to go aboard—a gentleman—who would pretend he was a passenger and who would get the entertainment and sports under way.

"All right, sir, I'll speculate with you. If you make a go of this, we'll have a permanet berth for you. My daughter will be abroad the Eroica. She'll report to me about you."

BILL was overjoyed to find that the president's daughter, Joan, was none other than the entrancing assistant sacretary of the reception room. When her mother died she had gone to her father's office to relieve both his and her loneliness. . . . She and Bill sat at Captain Marsden's table.

RADIOGRAMS: Marsden, Master, Eroica. Ask daughter Joan how entertainment chap Middleton making out. Gregory.

Gregory, President—She says grand. Marsden.

Marsden—What's your opinion, Middleton? Gregory.

Gregory—Ought to make good son-in-law. Marsden.

Marsden—If Middleton paying attention Joan warn him no foolishness or will ship him back Gibraltar. Gregory.

Gregory—Middleton says he forgot tell you he inherited $400,000 stock of company. Marsden.

Marsden—Lordy, what am I to do? Gregory.

Gregory—Nothing. They're doing it. Marsden.

Joan Gregory—How's my little girl? Gregory.

Gregory—Scrumptious darling. Have big secret to tell you when I get back. Mr. Middleton's doing splendidly. Joan.

Elaine at the Gates

by W. B. Maxwell

ELAINE FLETCHER, left an orphan by the death of her father, grows to lovely womanhood at the home of an aunt,

MRS. CASTLETON, in beautiful Nun's House at Tudor Green. Her guardian, infatuated with

THE REV. MARK AWDREY, rector of a fashionable church, dies with a broken heart when the clergyman departs for a tour of South America. Elaine is shocked to learn that her aunt had been married to Awdrey on his last day in London. She goes to live with her uncle and aunt,

MR. AND MRS. MARSH. Ever since she can remember, she has been in love with

ARNOLD THORNE, last of an old and important family. Arnold returns from the war in the grip of an unappeasable restlessness and, though at heart he loves Elaine, neglects her and plunges into a violent flirtation with

PEARL ESDAILE, a brazen coquette. At length he wakes from his madness, returns to Elaine and wins her promise to be his wife. Fate intervenes, however. Pearl learns that she is to become a mother and Arnold extends the protection of marriage. He breaks off the bethrotal with Elaine. Prostrated by grief and horror, she lies near death on the day of Arnold's wedding. A flaw in her aunt's will had left her penniless, distant relatives and Awdrey falling heir to the estate. Upon her recovery she is offered a compromise through her aunt's solicitor, but spurns the offer and, for a time, has a depressing experience as governess in the home of a

MR. AND MRS. SINCLAIR, at Bexhill. Awdrey, back from his wanderings, tries to persuade her to take the money that came to him from Mrs. Castleton's estate, but this, too, she flatly refuses. Then, in a high-handed manner, the rector carries her off to London, where he has been converting a disused factory into a church, and by the sheer force of his voluble insistence persuades her that she can serve humanity by becoming his wife. So they are married—a "marriage in name only"—and Elaine plunges into the drudgery of work among the poor. Awdrey she finds erratic and self-centered, demanding everything for his magnificent services and willing to do little or nothing for her own poverty-stricken charges. At first she rebels; then she bows to his will and becomes, in effect, his housekeeper. Presently Arnold Thorne and the girl he married make themselves known among Awdrey's parishioners. Thorne has found hopeless unhappiness; Pearl, his wife, has drifted into loose living. They have come to London from Liverpool, where Thorne has lost good business prospects, and their child, who held all that was left of his heart, is dead. At Awdrey's urgent request, Elaine undertakes to help him bring about a reconciliation between the two. Soon she finds the pain of her old love coming back. One day, Pearl, in ribald and defiant confidence, reveals that there was never any need of Arnold's having married her. Returning home with this in her mind, Elaine finds Arnold there waiting for Awdrey. An irresistible impulse drives them into each other's arms. Then she writes him that she cannot trust herself further; he must stay away. Soon, quite unexpectedly, Awdrey begins making love to her, driving her to a new desperation. He forces from her the admission that Thorne was the man of her past. He locks her in her room, and removes the bolt that has guarded the door between them. On the night when he does that, Elaine plunges out of her window and falls, badly hurt, to the ground. When she recovers she finds Awdrey utterly contrite. He starts arrangements to have their marriage annulled, and Elaine goes away to a convalescent home, leaving behind her a promise to have nothing further to do with Thorne.

INSTALLMENT XIX.

Carrying On.

MARK AWDREY had said that Arnold was doing his duty and facing with courage the long hard road that lay before him, and this was true; but he did not as yet know that the possibility of continuing the duty was removed and the long road had abruptly come to an end.

For now, at this moment when Mark watched the receding train, Arnold Thorne was wandering about a ruined war stricken village in the north of France, and seeing in its desolation something akin to the waste and ruin of his own life. Thinking of himself, he felt like the central figure of a Greek tragedy. It seemed to him he was more utterly alone, more completely stripped of human hopes and human memories than any man who had ever walked the earth. Even the dead had been taken from him.

During these last few weeks events had moved rapidly indeed at the house in the crescent near Earl's Court.

One morning the post brought him a letter with the Tudor Green postmark. He looked at the postmark, as well as examining the handwriting and asking himself if it was familiar, because the writer of the letter had omitted to sign his or her name. The letter purported to come from "an old friend,"—an old friend who apparently wished to confer a benefit in giving a little direct advice and yet escape any grateful thanks from the recipient.

Arnold was advised to bring to a conclusion the scandalous intercourse that had too long subsisted between his wife and Captain Clarence Esdaile, and that was now "developing into a complete disgrace." He was informed, too, for his guidance in handling the rather delicate matter of an undue affection between cousins, that the lady and not the gentleman was the guilty party. "He has tried again and again to get out of her clutch, but she will not leave him alone . . ."

Arnold showed this anonymous letter to Pearl, who immediately said it was written by his sister-in-law, Miss Millicent.

"O, that's from Millicent. Don't take any notice of what she says."

"What makes you think that your sister——"

"My dear boy, I don't think. I know. I know her spiteful ways. Besides, I recognize her hand—though she has sloped it differently. And more than that, I recognize the spelling." And Pearl laughed. 'Develloping!' Millikins could never spell, though Mums gave her a more expensive education than she ever did me."

"But why should she accuse you?"

"Because she's a cat—and, if you must know, because she wants Bingo to marry her and he won't. Not much. Why should he? Millikins was always after him, and nothing he would say would choke her off. She always thought she'd get him in the end. And now that he has done so splendidly well with his cars and is going right up in the world, she's making a desperate try for it. But you can tell her, with my compliments, that Bingo isn't taking any."

PEARL was voluble, and as she chattered in this manner she was obviously assuming a spurious indignation in order to conceal a real anxiety. While she continued to talk, all sorts of vague recollections were becoming clear again in her husband's mind, were grouping themselves with a startling solidness. Even in this first conversation he had scarcely any doubt of her guilt.

All at once he asked her if, when she chose this particular part of London for their home, she had known that Mr. Esdaile and his garage were established close at hand.

She was confused and troubled by the question. "I don't know. I can't remember," she said hurriedly. "Yes, I suppose I had heard he was starting here about that time. But how does it matter? Where's the point?"

"O, surely you see the point."

And he told her presently that her friendship with Mr. Esdaile must be discontinued.

She was angry, if not violent, saying it was wicked to interfere with her affectionate regard for the members of her family. Bingo was her cousin, her favorite cousin. She had known him all her life.

"Well, isn't a lifetime long enough?" said Arnold severely. "I don't say that you are never to see him again, but you are not to see him till I give you permission. You are not to go about with him."

"Be careful," said Pearl. "I warn you, Arnold; don't try me too far."

"It is I who warn you, Pearl. . . . Now do we owe this gentleman any money for cars?"

Pearl would not even answer this last question. But Arnold wrote curtly to the garage, asking for a statement of account. The account arrived, and was obviously much less in amount than it ought to have been. It pretended to cover the last six months. Arnold spoke to Pearl about it, and she said that, of course, Clarence did not charge for the use of the car on every little friendly expedition, or when he had voluntarily offered her a "joy ride."

"You will offend him horribly if you try to pay for everything," said Pearl.

"I'm not afraid of offending him," said Arnold. "But perhaps the less deeply I go into the matter the better it may be for everybody."

He sent a check, therefore, for the amount claimed, and an intimation that the account was closed.

Then, one evening, after they had dined together, Pearl went upstairs to dress, and Arnold came from his dressing room into her bedroom to talk to her.

"Pearl," he said quietly, "it's no good putting on your finery. I have told you I cannot allow you to go out."

"But I'm going all the same," said Pearl, and she continued her toilet with a sort of vindictive energy. "Do you understand? I am going all the same."

"Why are you so determined? You say it isn't a dance, but only a supper party at a club. Surely you've had enough of that sort of thing. Pearl, I ask you, as a favor, to give it up."

"No," she said sullenly, "I can't throw over my friends. If I gave way tonight, you'd begin again tomorrow. Besides, it is a dance."

"Then why did you say it wasn't?"

"Because I don't mean to dance myself. I shall sit with my friends and watch."

"But Mr. Esdaile is to be of the party?"

"Yes," she said, "I've told you so. What difference can it make?"

"It makes all the difference, after what I've said to you. You are setting me at a defiance. You are refusing to comply with a reasonable request. You are compelling me to think the things that I didn't want to think. Mr. Esdaile is one of the party. Now tell me, please, who are the rest of the party?"

She could not, or would not, tell him. She became angry, saying he had no right to bully her—no right to come into her room when she was dressing—no right to interfere with her. She would not stand it, and so on.

"If I interfere with your dressing, it will save you trouble in the end. For I tell you, Pearl, I shall not allow you to go."

Next moment a maid servant tapped at the door, and announced, when admitted, that Captain Esdaile had arrived, and was waiting outside in his car.

Pearl was plunging into the frock itself. She struggled through it with her flaxen head, and gave the maid an order.

"Tell Captain Esdaile I will be down in a minute. Then come here and help me finish."

"Very good, ma'am."

"Stay," said Arnold. "You needn't trouble. I will go down and speak to Captain Esdaile myself."

"No!" cried Pearl.

Then, as he turned, she called after him. "Arnold, if you are rude to Bingo, I will never forgive you."

HE was not rude, at first. And it was probably his preliminary politeness, together with his quite restrained air, that gave Bingo—or Clarence—an entirely erroneous impression of the line that their interview was going to take.

Clarence had come in one of his biggest and grandest cars, brilliantly lit inside, with a chauffeur wearing the smartest sort of uniform. Himself grandly dressed, with crush hat on the back of his head, and a cigar in his puffy lips, he was lolling inside the vehicle when Arnold Thorne appeared on the doorstep. He got out, and they talked together on the pavement.

"The missus not ready?" said Clarence airily.

"No, not ready," said Arnold quietly. "Not going with you, Mr. Esdaile. Please accept my excuses for preventing her."

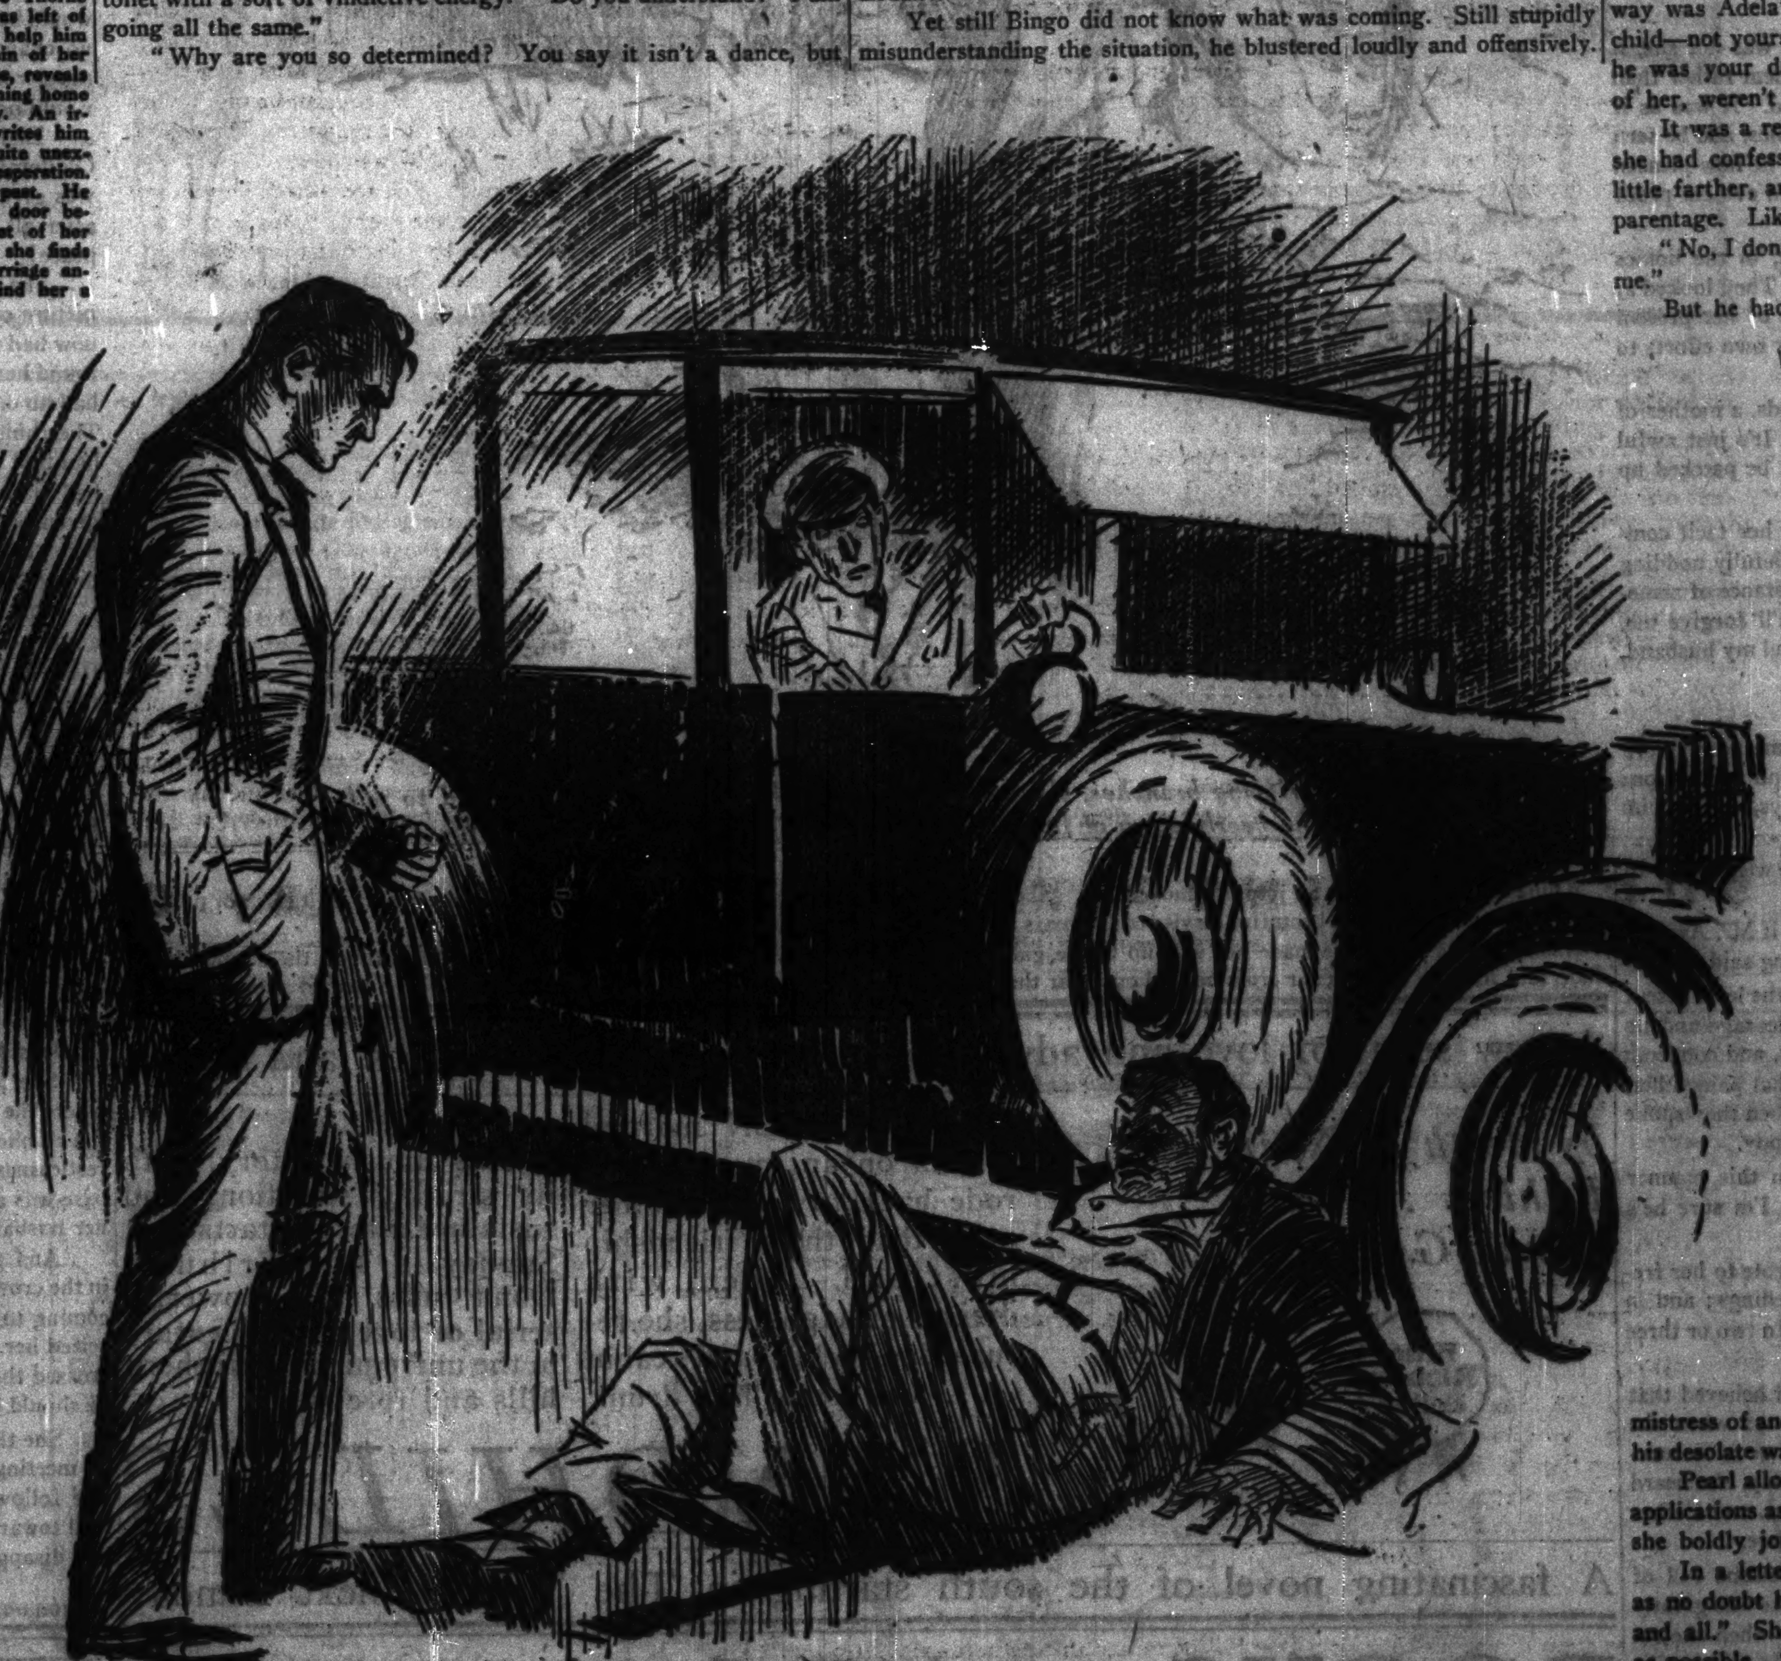
"Oh, but—I say," said Bingo, with his red face flushing—"excuses be hanged. This is an engagement, and I know Pearl herself is quite set on it."

"Please attend to me, Mr. Esdaile," said Arnold. "Pearl is your cousin, isn't she?"

"Of course, she is."

"But she happens to be my wife as well as your cousin, and I don't want you to come here any more. I am tired of you, Mr. Esdaile."

Yet still Bingo did not know what was coming. Still stupidly misunderstanding the situation, he blustered loudly and offensively.



Then Arnold knocked him down for the third time—knocked him right across the pavement and almost under his motorcar. He lay there, not attempting to rise.

Arnold's next words, however, let him see at last that mere verbal violence was not insufficient.

"I'm tired of you, you insolent swine. I'm tired of the sound of your ugly caddish voice, and the sight of your grinning blackguardly face. Keep it further away from me, Mr. Esdaile. Take this hint and keep it further away." And with his open hand he hit him full in the face.

Mr. Esdaile had to fight then. It was as terrible to him as it was unforseen. Even in the initial moment of it, he knew he was a beaten man, that Arnold was much, much too good for him. Swiftly, beneath the sharp crack of those ubiquitous fists, his rage and mortification seemed to fade into a dull stupefied sort of despair. He stumbled, fell, and picked himself up. There came a shock as if the motor car had exploded in a wierd firework display, and he was at full length on the pavement. He got up again, and fighting still, being hit all the time, seemed to be following an adversary who retreated before him—back, back to those door-steps. Then, from in front of the door-steps, Arnold knocked him down for the third time—knocked him right acros the pavement and almost under his motorcar. He lay there, not attempting to rise. As the chauffeur in due course reported at the garage, the gentleman had done just what he pleased with "our governor."

"You had better put him in the car and take him away," said Arnold, going up the steps.

"Yes, sir," said the chauffeur.

BUT then, before Arnold reached the door and could close it, Pearl rushed out. At sight of Bingo's prostrate body and the chauffeur stooping over it, she uttered a loud cry and tried to go down the steps. Arnold, however, had caught her by the arm, and he held her firmly.

"It's all right, Pearl," he said. "I have given your cousin the thrashing he has so long deserved. But don't be alarmed. He'll get over it."

"Let me go to him. . . Damn you, let me go to him."

As he forcibly took her with him back into the house, she screamed and struck at him. He took her into that room on the ground floor where he and Mark Awdrey had had their first talk together.

"Now, Pearl, no more nonsense."

He had released her and he stood with his back to the closed door.

"A beating is nothing to that sort of cur. There's no humiliation in it—because he is too low to be humiliated."

"You're a coward. You're a dirty coward," she yelled.

"Why am I a coward, Pearl?"

"Because you're younger than he is—and fitter. It wasn't a fair match——"

"Steady, please. Keep those hands quiet."

She was pulling at her hair, but as she came towards him now her fury seemed to abate, her cheeks grew pale, and he saw she was trembling.

"All right. You shall have it now—what I've tried to save you from," and she spoke quietly, indeed with a deadly precision. "Do you know who it really is that you've been attacking and knocking about?"

"Our cousin—my esteemed cousin by marriage."

"O, yes, you're very funny, aren't you? But you won't laugh when I've done. The man you went for in that brutal, shameful way was Adela's father. So that's your triumph. Adela was his child—not yours. Perhaps you'd have let him alone if you'd known he was your darling, darling Adela's father. You were so fond of her, weren't you? But she was Bingo's child all the same."

It was a repetition in a more horrible form of that scene when she had confessed to Elaine; but she carried the confession just a little farther, and touched her lowest depths in acknowledging the parentage. Like Elaine, he tried not to believe the disgusting truth.

"No, I don't believe it. You say it in your blind wish to wound me."

But he had to believe.

"PEARL, it's not true." He said this again, still struggling against belief. "You were different in those days—not like this. You had some shame, some decency—and you swore to me that I was the first. Why, great heavens, it all turned on that. And you said I needn't marry you if I didn't want to. Pearl, you couldn't have said that, and yet been lying to me. No, you weren't lying then."

"No, Arny, I wasn't lying then. I thought it was you. And it was true I'd been straight till—but you played the fool with me, didn't you? And you chucked me. It was all over between us—and I had a right to console myself, hadn't I? Besides, Clarence had been on the watch for his chance. Well, he took it. But when I found I was in trouble, of course I thought it was you—I never had another thought—I never guessed——" And she described how they had waited at Southsea week after week till the weeks became months with still nothing happening, and how finally they had given him to understand that the baby had been born long before the real date. "I think I would have told you the truth then, yes, I'm sure I'd have told you—but for Mums. But it's been on my mind ever since;" and she burst into tears. "I'm glad you know at last. Now get out of the light, and let me go to bed. I'm fed up with you—up to the top of my gums."

He drew aside, opening the door for her as he did so, and half raging, half whimpering, she went out of the room, and left him there alone. Alone in the room, alone in the world, alone in the past, present and the future—as it seemed to him. The woman he had loved he lost; the child he loved had not been his; the wretched creature he had toiled for, been loyal to, prayed for, was and had been the mistress of another man. And he had the thought that was to haunt his desolate wanderings. Even the dead had been taken from him.

Pearl allowed two or three days for such plasterings or emollient applications as were necessary to Bingo after his thrashing, and then she boldly joined him.

In a letter that she left behind her she told her husband that, as no doubt he would be anticipating, she had left him "for good and all." She said she counted on his divorcing her as speedily as possible. "Bingo and I will give you as much evidence as you want—a barrow full of it—and, as an undefended, the thing oughtn't to give anybody any trouble."

In the course of a single day Arnold Thorne gave this letter to his solicitors with instructions, made arrangements for getting rid of the furnished house, severed his connection with the engineering firm, paid his debts. And on the next day he left England, with little intention of ever returning to it.

ELAINE had been back for two or three months and was carrying on her old work, but under new auspices. She belonged not to that rebellious outsider, Mark Awdrey, but to the vicar of the parish, Mr. Chancellor, who had given her a warm welcome on her return to the establishment and was proud of her as an acquisition.

A confirmed bachelor, he was also a strong advocate of celibacy among the priesthood, and perhaps, therefore, on the highest grounds he felt a certain satisfaction whenever he heard of the collapse of a clergyman's married life; but in this special case the failure gave him pleasure for so many reasons that he examined or acknowledged only a few of them. He remembered that Mr. Awdrey had been exceptionally rude to him, that he had been riotous, truculent, vulgar, in his methods of achieving popular success; whereas this lady was polite, gracious, as well-bred people ought to be. She was obviously Awdrey's social superior; and, from Mr. Chancellor's point of view, there had been something subversive not only of traditional order, but of becomingness and decency in her remaining the contented help-mate to such a man. Now apparently she had recovered from a queer infatuation; and Mr. Chancellor, talking to his assistant clergy, was able to expand his "I told you so" into the wider statement that he had "always foreseen it."

When she appeared at the vicarage for business meetings he paid her studious attention, and gentle smiles were shed upon her by the curates. At the local committee of the League of Pity, the Society of the Holy Child, the Society of Christian Endeavor, and so on, they would not allow her to remain in the background, and begged for her opinion on the most important questions.

"Order, please," said Mr. Chancellor, or the senior curate,

ELAINE AT THE GATES . . . . . By W. B. Maxwell

presiding. "Before passing to the next matter I should like—I am sure we should all like—to know what Mrs. Awdrey thinks about it. . . . O, please, Mrs. Awdrey;" and whether it was the vicar or the curate, he shot forth softly encouraging smiles. "'As we all know, Mrs. Awdrey has had such great ejperience that any words from her lips must have exceptional value. Please tell us frankly what you think yourself, Mrs. Awdrey."

And perhaps one or two of the lady members of the committee thought a rather ridiculous fuss was being made about Mrs. Awdrey and her opinion. An austere deaconess, seated at the far end of the table, looking with disapproval at her pale face and large sad eyes, thought of the incurable weakness of the other sex. "I don't call her in the least attractive," whispered the deaconess to her neighbor, "and she seems positively stupid. But I suppose she is a man's woman—all of her appealing to their senses, so that they never really judge her. You often meet people like that." as had been that other more excitable group of the Miss Twinings and her friends. Seeing that she neither sought nor valued it, they forgave her for the attention she received.

She lived with them in what might be described as a clubhouse, a dark and cold but not uncomfortable building, situated conveniently near to the church and the vicarage. They included a Gray Lady and a Blue Lady, and there were several sisters of St. Agneta. These invited Elaine to join their community; one of them promising to get her appointed as an honorary member at once, and holding out as an inducement that she would thus become Sister Elaine and, by the change of name, free herself from the annoyance of being still addressed as Mrs. Awdrey.

Refusing the invitation coldly, she said she was content to be Mrs. Awdrey till she ceased to be so legally. She had no reason to be ashamed of the name. She resented their tone.

She was not happy among these people. But it was not she, it was Mark who had decided that she must be with them rather than with her old friends, as had been originally intended. It was as if he wished that she should seem to go over to his enemies, and be seen dwelling in the other camp. No one knew better than he how pleased they would all be throughout that camp, in having an evident proof of his personal discomfiture.

The tone was different among her own people, in the homes where she had been known always as Awdrey's wife. They looked at her with wonder in their eyes, and when they spoke of her present circumstances, as they did sometimes, in spite of their own efforts to refrain, they expressed almost horror.

"It's awful, ma'am," said one of her oldest friends, a mother of grown up daughters. "My gals feel just the same. It's just awful your separating yourself from Mr. Awdrey. Can't it be patched up somehow? Whatever will he do without you?"

Others treated her as a deposed queen, offering her tacit commiseration in what appeared to them her disgrace, dolefully nodding their heads and sighing. One of them echoed the substance of something Miss Twining had said to her. "I hope you'll forgive me, ma'am, if I'm taking a liberty, but it does strike me and my husband, too, as so queer what you're doing."

"What am I doing?" asked Elaine.

"Why, staying here, and going on just the same now you're parted from him. Surely to goodness, if it's settled, and you've done with each other, you ought to go clean out of the place, and let him forget you."

Elaine told the woman that Mr. Awdrey himself wished her to remain.

"Well—really—I am surprised! But, of course, if Mr. Awdrey wishes it—well, well. I hope you don't mind my having said it."

She did not mind what they said. She did not in the least resent it when, taking a view so different from that of the vicarage and its supporters, they seemed to blame her for her conduct, and condemn her for a dereliction of wifely duty. The only thing that pained her, that touched her heart with sadness and regret, was when they spoke as if they knew that her husband was lonely and unhappy.

That factory girl, Daphne Mills, troubled her in this manner more than once. "He does look so lonely, ma'am. I'm sure he's feeling it dreadful."

In all this time he never came to see her, but he wrote to her frequently, telling her of the progress of the law proceedings; and in every letter he thanked her for keeping within reach. In two or three he said again, explicitly, that her presence helped him.

She never chanced to meet him in the streets, and believed that he purposely avoided her. She asked about him always when she met his church people, obtaining from them information as to services, inquiring about the guild, and so on. Then, one day, she heard he had gone away. He was traveling on the continent, and Father Lyall was taking charge of everything during his absence.

Elaine felt startled and distressed. Her mind became full of doubts and surmises. Had he gone never to return? She was greatly worried in mind, and it was an enormous relief to her when she received a letter from a town in the north of France. He told her he had gone abroad to see a friend on urgent business, but that all was well with him, and he had hope of eventually settling the business in a satisfactory manner. Then she heard that he was back again. One of her factory girls told her he had preached a magnificent sermon on Sunday. Elaine asked how he was looking, and the girl said "just the same."

His influence was upon her (as she recognized), perhaps more strongly than at any time, now that she was safe from him; now that she was to cease to bear his name, and soon be free of him forever.

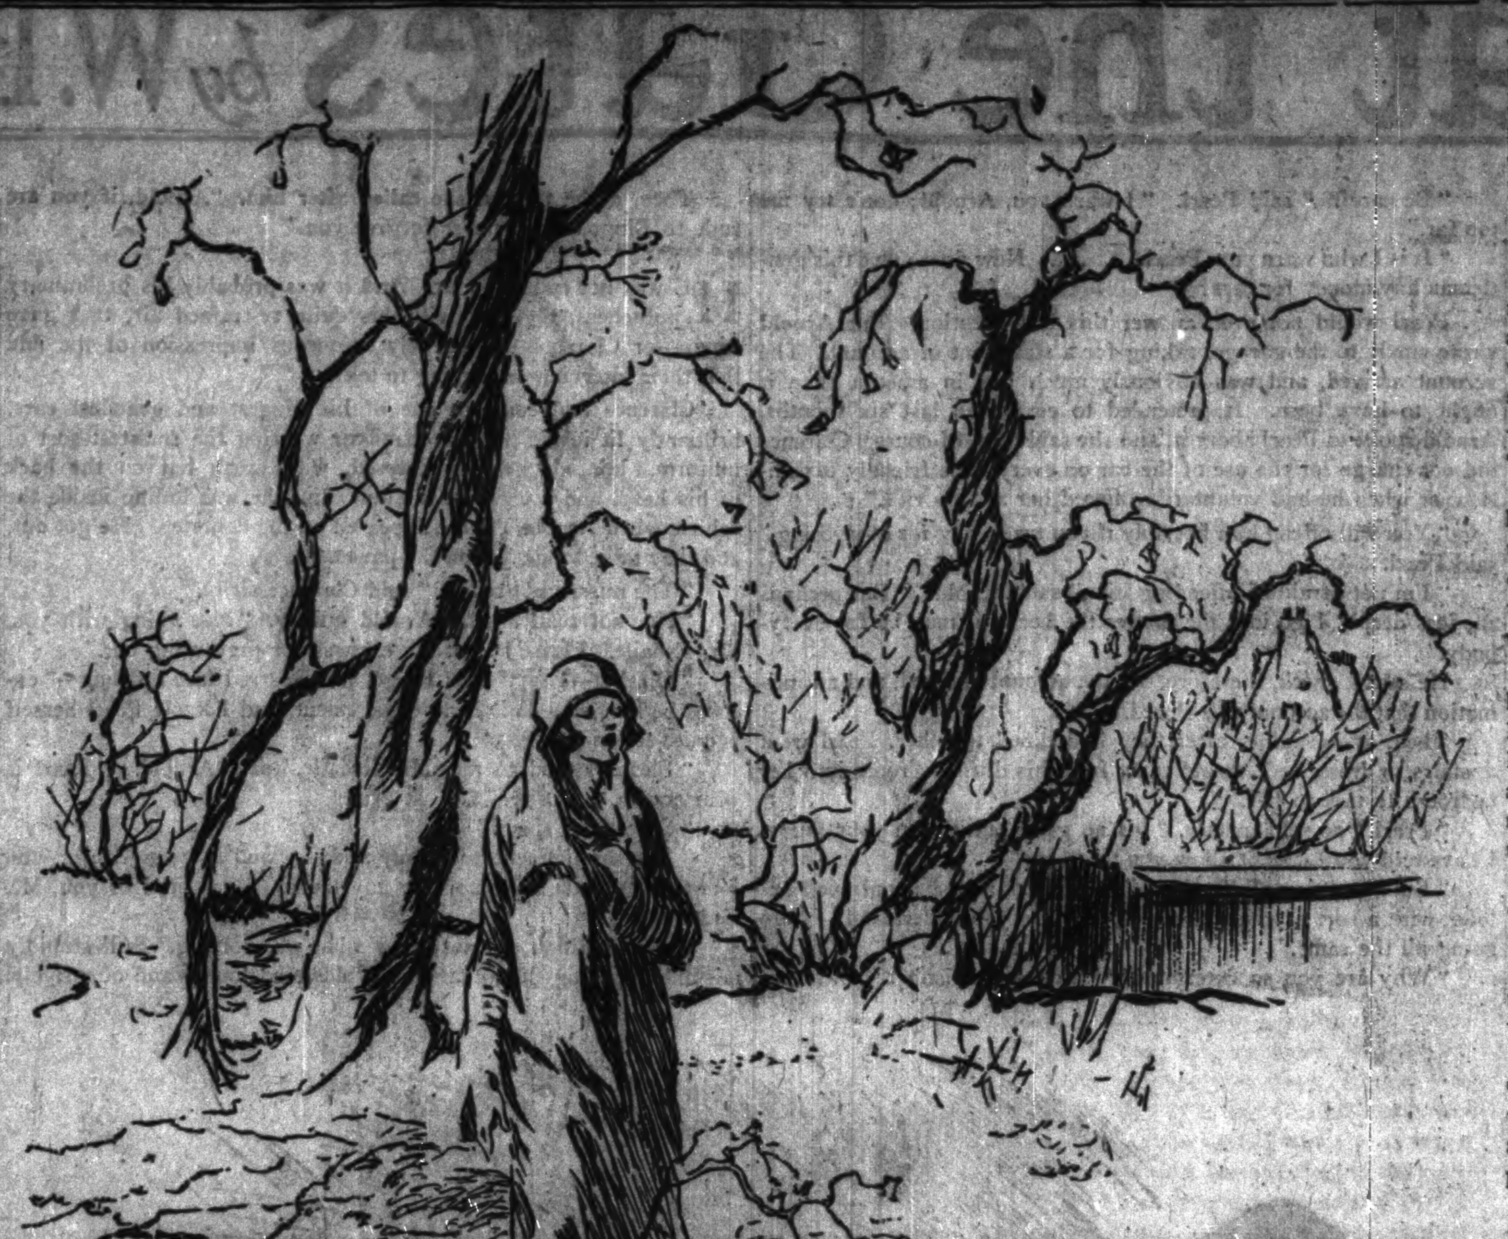
SHE was not happy.

The case was in the paper for hearing. He had told her so. No one else seemed to be aware of the fact—no one had read the names in any public list of approaching cases. She tried now to meet him, going where there was a probability of her doing so, walking sometimes of an evening down the streets toward the Guild meeting place, and passing his church two or three times in a day. The church doors stood wide open, and from the opposite pavement of the ugly, poverty stricken street, the glimpse of silent splendor and beauty in the church itself affected one strongly.

It was what one sees in continental cities—that sudden contrast of spiritual magnificence and material squalor. The altar, rich with gold and silver, glittered faintly under the subdued light. There was no one on guard, no one watching. Any sneak thief, as it would seem, could have come in from the street and stolen valuable booty, but no thief ever came. Perhaps Awdrey had made even thieves understand that the place was sacred. The church doors stood wide all day, and were closed, but not locked at night. The church was open all through the night now, just as that church at Tudor Green used to be.

Elaine crossed the road and went in. There was nothing there except the lamp with its small burning flame to symbolize that which lives forever and cannot die, and two or three women, poor mortals, kneeling and praying for strength, perhaps to withstand the rigors of a life that is sometimes worse than death.

She did not meet him. He seemed to have become invisible. And she felt, now that the law trial was so near, that she wished to speak to him.



The dripping branches, the wet faded grass, the dead leaves, all served to tell the yearly story of failure and decay. She felt cold and lonely there.

One Sunday morning an impulse moved her. She felt that she must go to the solemn and beautiful service of the mass at his church. The church was full. She made her way up to the gallery over the door, and found a seat not far from her old one near the organ. She sat and knelt there, deeply stirred by the beauty of it all; not praying, but thinking, thinking.

That day he did not preach. He sat through the sermon in the big carved chair within the altar rails. He seemed thin, dreadfully thin, his profile sharpened and hardened, as if by suffering. And she thought, watching him, that he was still her husband. They were so little to each other that she had come here merely as a visitor. He did not, in the least, know that she was here. They could scarcely be less to each other, and yet the law was about to make them less. Her husband—it was amazing, incredible, impossible.

SHE was not happy. She was miserably unhappy. And she thought now that perhaps there is no such thing as real happiness in any life. Even lives that outwardly may seem happy are but a long progress through disillusionment to renunciation. Then how wise to renounce all hope early in youth, to give up the fruitless struggle, to accept the ordained doom, or even advance to meet it. As she recognized again, Mark's influence, Mark's teaching, was directing her thought, and holding it in this one channel.

There had been no difficulty, it had cost her nothing, in keeping her promise of not communicating with Arnold Thorne. But she thought of him often in these days. She thought of the hopelessness of is life, too; there was not a gleam of hope for him either. He was tied to his chain, he was performing the altruistic task. In other words, he was bravely and steadily obliterating himself.

She thought of how time would roll on until all that had made him the Arnold Thorne of her love and her dreams would be remorselessly effaced, until nothing of his old strong loving self would be left. She thought of him and Pearl in the Earl's Court house year after year—Pearl conducting herself much as before, lapsing and recovering herself only to lapse more than the last time, and he still trying to save her, turning gray as he did his duty. Perhaps before long he would give up his business and take her away to live in the country. He had spoken of doing this, had said that he thought it would be Pearl's best chance. But it would make no difference really; no chance could avail Pearl or modify Arnold's doom. Drunkards never reform, and they never die. Pearl would live on and on; she would never give freedom by death.

Elaine could not escape from deep thought on Mark's teaching. Obliteration. It sounded so terrible, so monstrous, when one first was given the idea of it. One rejected it as false and impious—yet, after all, it was true. What else is there? How else can one find peace?

She thought, too, of the man himself. She was haunted by the picture of him—alone, deserted, forlorn; in that house in which she now had no place, but which was so familiar to her that she could have found her way into every corner of it blindfolded, or in the dark. He had no one to take care of him, no one to look after him, to help him. The thing he had loved had deserted him. She thought of how he had first needed her, and how completely she had filled that need. He had made use of her, and, while drawing strength from her, had yet given her strength, too. She had let him use her, and felt pride in being useful. Only it had all smashed, or been broken, when he tried to use her in that other way.

But what was it that she had held back from him? Was it of any true value when measured by the standard of spiritual worth? Had she been impelled to refuse by anything more than the last fierce clinging to one's own inmost self? It had been obliteration of self that she recoiled from; it had been a sacrifice of self that she refused.

Always, then, she was drawing nearer to the great sacrifice.

ON an afternoon in late autumn an almost irresistible sadness filled her heart, and she had again those old sensations of grief that she used to feel as a young girl each time that the year began to die in the cold autumnal presage of advancing winter. There was little enough in these streets to remind her of the changing seasons; but, restless and unhappy, she had wandered down to that churchyard near the river, and there the denuded dripping branches of the plane trees, the wet faded grass, the dead leaves, all served to tell the yearly story of failure and decay.

She felt cold and lonely there, and hurried back to the streets, where the lamps soon were being lighted. She walked about, went to the clubhouse for a little food, and then came out again. Always her restlessness increased, and after a time it seemed to her that at its base was a desire, an unacknowledged necessity, to see and talk with her husband.

And tonight, for the first time, chance favored her. Suddenly in the crowded, well lighted main road she saw him at a little distance coming toward her. But at sight of him doubt, if not apprehension, seized her. She no longer wished to speak to him. Instinctively she crossed the threshold of a shop, and stood hidden there, waiting until he should have gone by.

She thought he was going down that street where the guild held its meetings, but he turned abruptly and began to retrace his steps. She followed him again, and at last saw him go round the factory wall toward their house. When she herself came to the little gate he had disappeared.

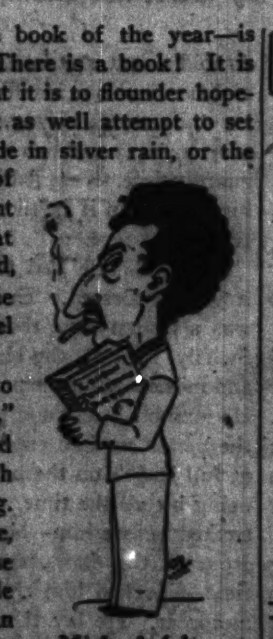
BOOKS and BOOKMEN

By GENE MARKEY

THE book of the week—and for us the book of the year—is Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat." There is a book! It is such a perfect thing that to write about it is to flounder hopelessly among inadequate words: one might as well attempt to set down the charm of the Place de la Concorde in silver rain, or the Champs Elysees in the pistachio light of dawn. "The Green Hat" is an achievement in literature. There is, to be sure, a great curse hanging over the term sophisticated, but, taking the risk, we must say that "The Green Hat" is the most sophisticated novel we have ever encountered.



Michael Arlen

Those of you who were fortunate enough to discover Mr. Arlen's "London Venture," several seasons ago, doubtless followed through to "These Charming People," which captivated these United States last spring. And you will have clamored for this new one, and found it to be the best of all. But to those that have never feasted upon the delectable prose of this young Armenian who became an Englishman and who writes better English than any Englishman living, now that Conrad—who was a Pole—is dead, we can only recommend that you read "The Green Hat." Do not, however, buy the book if you have no taste for fine writing, nor if you believe that Balzac wrote obscenarios. This is no novel for prudes: it is much too good. There is style to this novel: as much style as if—were it a real hat—it had been made by Reboux in Paris. It has distinction, this novel. It has manner and manners and there is a complete worldliness to its romance. And if Mr. Arlen appears, perchance, pleased by the patronage of peers; if he commits the sin of snobbishness, we forgive him heartily. He does it so well.

Mr. Arlen is, in sooth, one of the gay gallants of London. We have beheld him, in all his glory, lunching at Claridge's and the Berkeley; and if he does not hail the Duke of Manchester as "Jack" (or whatever his name is) one would never gather that fact from Mr. Arlen's writing. He knows his way about London after dark, does Mr. Arlen: he is familiar with Mayfair and the night clubs and the ways (and means) of London's haut monde.

If there be any one word that best suits the point of view of "The Green Hat," that word is disenchantment: behind the romance of the story and the exquisite patterns of its prose there is utter disenchantment. The tale itself concerns that loveliest and most amazing of ladies, Iris March, and her mad career. And it is such a delicate, such a finely wrought tale, that we shall not spoil it for you by any clumsy synopsis of our own. A grand book, this "Green Hat" of Michael Arlen's; and if it becomes, as it so tremendously deserves, a best seller, that will be a grateful indication of the increasing good taste of people in America who read books.

The most absurd, fatuous, and piffling novel we have stumbled upon this season is "Sailors' Wives," by Warner Fabian, who perpetrated that other atrocity, "Flaming Youth." There has been a feeble attempt to surround the pseudonym of Warner Fabian with a glamor of mystery; but whoever he—or she—may be, we can only suggest that his—or her—talents were better suited to the sort of writing, in chalk, that adorns the sidewalk, the back fence, and the casita. "Sailors' Wives" is cheap stuff, and execrably written. It is as obvious and unalluring as the cotton tighted ballet of a burlesque show in Texas.

Now comes Henry Seidel Canby's "Definitions, Second Series," and it is a fine book. Professor Canby, who flings editorial ink in the office of The Saturday Review of Literature and in odd moments graces the faculty of dear old Yale, is one of the ablest and most readable of critics on this side of what Dr. Donaghey has nicknamed "The Pond." His utterances on contemporary literature are sound and seasoned and seldom dull. Professor Canby casts his quill neither with the prudish school nor the prudent school; he steers a shrewd course. And one appreciates the classical background shadowing his modern opinions.

"The Life and Death of Cleopatra," by Claude Ferval, translated from the French by M. E. Poindexter, is an excellent and engaging piece of biography. It reveals the remarkable career of the enchantress of the Nile from her first appearance as a girl of seventeen before Caesar to her last appearance, lying majestic in death, when the barbaric Romans, under another Caesar, burst into her chamber. And what a life was lived in that span of years! M. Ferval has caught all the color and sweep of that magnificent age, and made the great love story of Cleopatra and Marc Antony more fascinating to read than any fiction.

PO-LO, the poor Indian! Did the shades of those tribes which once inhabited Manhattan and Long Island descend this month from the happy hunting grounds to heed affrightedly the click of ball and mallet and the ponies' feet pelting upon the turf? Did they, as they looked down at the fashionable audiences greeting each match, draw their phantom blankets more tightly about phantom forms and exclaim, "Heap big color! Our own sports clothes were never like this?"

One wondered this as one "assisted" at the polo spectacles on Long Island, toward which every New Yorker strained this month. One speculated, too, upon other things. One of them was the degree to which the Prince of Wales and the polo attending his visit to Long Island would affect the modes.

Sports clothes certainly needed no tonic. Yet they have had one administered by the prince and his visit. Which is going to win in the influence exerted upon clothes—the late King Tut or the very present Prince David? For, just as an outbreak of things Egyptian greeted the penetration of the Egyptian monarch's tomb, so an epidemic of English ideas has marked the advent of Britain's golden haired heir apparent.

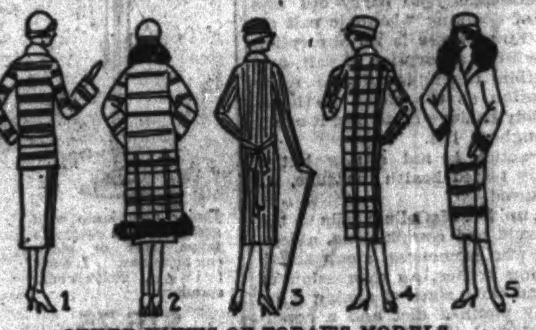
There, for example, is the double breasted topcoat. How many photographs have we seen showing the Prince of Wales wearing this ulster! When the prince visited Paris last season the dressmakers were quick to embody the leading features of this celebrated garment in women's coats. Now we see it exploited on 5th avenue—this double breasted three-quarter length coat, carried out usually in tan or navy cheviot and accompanied perhaps by the Deauville square of bright colored silk about the throat. It's really an extremely nifty garment, so much so that I am illustrating it some day this week in one of my tabloids on fashion. They wore it at Deauville last summer and wore it enthusiastically, and doubtless we shall echo it this winter at Palm Beach. For, just as England's sun never sets, England's heir never fails to set—a style. One can only hope, indeed, that we shan't be too consistent and that we shan't be led into the fashion of pulling our hats down on one side in the characteristic princely mode.

Then, too, the element so largely introduced into the visit of the Prince of Wales—that of polo and horses—has developed some other arresting styles. Among these is a new sweater known as the jockey, exceedingly smart for flappers and would-be flappers. This consists of a white wool V necked garment, with crepe de chine sleeves against the white of which appear in true jockey spirit narrow bands of ribbon in alternating colors.

Another mode to be traced to the interest in polo is the wool jersey costume we show today at the left of the page. This style, known as the "chukker," displays a skirt of plain gray jersey smartly plaited at one side, in conjunction with a top section of the same gray jersey striped in vivid red. This is an exceedingly good idea for the girl or woman who wants her sports clothes to be absolutely distinct from those which she wears on the city sidewalks.

As a matter of fact, there is so much fusion between sports clothes and street clothes that the real sport underlying their conception seems to be an attempt to make spectators decide just where they are more fitting—at a country club or in a city restaurant. For example, here this autumn is a "sports" costume from Poiret. It includes a seven-eighths coat of beige cashmere woolen trimmed with appliques of beige and dark brown self-fabric. The skirt is a dark brown woolen, and the hip length blouse, with its choker of brown taffeta surmounted by a high white inner collar, is of beige crepe.

Now, I ask an unprejudiced world, how in any way does this costume conform to our ideas of "sports?" Yet it is typical of the new dressy impulse in this province, one which we have borrowed from the French. I am sure I don't understand how the Gallic mind operates in this respect, but I suspect that anything which is too elaborate for general streets wear they dub "sports." Certainly if we want the real sports type of clothes we must go to England, where the women, spending their time largely in the country, actually do need something in which they can walk over country roads, shoot, ride, and lounge about.



OTHER VIEWS OF TODAY'S MODELS.

But, to be sure, the looseness of our classification does have some advantages. Many a city woman has no need for sports clothes just as soon as summer is gone. She does not attend football games nor spend autumn week-ends at fashionable country houses. Perhaps, indeed, she seldom peeps in even at a country club. Then for her the outlay of large sums on a sports wardrobe would be as grotesque as for a prospective visitor to Iceland to lay in a supply of mosquito netting.

There might be once or twice, however, when she needed a sports outfit. How ideal then if, instead of being obliged to buy something new, she can simply assume one of her general utility frocks! Among such ambiguous types of clothes is to be mentioned first either the tunic or coat frock of plaided wool. Perfectly good for both town and country, you see! Especially so are the tunic frocks which make the essential part of plaid over a skirt of plain fabric. Or you may reverse the process by contrasting a tunic of plain material with skirt of plaid. Still another thought on the subject is to achieve the tunic of striped fabric, for do not forget that the popularity of plaids has not by any means extinguished a normal appetite for stripes.

Likely as not, you will make one of these tunic frocks of kasha. Why not? The kasha system has become the credit system, and of all the materials that are enrolled for sports clothes—knitted weaves, homespuns, tweeds, Cumberland fleece, et cetera—kasha has decidedly the most enthusiastic following. It comes in both plain and patterned varieties, and to become acquainted with its infinite novelties of finish takes almost as much time as golf.

Second from the right you will see a plaid kasha in black and red which abjures both the popular coat dress and the more popular tunic frock suggestions in favor of a new mode. Here we have in front a sort of Eton jacket effect. Not surprising at all in a year when the designers have a hundred different ways of hinting at the raised waistline without raising any objection on the part of the wearer. The bandings of this jacket are of plain red kasha to correspond with gilet of the same material.

Among the very smartest of this year's sports costumes are the ones combining a jacket of suede with skirt of cloth. The most delightful examples of this alliance introduce a plaid in the skirt. Thus, a gray suede jacket inset with red suede is combined with a skirt plaided in two tones of gray and a tan suede jacket is worn over a beige and brown plaid skirt.

Although plaids so consistently obscure our dress horizon, it is notable that many fashionable women have selected natural kasha for their sports frocks. There is, in fact, a decided inclination toward this beige kasha, and many are the models in which it is developed. One of the most attractive of these which I have seen—just brought from Paris—tops a short skirt laid in wide box pleats with a garconne bodice of self-material. Another striking model in the beige kasha follows tunic lines and trims the tunic with bands of bright tartan plaid.

I am showing one of these beige kasha models second from the left. Here it occurs in the celebrated button down the front coat dress version and it derives its color accent solely from a wide belt of red leather. The coat, however, compensates for such color repression by its bold plaid in red, green, and blue, further enlivened by deep bands of yellow traversing the lower part of the sleeves and the lower section of the coat. The fur employed is brown fox.

Beige and the entire brown range score heavily in the sports clothes of today. Thus the coat at the extreme left shows homespun in a rich tone of brown. The stripes of this garment are woven into the cloth and right here, indeed, we come to one of the salient characteristics of all autumn clothes. Novelty of weave is the one constant aspiration toward a change in the modes. If you look at the line of the "new" model there is perhaps little to make the pulse beat faster. But if the fabric be examined you find out then that we have not stood still since last winter.

A last word concerns sports hats. Of course, these are of felt and, of course, the brim turns up some place. Concerning the latter course of conduct, there is great liberality of feeling. However, the felt that turns up sharply in the back to contrast with a straight front and sides is now the most exemplary mode.

Substitute More Milk And the Leafy Vegetables For Meat, Sugar, And Starches in Excess

I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Is your skin in poor condition? Poor in color? Poor in texture? Is it showing a tendency for wrinkles and crow's feet to develop? Are the signs of age beginning to come on faster than they should? Does your hair begin to show loss of luster and thinning?

Do you know that these signs may indicate not a local trouble calling for local treatment but a diet which is so unsatisfactory that the vitality of the tissues is run down? That the intestinal tract is losing its digestive power in some degree?

When the digestive tract becomes inactive, it tends to harbor putrefying matter, and feeds into the blood stream the unwholesome products of bacterial action on the protein matter of the food.

In other words, if your skin and hair are off on tone, look to clearing up the intestinal tract for improvement. Not all the hair tonics or rejuvenating creams on the market applied locally will serve to restore skin and hair beauty if the intestinal tract is impaired.

Different things influence our lives for good or bad—the climate, the kind of work we do, the kind of place in which we work, its lighting, temperature, and ventilation. Yet there are two factors which stand out above all others in determining what our health will be. These are the nature of our food and the effectiveness with which we rest.

Ignore Laws of Health.

The above is the opinion of Dr. E. V. McCollum of the School of Hygiene and Public Health, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

"The most important things to consider," says Dr. McCollum, "are the kind of material which we place at the disposal of our bodies for construction and repair and the opportunity which is given the body structures to make the necessary repairs.

"Young women and girls are among the worst offenders against these most simple laws of health. This notwithstanding the fact that they, more than any other class in our population, are concerned with presenting the best possible appearance.

"Nothing contributes more to the success of a girl in any undertaking, business or social, than a good personal appearance," Dr. McCollum observes. "While most of them realize this and strive to attain it, they go about it in the wrong way, and fail."

Eating is the first consideration. Our diet, responsible for so many of our ills, has come to consist mostly of white bread, meats, potatoes, and sugar. From the standpoint of nutrition, this diet is a failure, although one may remain alive for years on it.

"The results of taking meat, white bread, potatoes, and sugar in excessive amounts," says Dr. McCollum, "and without correcting their dietary defects by eating amounts of certain foods which contain substances which white bread, meat, potatoes, and sugar lack, are a bad condition of the skin, enfeeblement of the digestive powers, debility of the intestine resulting in constipation, bad breath, lack of energy, constant fatigue, irritability, inability to rest, craving for excitement and entertainment, and inability to concentrate upon useful work or to take pleasure in profitable recreation, such as the reading of good literature.

Too Much Sugar.

"We eat too much sugar. When we eat the white bread and other cereals, meat and potato type of diet, together with much sugar or candy, we do not get enough of certain mineral elements such as the bones are made of. And we do not get enough of certain vitamins. These are the substances that provide health and vitality.

There are two classes of foodstuffs, Dr. McCollum points out, which possess remarkable dietary qualities. They are milk and the leafy vegetables. The latter includes lettuce, spinach, brussels sprouts, chard, turnip tops, beet tops, cabbage, and any other leaves which are suitable for human consumption. Both milk and the leafy vegetables are of such a nature that everything which is lacking or supplied in insufficient amount by a diet of white bread, meat, potatoes and sugar, will be furnished in abundance, provided a sufficient amount of each of these classes of food is eaten. It is also necessary, adds our well known authority, in order to get the best results in nutrition, to take each day a moderate amount of some fresh, raw vegetable food. For this purpose the fruits are unequalled, but raw cabbage, celery, lettuce, tomatoes, etc., are admirable substitutes.

As a simpler way of explaining a satisfactory diet, you are advised to take twice each day a salad dish of some kind. Once each day take a liberal helping of some such vegetable as are classed as potherbs or greens. In addition to this, take every day a quart of milk, or its equivalent in skim milk, cheese, cream, or butter. It is best to avoid eating much meat and sugar, but it is not desirable to leave either entirely out of the diet.

When these conditions have been complied with, the doctor assures us, we may safely select anything else the appetite may call for, and rest assured the diet will be good in quality and so constituted as to promote good health. Milk is especially useful to supply the element calcium, the principal constituent of lime. There is in milk, in addition, an abundance of proteins, or tissue building substances of high quality.

The habit of eating liberally of salads and of leafy vegetables will keep the intestinal tract in good condition.

A practice recommended by Dr. McCollum for washing out the intestinal tract, based upon ten years' personal experience, the experience of his associates in the laboratory and thousands of students, is to take on arising a quart of water at body temperature containing a teaspoonful of common table salt. It should taste slightly salty but not bitter. It should run through the intestine within three quarters of an hour to an hour and a half. One should not eat breakfast until after the salt water has passed out of the stomach.

Ordinary tap water taken in liberal amounts on rising is quickly absorbed and excreted by the kidneys. This is not so if the water contains the salt. It merely runs through the stomach and intestine and washes them out. As soon as one awakens it should be taken. The intestine is thus washed out thoroughly at the beginning of each day. Constipation leads to thick headedness, lassitude, headache, a sluggish and out of sorts feeling. A thorough clearing of the digestive tract improves the feelings of the average person to an extent which is a great and pleasant surprise, Dr. McCollum emphasizes, to nearly every one who learns successfully to carry out this practice of drinking "isotonic salt solution." Since there is no absorption of salt, or little absorption of salt, and the solution taken is of the same concentration as the blood, no harm can possibly be done by taking it every day throughout life.

The practice is not a new but a thoroughly tested health measure, we are reassured.

To sum up, Dr. McCollum tells us the way to avoid bad complexions, a feeling of unwholesomeness, stoop shoulders, falling arches, an expression of failure, and early signs of ageing is by a properly planned diet and a condition of internal cleanliness, and suitable sleep and rest periods.

BEAUTY ANSWERS.

ALICE: THE COLD BATH DOES not take the place of a warm bath which is essential to cleanliness, but is taken for its constitutional effects, chief of which is the strong nervous shock which it causes, followed by reaction. The shock is depressing but the reaction exhilarating. The secret of the tonic effect of the cold bath is prompt reaction from the shock. If it is not sharp and quick, the bath is exhausting, hence a cold bath is not enjoyable by all alike. It requires resistance which is increased by habit. The reaction may be promoted by vigorous rubbing with bath towels. A cold bath should be taken in the morning, and a warm bath at night.

BERTHA: NOTHING BETTER for excessive perspiration than a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Dab it gently on the part every second or third day, and allow to dry on. Three such applications are usually sufficient; then wait for a recurrence before resuming treatment. Some persons apply it once a week to avoid a recurrence. You will be able to discontinue wearing the dress shields after a few applications. Allow the lotion to dry thoroughly before permitting the clothing to touch the skin.

MOTHER: FOR THE WARTS ON your little girl's hands, you may apply the following lotion: One dram of salicylic acid, one ounce flexible collodion. Mix well. Apply with a tiny camel's hair brush for four nights. Then soak in hot water. This will take away part of the horny covering. Continue the treatment until the warts have disappeared. Warts are due to an infection of the skin.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

CORDED PILLOW COVER AND CASE.

DIRECTIONS are given today for cutting and making one of those pretty, round sofa pillows. Generally at this time of year there are many things about the house that need doing over, and one of these pillows may be a welcome addition to those already on hand.

One yard of 36 inch material will be needed for the case that the feathers are put into, and if the outside is made of one material, 1¾ yards of 30 or 36 inch wide goods will be necessary.

The case is made of two circular pieces—each one measuring 21 inches in diameter. These are stitched together in a half inch wide seam around the edge, leaving the seam open enough to do the filling, and then turning in the edges and overhanding neatly together by hand.

The outside of the pillow is plain on the bottom—the circular piece measuring 16½ inches in diameter. Then the puffing is cut—this should be 15x90 inches. Seam the puffing together and mark the lines for the shirrings. Mark at reasonably close intervals—4 and 8 inches from one of the long edges. Then crease the material on these parallel lines and run a fine gathering thread ⅛ inch from each folded edge. In these narrow casings cords are run. Then this long strip of material is gathered ½ inch from each edge, and the edge that is nearest to the shirrings must be drawn up as tightly as possible. The opposite edge is stitched to the bottom of the pillow covering—leaving enough of an opening to slip the pillow into. Then the opening is closed and finished there. Of course, stitching the puffing to the circular bottom must be evenly done—measuring both puffing and circular piece into quarters or eighths.

Then for the center of the top of the pillow cut a small circular piece, measuring 4 inches in diameter. Draw up the two shirrings and cord to the right size to lay smoothly over the top of the pillow; and turning in the edge of the small piece for the top ⅜ inch all around, lay it in place, and sew over the gathered edge.

This makes a lovely pillow cut from one of the changeable taffetas or satin. And it is pretty made entirely of one color and material, or two materials—using something contrasting for the bottom of the pillow, if desired.

It can also be made without the shirring over a cord—simply shirring the edge and setting it on to the small top disc.

Surprises All Around.

Immediately after our marriage my wife and I moved into a large but old fashioned house with gas lights. My wife had never had any experience with them, so I was always a trifle concerned about them. I was at that time working as a mechanic and always changed clothes and washed at the shop before coming home at night. I then changed to other clothes before eating supper. For this purpose I invariably went up to my room at once before greeting my wife and we met at the supper table.

On the night in question I had gone to my room, and was dressing, when I heard my wife calling frantically from the hall below for me to come down at once and find out where the gas was leaking in the parlor. Fearing that she might strike a match and be hurt, I rushed down to the parlor and warned her not to do so. Upon sniffing several times, I could detect no odor of gas and asked her for a match. She gave it to me in the dark and I lighted one of the burners. As the room lighted up I saw it was full of people and most of them close acquaintances. I was too petrified to turn out the gas or to move for a long moment and then ran for the stairs amid loud laughter. It was surely a surprise party for me—and for all concerned. C. S. B.

And That Wasn't All.

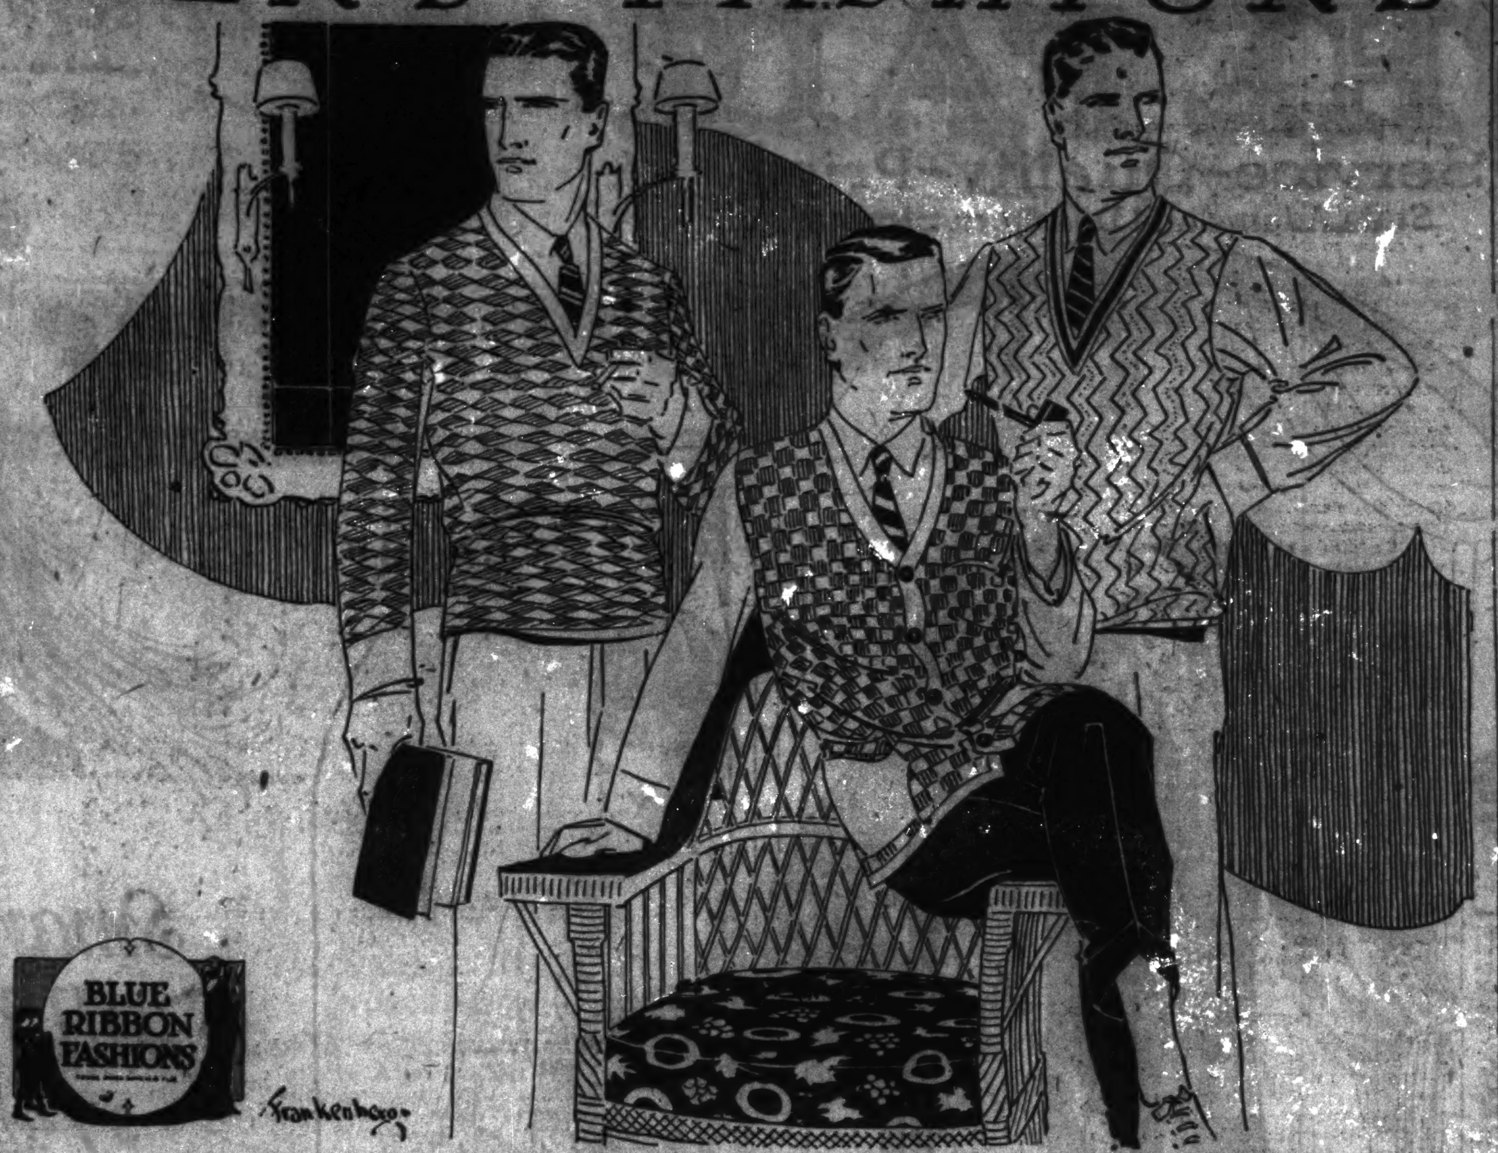
The members of the campfire group to which I belong, are often asked to serve at church dinners and suppers. On this particular evening we were to clear the tables before the speaker of the evening began his usual "We are gathered here this evening, etc." I was nearly finished with my table when I put one glass into another, half filled with water. Imagine my consternation when water squirted in all directions, not only making the tablecloth wet and mussy, but spoiling the black satin dress of the woman seated at that place.

That wasn't all. In making a hasty exit I bumped into the corner of the table and walked out midst the stares of diners. B. C.

Armed with a Hose.

It was growing dusk. Armed with the garden hose, I was giving the lawn and flowers a bath. The terrace is screened by rose bushes. I decided to give the boulevard a shower to wash away the dust of the day, and aimed the hose outward full force, just as a loving couple sauntered along the sidewalk. To say that their ardor cooled is stating the truth. I mumbled some kind of apology; the dripping swain stuttered something, and they disappeared into the darkness. B. R.

MEN'S FASHIONS



DIAMONDS, CHECKS AND A FAIR ISLE PATTERN IN POPULAR SWEATERS

BY A. T. GALLICO.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There are, as you are doubtless aware, sweaters and sweaters. Where a decade or so ago a sweater meant a high necked woolly affair for football players and ice skaters, today there is at least one sweater in the wardrobe of the well dressed and completely outfitted man. Especially is this true when the man has a taste for sport and an opportunity to indulge.

The country club, or the private home outside the city limits, is the home of the sweater. It is, of course, only used for sport or informal country dress. Probably there are more sweaters on golf courses than anywhere else. The slipover or coat sweater is such a comfortable substitute for a coat during a game that it is more often used than not. The large number of sweaters seen at Palm Beach last winter is as good a proof as any that this article of apparel is one of the most important in the sport field.

The fashionable sweater today is worn more for style than for warmth. The slipover and coat sweaters that are most popular in the fall are not of the extremely heavy variety that one wears for winter sports. Yet they furnish sufficient protection from the fall breezes that they are practical as well as ornamental.

The style of sweaters most in favor just now with the well dressed sport man are the fancy front coat model, the solid color slipover, and the coat sweater with plain front. The sleeveless sweater is in the minority, more so in the coat model than in the slipover. The sleeveless sweater, jacket style, is with or without fancy front.

The pullover sweater of solid color, especially white, with constrasting band at the neck, is still numbered among the most popular. This type of sweater usually has the V neck.

The favored colors for sweaters are blue, brown, tan, gray, and white, with green, yellow, and black tagging along behind. The above colors are, of course, the background only. In the case of the fancy front sweaters other colors are introduced.

Checks, jacquard pattern, diamonds, and the multi-colored Fair Isle patterns are the designs which are most seen in the fashionable sweaters. The sleeves are usually plain, but not always. It is quite correct to wear a sweater of which the sleeves are as gay as the front.

The Fair Isle sweater, as suggested above, is still with us. Two years ago the prince of Wales made it fashionable by being seen in it once. He still wears this type of sweater. Therefore it is still fashionable. Not a great percentage of the Fair Isle sweaters sold in this country ever saw the island from which they are named. But the domestically knitted models have all the necessary ear marks of the style, and it is not necessary to produce a foreign label on your chest to be correctly Fair Isled. Some extremely creditable imitations have been made over here. The Fair Isle sweater is most favored in the slipover model.

We saw some attractive new sweaters in a showroom the other day that used the diamond pattern. A novel note was struck in one of these by having the diamonds run horizontally instead of vertically. This is not a pattern which a fat man could wear safely, as the straight across effect made by the diamonds would give added breadth of figure. On the other hand, the pointed effect of the diamonds running up and down on the figure tends to slenderize. This is also true of golf hose. The usual effect of fancy golf hose with pronounced pattern is to make a leg look bigger than it is. The diamond pattern with the diamonds running vertically is an exception.

This horizontally diamonded sweater mentioned above had sleeves to match the front and was of the slipover variety. Another sweater we saw there was of large checked pattern, in two shades of gray, a coat sweater, with plain sleeves. Such a sweater would harmonize well with a pair of gray flannel knickers or trousers.

Another checked sweater came in two shades of pastel green. This also would look well with gray trousers or knickers.

Sweater vests are still being worn, but they should be reserved emphatically for sport wear. They have no place with street attire.

Love Letters

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

WAITING.

BELOVED: Truly you are my heaven on earth, for without you this world indeed would be dreary. Since you came into my life some few months ago all is changed, and each day to me opens as the budding of a beautiful flower, and at evening time closes its petals for its sleep, perfectly content with all the world.

Life without you I cannot, will not, imagine. Life with you, a joy untold, where nothing else matters but to love and be loved by a man like you. To me you are the essence of all that is good—all that is wonderful—for you have taught me the meaning of true love—the love that comes but once and lasts forever.

Night time is love time, and with the shadows of eve tide come memories of you—memories that no artist could paint nor any poet describe. I sit by my window and as the moon shines down on the garden beneath I recall the glorious nights when you, my love, and I sat there, perfectly content to say nothing but mean much. Some weeks it is since I have had you near, but the thought of your coming soon brings a radiant smile to my face, for when you are near, beloved, all is happiness within. Always yours,

CONSTANCE.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually, gently absorb the devitalized surface skin, revealing the youthfully fresh, white and beautiful skin underneath. The process is a purely hygienic one and leaves no trace but that of enhanced loveliness.

Cutaneous defects like freckles, pimples, moth patches, liver spots, roughness, etc., of course disappear with the discarded scarfskin.

Mercolized Wax

has hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic users all over the world. Miss Constance Bush, 3501 Third Ave., Detroit, Mich., says: "Have not found anything nearly as good as Mercolized Wax. Everyone I meet has a nice word to say about my lovely skin, on and off the stage. People turn the second time to look at me on the street."

Have you tried Mercolized Wax? Sold by all Drug and Department Stores; 96c a box.

Fall Opening

A SEASON of decided style changes is this autumn. Skirts gather themselves up above trim ankles; frocks choose the elegance of the simply tailored Redingote and tunic, even for most elaborate of dress purposes; ensemble suits are labeled correct for informal dress wear; coats have a flare and dash which is youthful and different.

Small hats cling close to the mode, their saucy bits of brim a defiant challenge against the urge toward larger, more sweeping shapes. Accessory to the fact, come glove and kerchief of French character; Paris inspired and American created fancies to tease the nebulous dreams of Milady Fashionable into articulate form.

Colors burn with the vividness of a maple leaf against an autumn sky. Fabrics are rich in texture as well as sheen. Metallic cloths are molten moonlight on a sea of riotous pattern and figure, of which the brocaded fabrics provide the background. And this is fashion's scene for the beginning of the winter season.

Novelty French Gloves

$4.95

A FANCY cuff, with just a bit of flare, finishes the smart glove of the season. Scallops or perforated designs often use gay coloring as contrast.

Gloves for Every Occasion, $2.95 to $5.50
Main Floor.

Hosiery

Sheer silken stockings are now chosen to match a gown, rather than to contrast in color. Featured for the Opening are Majestic Silk Service Hose, medium weight, full fashioned, pure, Jap silk, with lisle tops, offered at $2.

Others at $1 to $5.50
Main Floor.

Hand Bags

The top handled bag now comes to join underarm styles, envelopes and swagger models. It may be of calf, pin seal, crepe seal or vachette—lined with leather or silk moire. The model illustrated, capacious, yet compact, is only $5.98.

*Others from $2.98 to $15.98
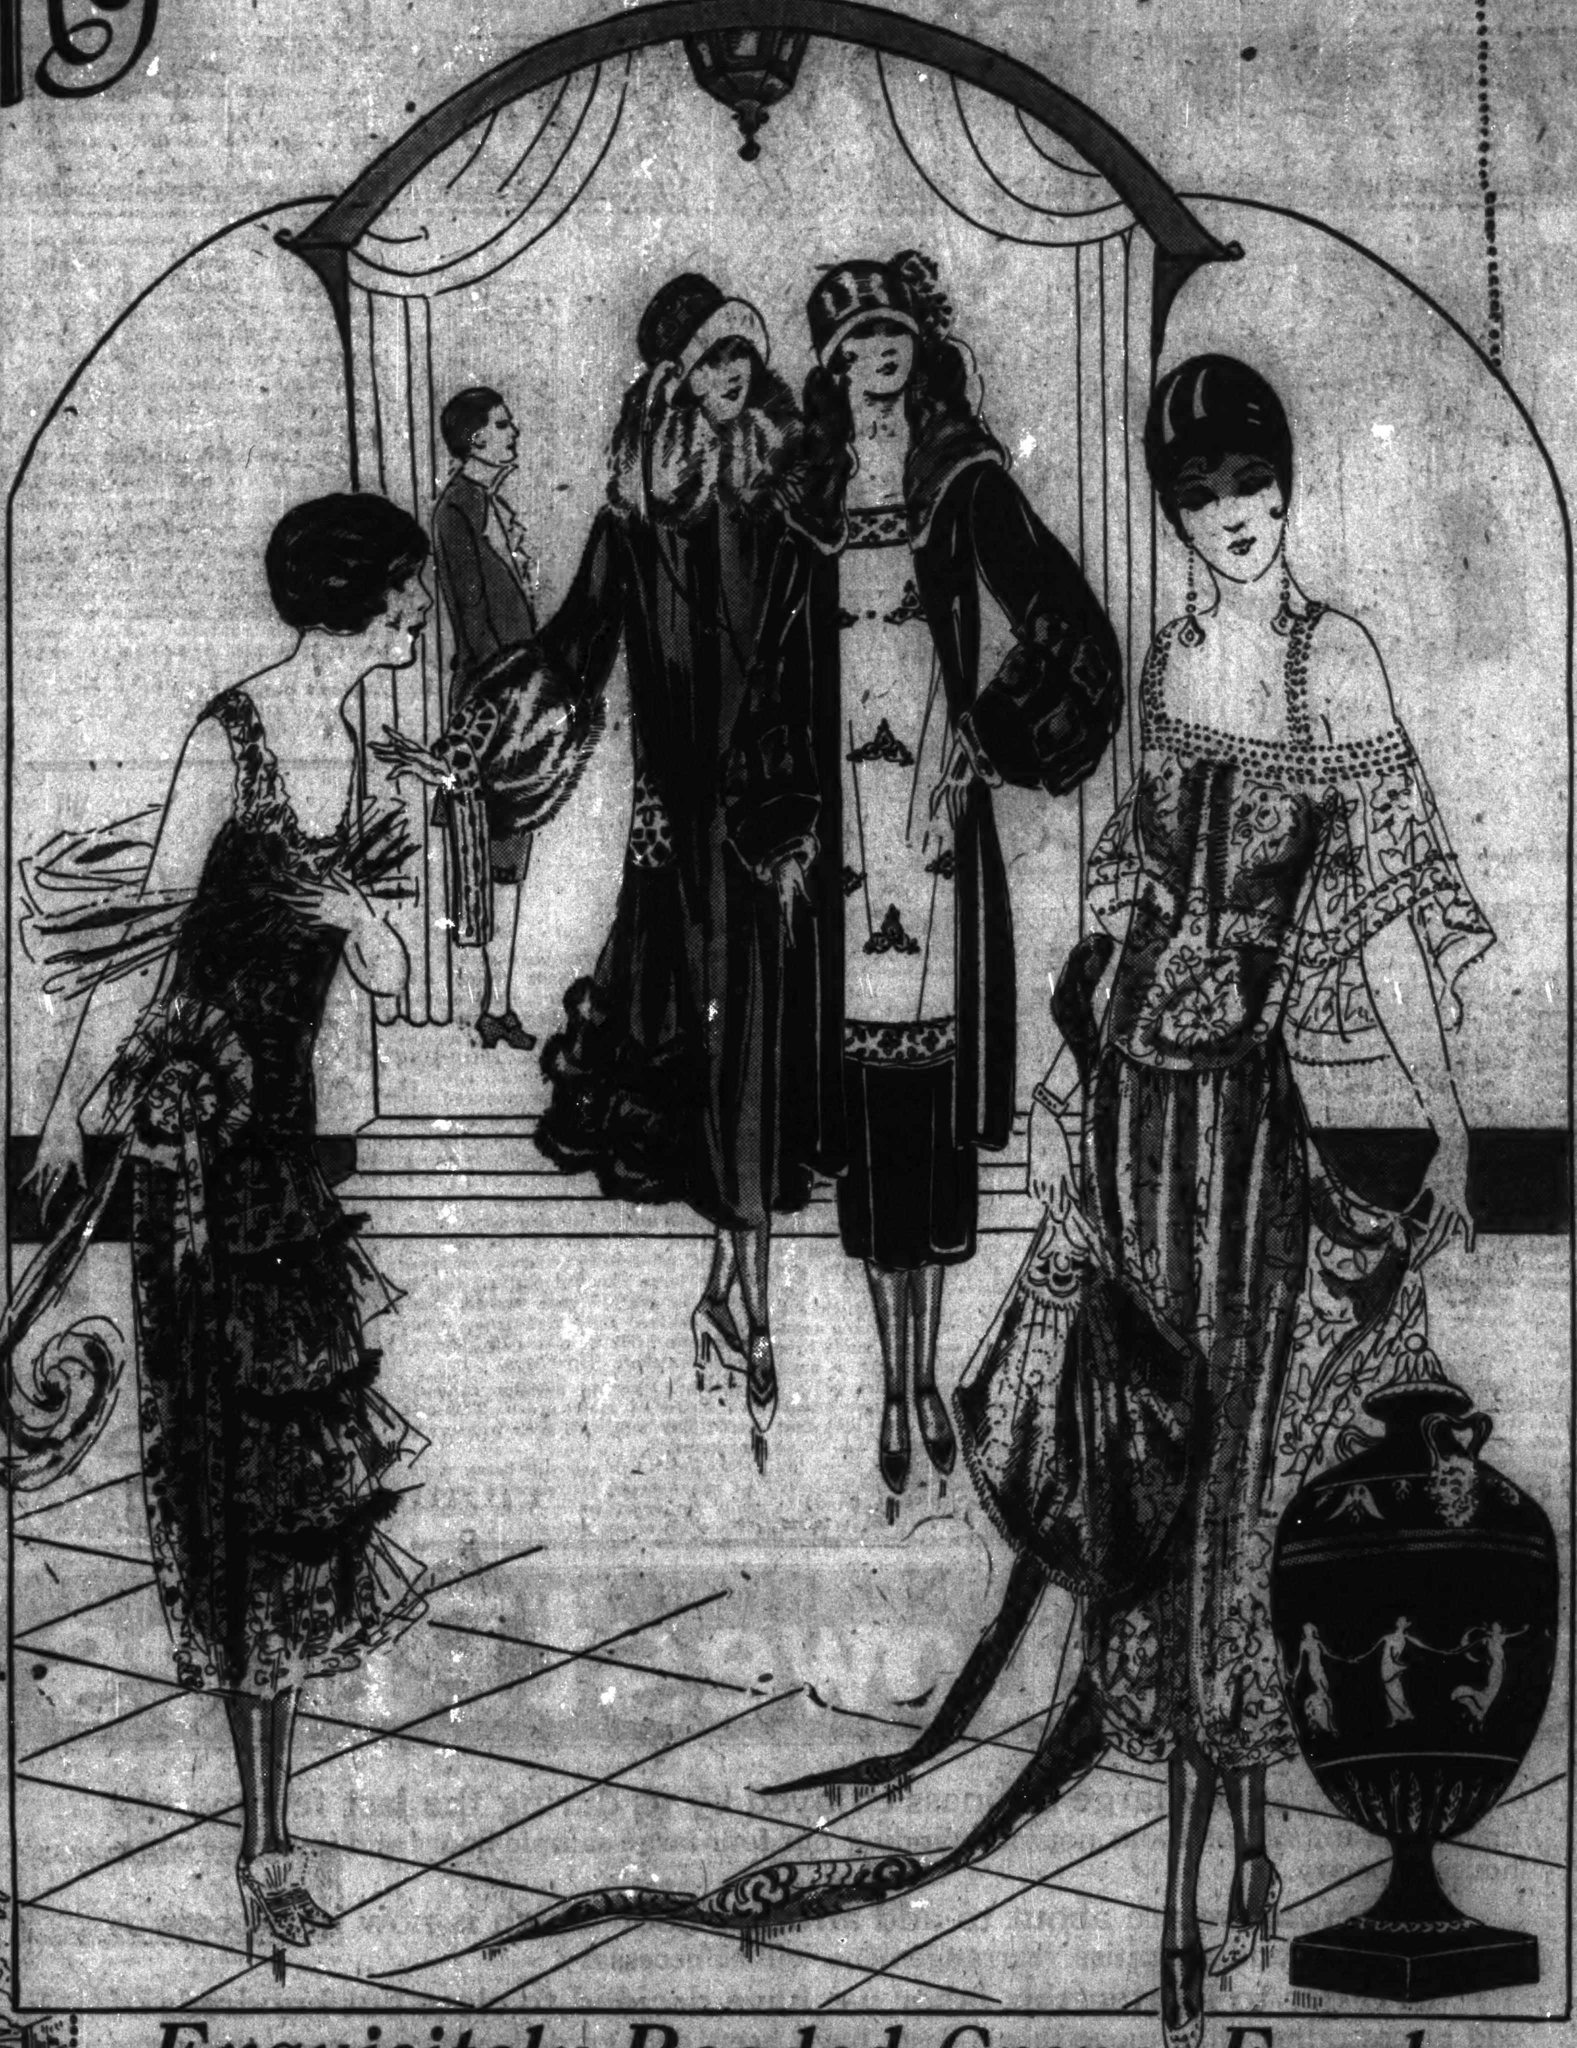
Main Floor.

Corsets

Smart corsets, designed for every type of figure and in every type of lacing or non-lacing style, are to be found in the Opening display. We particularly feature a group which is priced from $5 to $8.

Others from $2.50 to $22.50
Third Floor.



Exquisitely Beaded Crepe Frocks

A Direct Importation From Paris $49.75

FROM France, for an Opening feature, come these lissome, charming crepe frocks, elegantly hand beaded. Both in line and color they reflect the loveliness of Parisian design.

Charming New Cloth and Silk Frocks $25

THE woman who seeks individuality of dress at a moderate price will be charmed with this assortment. Frocks of soft crepe satin; serviceable, smart charmeen and twill bloom, Marchand, Pataw crepe and flat crepe, and the more elaborate embroidered chiffon and chiffon velvet.

Other Charming New Frocks Are Specially Priced from $16.75 to $235

Women's and Misses' Luxurious Fur Trimmed Coats $65

Soft, warm woolens with beautiful fur collars and cuffs and, in some instances, borders of fur. The use of squirrel, beaver, kit fox and Jap mink provides the soft, smart finish.

Other Coats in an Interesting Variety Priced from $25 to $245

The Ensemble Costume—A 3-Piece Suit—In Prices from $75 to $175

Women's Section. Third Floor. Misses' Section.

Blouses

Tunic effects bring the overblouse into increasing favor. Chenille cut velvet is a handsome foundation for formal dressy overblouses of this mode. Also the soft, clinging silks may be effectively employed, for they do not destroy the slenderness of the prevailing silhouette. Featured for the Opening are straight line tunics of rich crepe de Chine, with sly piping of the same fabric. $5.95.

Other Blouses in a Charming Assortment at $8.95 to $27.50
Third Floor.

Neckwear

When in doubt, select a new collar and cuffs or panel of lace, and the costume is altered. Tailored simplicity extends itself to the cut of collar and cuffs, even when attractive laces make the ensemble effect dressy. The round collar is youthful and fetching, the frilled cuffs a graceful touch at the wrist. Featured for the Opening are Buster or divided collars and sets, fashioned of combinations of real lace, for street or afternoon frocks. $1.

Other Smart Neckwear Priced at $1.50 to $25
Third Floor

Smartest of Fall Millinery

$7.45 to $10.00

CUNNING close shapes and the more daring off-the-face models indicate the wide opportunity for choice in this group of smart hats for Opening Week. Rich, silky panne and Lyons velvet and hatter's plush have been artistically trimmed, deftly shaped to follow fashion's latest dictates.

Other Models from $12.50 to $47.50.
Third Floor

New Fabrics

Fashions in Silk point emphatically to bengalines, failles and cords as the popular weaves of the season. Also the soft, shimmering satins and satin crepes add their gleaming lengths to the story of fabrics for fall.

As to Cloth Fabrics, French flannels in stripes and checks, charmeen, twill, hairline stripes, checks and plaids are the insinuating, subtle tailored weaves smart for street wear. The vogue for plaids extends from cloth fabrics into silks, and includes every gay color.

Velvets Are Amazingly Popular—Elegance characterizes the silky chiffon velvets; brocaded velvets, chenille cut effects are handsome with bold patterns, beautifully executed. Cerise is combined with rose taupe in one exquisite design. Colors are resplendent: penny brown, orange, henna, deep blue, rust, jade—but black is without doubt the choice of the majority.

The Fall Opening Features a beautiful heavy bengaline, in black, cocoa, shutter green, taupe, at a most interesting price, the yard, $5.95.

Fabrics Range in Price from $1.69 to $12.45 the Yard
Second Floor.

Sweaters

A swagger notion—the use of contrasting borders on shaggy brushed wool sweaters. A chic knitted brushed wool model is featured for Opening Week in various attractive styles, and in the season's chosen colors at $5.95.

Others at $3.95 to $22.50
Third Floor.

Silk Underwear

Autumn has sent us the innovation of the tiny pleat on silken lingerie. Featured for Opening Week are beauteous chemises and gowns of crepe de Chine and crepe back satin, with hand work and Irish or filet laces.

Chemises are priced at $8.95.

Gowns are priced at $13.95.

Other Lingerie, $4.95 to $25
Third Floor.

Footwear

The "Yvette" cleverly illustrates the use of the tiny steel bead and its effectiveness on slipper buckles. This dainty slipper has one partially concealed strap, giving a plump effect. In satin or patent. A $9.00 slipper at $7.65.

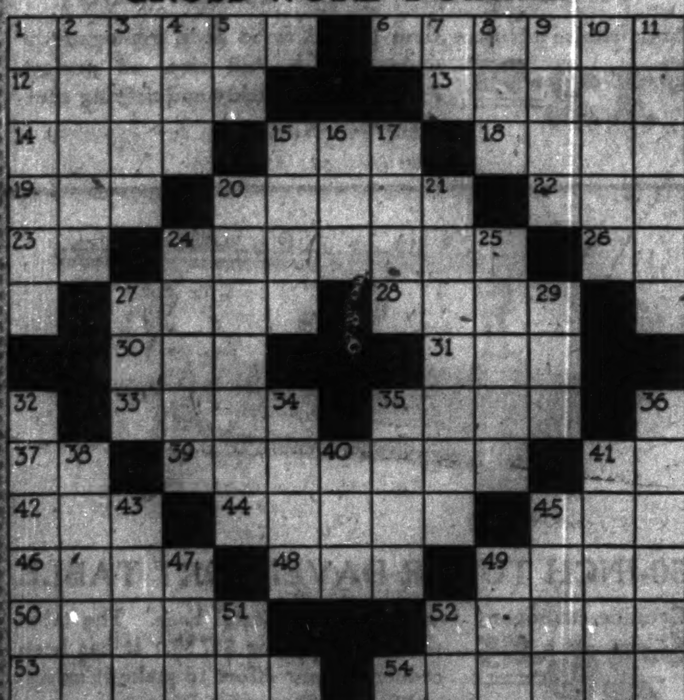
CROSS WORD PUZZLE



DIAMOND SOLITAIRE.

SOME words in the diamond solitaire are hard and some are easy. But a little application, without too much reference to Mr. Webster's well known book, will bring the solution. It's much harder to construct than it is to solve, which is as it should be.

The Directions.

1. Remember that every number in the puzzle indicates the beginning of a word, reading either horizontally or vertically, or in both directions.
2. Put only one letter in each square. Numbers may represent letters in either a horizontal or a vertical word.
3. A letter always runs from its initial letter to a black square or the end of the diagram.
4. Fill in the squares with words whose definitions are found below. The numbers of the definitions correspond to the initials in the form.
5. When you have solved the puzzle correctly it will read both horizontally and vertically with words corresponding to the definitions and you will be a full fledged cross-word puzzle devotee.

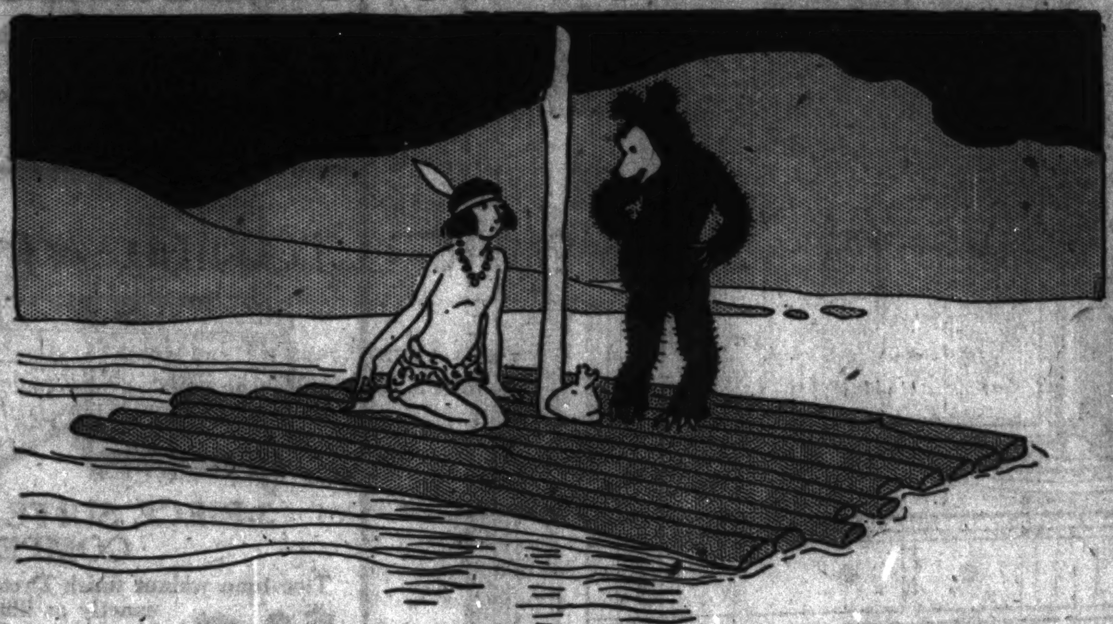
THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

RAFTING DOWN THE RIVER

By Raymond Kelly.



"WHAT'S the name of our ship? Fuzzy Wuzzy asked Hawk Feather, as the raft swung into the current and started down stream.

"The Island Queen," answered Hawk Feather. "I named it after the South sea lady I'm going to marry when we find our gold mine. One mine is to be for me and one for you, and they're going to be right opposite each other on the two sides of the same valley. You can be king on one side of the valley and I'll be king on the other. We'll build our castles right next door to our gold mines, too, and then our treasurers won't have to carry the money so far. It takes an awful lot of money to run a kingdom, what with wars going on all the time and the offices working night and day to get the proclamations printed. I shall issue a great many proclamations."

"So shall I," said the little bear. "I shall start all mine with the words, 'Be it hereby edicted.'"

"There isn't any such word as 'edicted,'" said Hawk Feather.

"Why, yes, there is. I just made it."

"But you're not allowed to do that, you know. Any schoolteacher will tell you that."

"Yes, but I'm a king now, or at least I'm to be one soon. What's the use of being a king if you have to mind school teachers? I shall make all the new words in my kingdom. That'll make my scepter ever so much more septic."

"That's a wrong word, too," objected Hawk Feather. "It means something entirely different."

"It did, but it doesn't any more. In my kingdom I shall change the meanings of words to suit my royal will, and if anybody objects I shall have him executed. My executioner will be the most highly paid man in my kingdom, because he'll be the busiest. There'll be so many prisoners of war to be disposed of."

"That's fine, Fuzzy," said Hawk Feather. "I can see right now that you're going to be a wonderful king. I shall execute my prisoners, too. Then I shan't have to have any jail in my kingdom. Jails are such cluttery places and, besides, they're cruel. I just hate cruelty."

"So do I," said Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I hate it almost as much as I like to eat when I'm hungry. Let's eat now; that is, of course, provided you're hungry, too."

"O, I'm most generally hungry," replied Hawk Feather, "and even when I'm not I can always eat a few apples and doughnuts."

So the two friends ate their lunch and then sat on the edge of the raft and dangled their toes in the cool water as they watched the trees and bushes on the shores past which they were drifting.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Gwenyth was sadly disappointed because the new baby wasn't a girl. But we tried to tell her a baby brother would be just as nice to play with, and she said: "Well, maybe he'll be all right when I get used to him." M. P. J.

Betty Jane was playing in the yard when the family doctor came along and called to her, "Hello, Betty Jane."

Betty Jane paid no attention to him and he again called, "Hello, Betty Jane."

Again she paid no attention to him. The doctor put his hands up to his mouth and called loudly, "Hello, Betty Jane." She looked up and said, "I not sick." G. H.

Betty was relating her vacation experiences. She told of a bus ride: "And we rided on a bus, where we did n't pay nothin' to get on. We just paid to get off." M. D.

Betty's mother always has her tell me how long she can stay when she comes over.

One day she did not mention any time so I asked: "Betty, how long can you stay?"

She answered: "O, until the clock fours, unless you pass the cookies before that." E. U. D.

Leslie had been ill, but as soon as he was able to be out of doors he wanted to go and play with the other boys of the neighborhood. He was told he was not well enough yet.

"Why," he said, earnestly, "I feel fine. I've waited until I am sure I can lick any boy who is foolish enough to start anything." E. M.

Tommy's aunt came to visit him one day. Tommy opened the door for her but said nothing. "Why, Tommy," said Aunt Julia, "aren't you going to say 'hello' to me?" Tommy's reply was, "But, Aunt Julia, you are so unexpectable." E. F.

Bobby's airedale and Jimmy's collie got into a fight yesterday and their small owners were much distressed over it. After peace had been restored, Bobby and Jimmy began to argue as to which dog had been the cause of the scrap.

"Your ol' collie started it," asserted Bobby.

"Aw, he never did!" Jimmy contradicted. "He didn't do a thing but run out an' make a face at him!" E. C. B.

Eleanor was asked by her teacher at school how many children they had in their family. Eleanor brightly answered "Three." Coming home to luncheon she found a newcomer. When she went back to school after luncheon she told her teacher she had made a mistake.

Teacher said, "Why, Eleanor, didn't you count right?"

"O, yes, I did, but some one brought one this morning." I. S.

Knowing that Mary was wearing a hand-me-down sweater and cap, I said: "You look just like Helen today." She answered happily:

"Of course, I do. Some of me is Helen." E. U. D.

"Shall we go in and get a bottle of pop?" asked Uncle Joe, as he and Alfred were passing an ice cream parlor.

Alfred hesitated a bit, looked a little downcast, and then said, "Let's order something that have eatings with it." E. L. R.

Recently Beth was taken in a store to purchase a dog. The child looked at many and then pointing to a spotted dog she said: "I'd like that painted one best." C. C.

When Donald returned from a vacation spent with a most indulgent aunt his mother asked, "Well, did you have a good time, dear?"

"Did I?" exclaimed Donald. "Well, I should say so. She treated me every minute just like a friend." E. G. R.

New Safe Way To Remove Teeth Stains

New Discovery Bleaches Dark Teeth Instantly!

A new safe treatment has been discovered which dissolves teeth stains instantly, giving dull, dingy teeth a charming new whiteness and lustre. This new treatment is called Bleachodent Combination. It consists of a safe mild liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid instantly curdles or softens the stains, while the paste removes them and if used daily prevents the formation of future stains. You just brush your teeth with a few drops of the liquid, then use the paste and before your very eyes your teeth acquire a clear, flashing whiteness that even ten times the scouring by old-fashioned methods could not give them.

Bleachodent Combination is safe and harmless. No effect on the enamel as its mild ingredients are especially combined to act only on surface stains. Gritty and abrasive dentifrices should never be used. If you want sparkling, white, pearly teeth get Bleachodent Combination today. Small cost at good dealers, such as: Wolf Drug Co., Inc., Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner, Economical Drug Co., Walgreen & Co., and leading druggists wherever this paper is read.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this get two ounces of Calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The Calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington, with current market materials, and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

COOKING CUCURBITACEAE.

NO farmer, especially no old time farmer, would blanch at the word cucurbitaceæ, so why should a cook? Here is how to pronounce it: The C's are pronounced like K, the first U is long, and the second like that in "urn"; I is short. A and E are long, and the last two letters are pronounced like long E.

The dictionary definition of this word is: "A family of chiefly herbaceous tendril bearing vines containing about 90 genera and 700 species, mostly tropical. The family yields such vegetables as the cucumber, melon, squash, and pumpkin." Gray's botany says of the family that it is represented in cultivation by the gourd, pumpkin, and squash; muskmelon, cucumber, and watermelon. If the book had been written later the English marrow would have been included in this list. Some botanies define the cucurbitaceæ, which as a word surely, and to speak vulgarly, is quite a mouthful, as the gourd family, and others as the squash family. In practice neither of these designations seems to convey quite meaning enough, so why not use the true and big family name?

All Are Gourds.

We can easily get into trouble if we try to give a conclusive and inclusive definition of either pumpkin or squash. The old marketman's definition of a squash, as distinguished from a pumpkin, was to the effect that all varieties having soft or fleshy stems, either with or without a shell, and all varieties having a hard woody stem and without a shell, are squashes; while those having a hard stem and a shell, the flesh of which is not bitter, are pumpkins; and all of this latter class, the flesh of which contains a bitter principle, are gourds. Botanically, all are gourds, so there you are, and again we fall back on cucurbitaceæ. But some one has said that cooks are not so much interested in the whence of these things as where they go.

There is another definition yet, and closer to the cooking and eating feature of these plants, defining what squashes are as against gourds. It is that the squashes are eatable at any period of their growth. It is a pity that more persons do not understand this, for from now on till frost time one may eat squash blossoms, the unmature squash, and even the leaves and the heavy knots in the vines. I have bought the leaves and blossoms in Italian markets and cooked them, each separately, like greens, and called them excellent. The late blossoms on the pumpkin vines, blanched, gently cooked and seasoned, make a pleasant novelty.

The Zucchini.

This little Italian squash is found in many of our cities now from Los Angeles, where they prepare it divinely, to New York, which is supplied by New Jersey gardens, where grow acres of it. I have never, to my knowledge seen it ripe, but when it is the size of a cucumber it is daintier and has a richer and creamier flavor than any of our summer squashes.

To cook it, wash and rub it dry, but do not peel. Cut it in thin slices, about a quarter of an inch thick, and sauté these gently in butter until they are tender.

The Italians are likely to combine squash with half a dozen other vegetables and to use both it and their pumpkins in soups.

The Italian Marrow.

There is probably a technical Italian name for this squash, which is about as large round as a small English marrow but is much longer—often long, indeed. Cook an onion or two in butter or other fat, add a tomato, and then stew inch thick slices of the marrow or squash in the mixture gently and without any water or only tablespoon or so. This method of cooking we are accustomed to call Creole, but it is also good Italian. A savory and most appetizing vegetable when the squash is cooked just right is secured by this way of cooking it. Cucumbers may be substituted for the squash.

Sweet-Sour Squash.

This is an Italian way ["agro-dolce" is the Italian for sweet-sour] of cooking squash, but our southern cymling or "patty pan" is excellent cooked in this fashion. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a frying pan, and cook in it for five minutes or so two level tablespoons of flour after stirring these smooth with the butter. Have the squash cut in thin slices, put a layer of it into the flour and butter, packing it as closely as possible, and when it has cooked so as to have a nice crust on one side turn it and sauté it on the other. If there is too much fire the butter and flour will get too brown before the squash is done. Add a little boiling water and some a second time even if it is needed to help the squash to cook tender. When it is thoroughly done, sprinkle over the slices either lemon juice or vinegar, and then some powdered sugar, and cook a few minutes longer. Serve hot either as a separate dish or as a garnish.

Baked Squash.

All the small squashes like the sweet potato are perhaps best baked without cutting them in two. The Fordhook is one of the finest of these and some are called marrows. Precious juices are lost when they are halved and baked, and like the melons the sweetest part is next the seeds, and all this sweetness should be preserved.

Finishing Stewed or Steamed Squash.

Hot cream, with salt and perhaps a bit of pepper, makes an excellent finish for squash, and it will take considerable of it as it will of butter if that is used; therefore, though the squash has almost no calories of its own when prepared for the table it may have a high content of them. We do not waste the water which is in even a steamed squash today, as they used to when they put the hot squash in a towel and twisted the water out of it. A better way is to stir it rapidly over a hot fire when the liquid is at least dried into the squash. The ideal way is perhaps not to have the squash neither too wet nor too dry when it is served.

Vegetable Marrow.

Vegetable marrow is about the wettest of the squash family, especially when it is plain boiled. I have had it so prepared at a family table in England, and it was not much seasoned. It held heat like a soapstone. But an English woman once wrote that the following was the only way to prepare it: Peel, cut out center, cut flesh into two inch square pieces, put in earthen casserole with cover, dot with butter, and add salt and pepper, but no water. Bake in a good oven half an hour or so, and serve in the dish in which it was cooked. In this way it is cooked in its own steam and since it is about 90 per cent water it has enough to make considerable steam, and still not be dry when this has cooked it. A white sauce may be added but it is better without it.

Cooking Cucumbers.

In the old cook books, the oldest in fact, there are many mentions of cucumbers but in almost or quite every case directions are given for cooking them, often with some of the same stuffing the chicken or some other meat they are to be served with has. In American tradition cucumbers are not cooked, or only the ripe yellow ones. By the way, a letter just received from Haarlem, Holland, has this to say about cucumbers: "They have huge yellow cucumbers that are much bigger than our green ones and perfectly fine." Perhaps our big yellow cucumbers of the best varieties are finer than we guess.

Almost any of the vegetable marrow recipes may be followed in cooking cucumbers, and perhaps the latter will be preferred for quality. The French have not a few recipes for cooking, seasoning, and serving them quite variously. In ten minutes one can get a savory dish by cooking cucumbers, and there are not many vegetables that can be prepared as quickly as this.

Boiled or Stewed Cucumbers.

Peel cucumbers carefully removing but a thin shaving. Cut in quarters and then cut these pieces in half or dice them, removing the seeds. Cook for fifteen to twenty minutes in just a little bit of lightly salted water to which may be added a little onion cut fine or celery or both, or some other vegetable seasoning. Serve with butter.

Cold stewed cucumber is good with a French dressing.

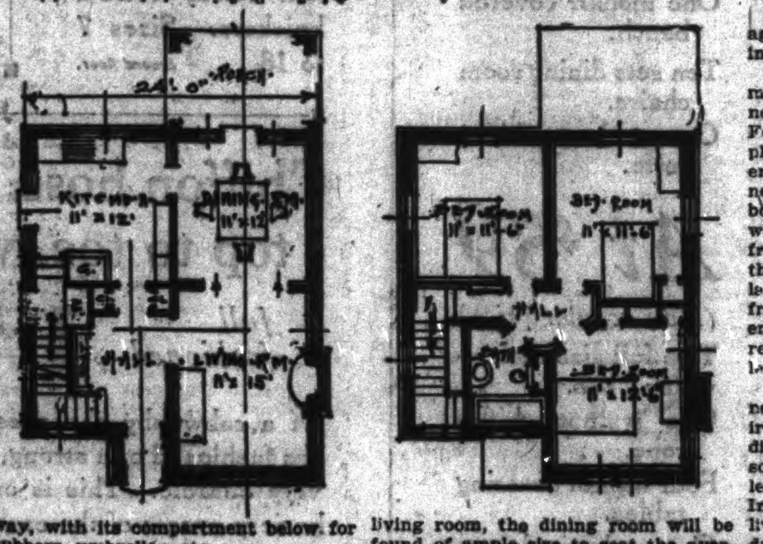
COURTESY ARCHITECT CHARLES H. NORTH PHILADELPHIA



SQUARE IN PLAN.

THIS charming seven room home is a direct deviation from the usual design for small houses. Viewed from the street, it has the appearance and bearing of a large house located on an unusually wide lot. The direct opposite, however, is the case. The house may be built on a forty foot lot without the least semblance of crowding. As it is only twenty-five feet wide over all, there would remain still plenty of room for a driveway at the side.

The architect, Charles H. North of Philadelphia, has given his idea much careful thought and study. A survey of the plans will show that the house is practically square, with the rooms formed by two main cross walls. By this arrangement only one masonry pillar is required in the basement, eliminating expensive masonry walls.

Recognized as especially suitable for dwellings is the specified construction. The exterior walls are of back plastered stucco on metal lath. The metal lath is thoroughly plastered inside and out to make an air-tight, moisture proof wall. Wood sheathing is eliminated, the studs being well braced at all corners. Actual experience in all climates has indicated that this type of wall construction is warm in winter and cool in summer. While any color scheme may be used, the architect recommends light buff stucco, rough-finished and dashed with green pebbles. With this combination the roof should be of gray slate, and all exterior woodwork stained a dark brown.

This style of architecture calls for the first floor of the house to be set close to the ground, but as this means expensive excavation to secure the proper height for the basement, the architect has gained the effect desired by throwing up a terrace along the front, on a level with the entrance, so that only partial excavation is needed. As a further effect of joining the house and ground together, he has sketched in vines and shrubs to mask partly the lower section of the house. The necessary note of color is secured in the box of flowers at the upper windows.

An overhanging portico shades the entrance and affords protection to the vestibule from the rays of the sun. This vestibule is floored with a mosaic tile. By addition of a door to the reception hall, it becomes an ideal storm shelter for more severe climates.

The activities of the entire house radiate from the reception hall. From here access is afforded to both the living room and kitchen, as well as to the stairs leading to the second floor. Two closets for wraps are also provided. Another convenience is the built-in seat in the angles of the stairway, with its compartment below for rubbers, umbrellas, etc.

At the right of the reception hall is an opening into the living room. An old fashioned fireplace dominates the outer wall, and is the first thing to greet the eye of the incoming guest. It is flanked by windows under which may be built shelves for books, if desired.

Although sligthly smaller than the living room, the dining room will be found of ample size to seat the average family and guests without crowding.

The kitchen is somewhat larger than many kitchens, yet it is arranged that no unnecessary steps are required. Four windows and an outside door give plenty of light and assure a cool kitchen, even in the hottest weather. The need for a pantry is eliminated by cupboards and drawers built in along one wall where they may easily be reached from the gas range, the work table or the sink. The ice box is located on the landing of the basement stairs, away from the destructive heat of the kitchen, but readily accessible and easily reached for icing through the ground level entrance.

A feature of this charming house, not to be overlooked, is the large porch in the rear, off the dining room. Individual taste may desire this porch screened or glazed as a sun porch, or left open as shown in the floor plans. In any event, it makes an ideal summer living room, or a cool and inviting dining room.

The stairway to the second floor leads to a short hallway off of which open the three bedrooms and a bath. Each of the bedrooms is of good size, is a corner room, and has at least two windows. A tiled floor and built-in tub are specified for the bathroom.

The basement is reached from either the kitchen or an outside ground level entrance. It is under the entire house and may be partitioned off for the heating plant, coal bins, and laundry room, as required by the owner.

In building a home of this type too much emphasis cannot be laid on the necessity of proper surroundings to bring out every phase of its character. The selection of the lot with reference to the character of the neighborhood as a whole is of paramount importance. Even on a wide or double lot the house would look entirely out of place between two large apartment buildings or on a street where one story bungalows predominate. Placed, however, among houses of similar size and cost, and where each bespeaks individuality of its owner, this house will be a decided asset to a neighborhood. In like manner the planning and laying out of the lawn and garden should be done with the desire in mind to benefit the neighborhood as a whole as well as to improve the house itself.

PUTTING DISCARDS TO WORK.

TODAY we are right in the middle of planning to move next week, aren't we? Or if we are staying where we are, we're thinking about winter, overhauling last year's heavy clothes and furniture.

There's so much we don't want to use—clothes the children have outgrown, window drapes and pieces of furniture we want to replace or which won't fit the new apartment. And yet we don't like to throw them away while they still have usefulness left in them!

That is the problem I can help you to solve—the problem of getting the remaining usefulness out of these articles about which you don't care any more! Every one of them can be put to work in poor families where they may even save lives this winter, if you will say the word.

Old beds and bedding can be placed in families where children and aged persons are sleeping on the floor in damp basements and wind swept attics. Curtains and drapes will serve, not for ornament merely, but to cover cracked walls and keep the wind out when winter comes. Old stoves and heaters will be veritable godsends to many a poor family in Chicago. And clothing—you can be sure that every bit of warm clothing can be considered as averting serious illness in families where the father will have to go to work without an overcoat and good shoes, or children will go poorly clad to school—unless serious illness overtakes them.

Remember that you'll do nothing with such articles except place them in the attic or storeroom or throw them out. Think of the good they'll do if you'll let me distribute them among the hundreds of cases I have on file—and then write, telling me what you have! I'll guarantee to place every article where it will do more good than you thought possible.

Needs Rug and Bureau.

"I am an expectant mother and am trying to get a little home together. My husband is out of work, so it is hard to get all the things we need. If any one has a discarded rug or a bureau that is no longer in use, it would be greatly appreciated.
"MRS. L."

Mrs. L. will be glad to call for the things she requests if you have them to give.

Getting a Start.

"I have an opportunity to get a position in an orchestra but cannot afford to buy an instrument. Is it possible that any one has a C melody saxophone to donate to me to give me a start?
G. W."

G. W. will be only too glad to pay any charges of shipping. Can some one assist her in geting an instrument?

Offers Dining Room Table.

"Is there any one among your readers who would care to have a pedestal dining room table? I have one I would like to give to some family that can use it.
MRS. J. P."

If you are interested in Mrs. J. P.'s offer, please make your request for the table at once.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THE TUBE STILL RULES PARIS

By Bettina Bedwell.

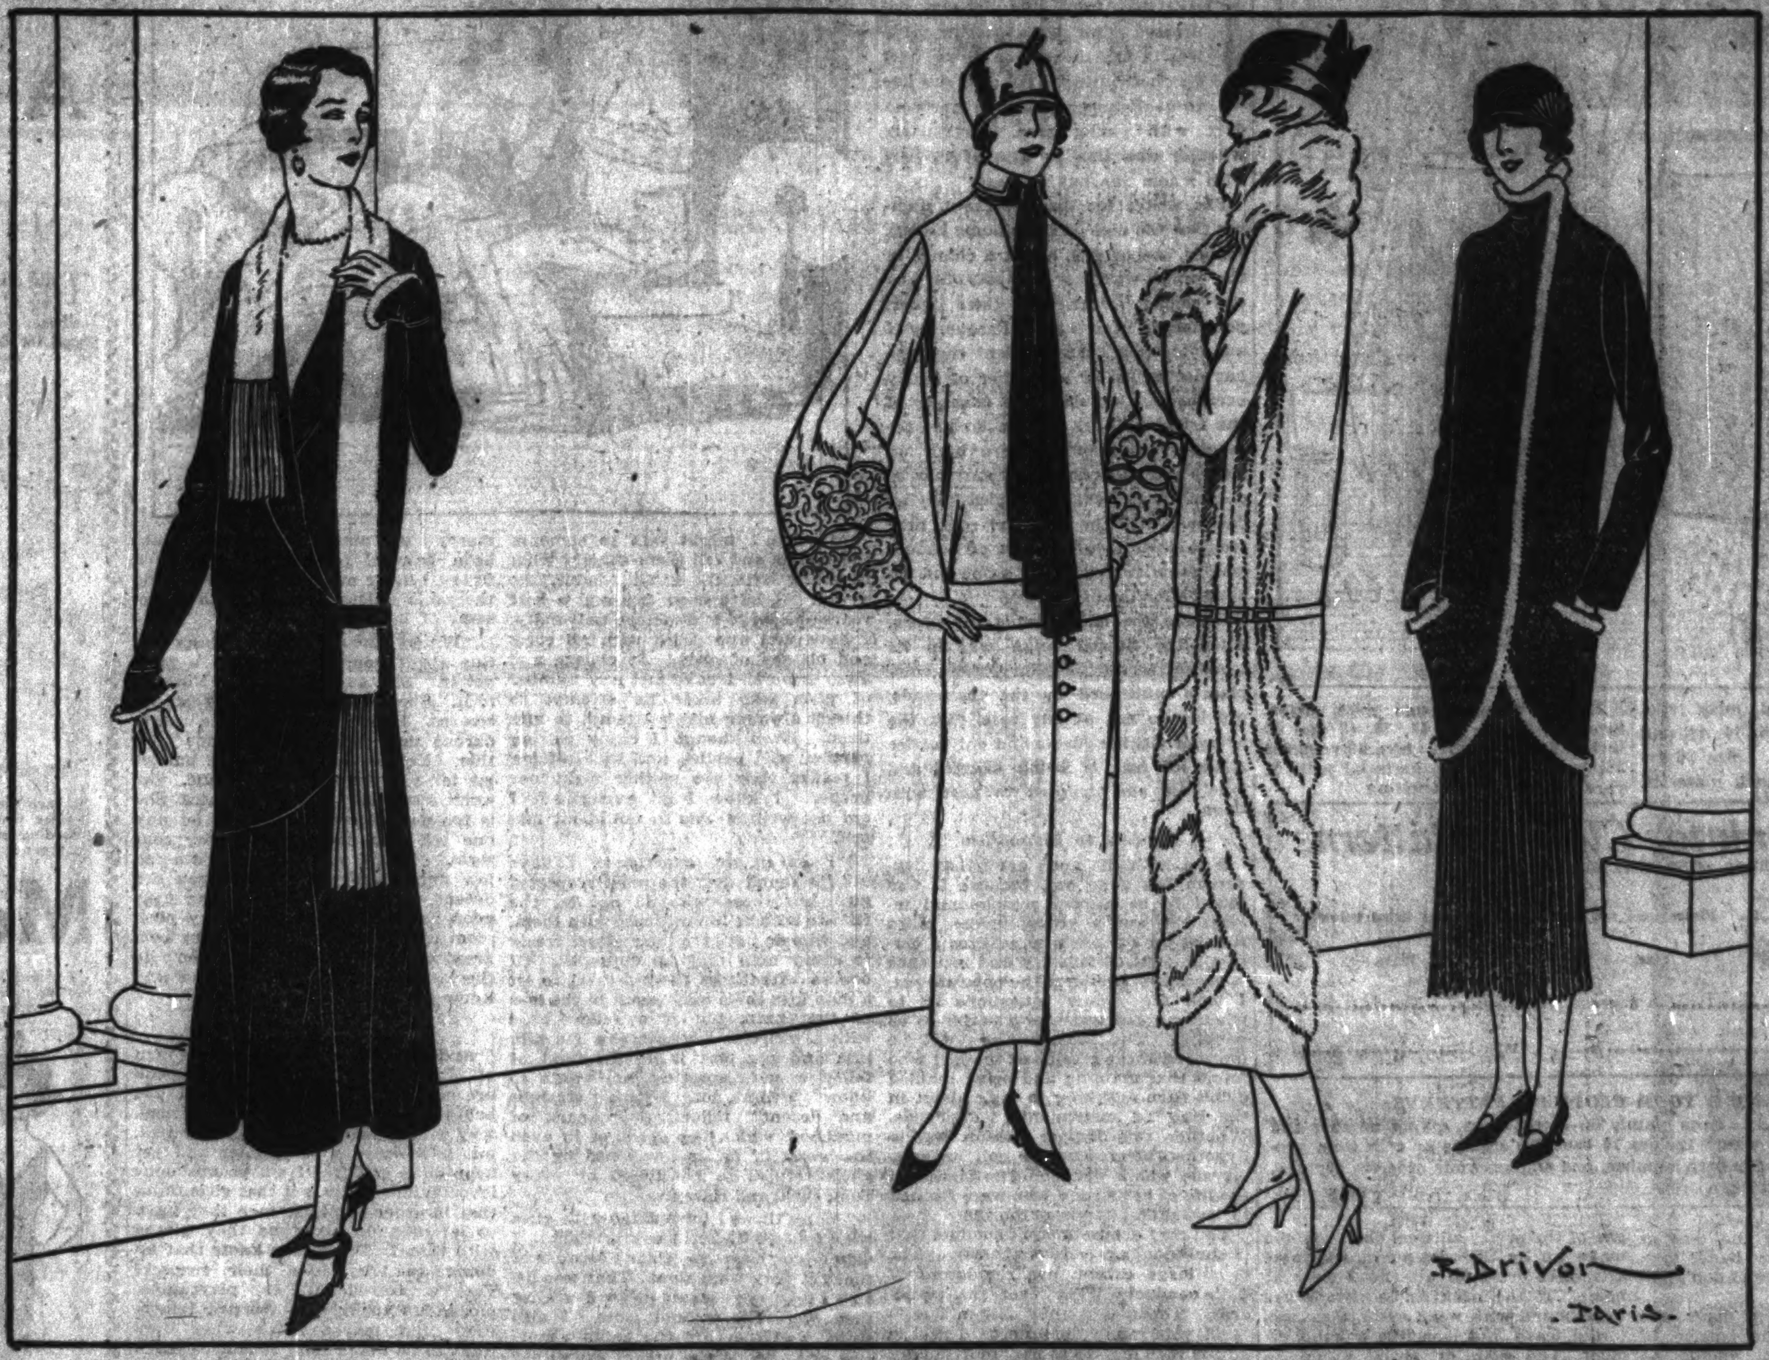
[Chicago Tribune Foreign Correspondence.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Breaking the line! A front page headliner for the four years of war is a fashion headliner today.

The simple sheath frock—the tube, as it is colloquially called—still dominates the mode of Paris. It has been an impregnable line, all assaults against which have failed until the autumn openings showed us how to break it without destroying it. I have, many times, become all excited over the news that the narrow silhouette was to be replaced by an ampler one, only to sit week after week in the salons of the couturiers and see nothing else but the straightest of straight line clothes. The seating facilities of the luncheon tables at the Ritz seemed capacious for double the number of smart women served there, whose bulk was reduced to shadowy proportions by the stringent demands of fashion. Everybody was bent on conforming as much as possible to the curves of the pencil, and forecast after forecast of fuller lines went into the discard as false prophecies. They are still false, beyond a limited extent, as far as appearances go. Lines for autumn are predominantly slender—but there is a difference. The line is broken. We have a waistline and we can let the world know it smartly.

They are also cutting the tube at the top, so that you can get into your newest frock without shimmying and ruining your coiffure. This cutting has brought the neglected surplice closing back into the highest favor. Fortunately, too, for it is about the most becoming line to the Anglo-Saxon figure that the line creators have ever produced. The tube, with its cut out neck and narrow unrelieved line, was trying to all except the slimmest figure, whilst the surplice is graciously enhancing to thin and stout alike. Paris creators are quite mad about it.

Our first model shows one way of using this line on a coat dress. This model was worn at the Casino in Deauville by a French comtesse, in her late forties, and quite stout. She was that afternoon the smartest woman in the room, and looked youthfully slender in her perfectly fitted frock. Black velvet, of which the dress is made, helped, and the surplice closing reduced her too ample lines of bust expertly. When I saw her she was wearing the ermine scarf as you see it, tucked under the six inches of belt on the left side, but as she left she released the long end and threw it about her neck, thereby carrying that nice stream line over the shoulder and down the back. The ermine fringes which complete the scarf are interesting details that also helped the process. The skirt of this frock has a diagonal, circular flounce, but so supple and thin is the velvet that one is merely conscious of a series of soft folds and ripples, hanging quite straight and conserving the slim silhouette perfectly.



The surplice closing of this frock breaks the narrow line gracefully.

Melon shaped, embroidered sleeves lend novelty to a dress of kasha.

Slenderizing curved bands of skunk fasten under buckles of jade.

Fuchsia jacket trimmed with ermine bands over ziblikasha brown dress.

Quite another manner of breaking the line is seen in our second offering. It is done in the manner of Jeanne Lanvin by the sleeve, which is a counterbalance to the narrowing effect of the extra length satin ties. The large sleeve is looming as a growing feature of winter styles. If the sleeve isn't large they put big cuffs on it or embroider it in a great many cases. Of course, the type of sleeve shown here is pre-eminently suited to Miss Eighteen to Twenty-four, whose arms are slender at least, if not thin. The dress is made of sand colored kasha, a shade that Paris loves so much she is carrying it over to winter clothes, and a fabric that serves at least half of the winter daytime models here. The sleeves are cut like a melon, and embroidered in a delicate line of black. The little turnover collar is a type that has very largely superseded Byron and Peter Pan collars on boyish frocks. It can be worn open, sans tie, if desired, but it is smarter arranged as you see it here, held close about the neck by the black satin tie which falls to the waistline. The final item of comment is the four inch suede belt, a belt that many of the most important houses are featuring. Sometimes they decorate such belts with stenciled leaves and flowers, done in gold or silver, and some of them are studded with what look like big rounded nail heads, either in brass or steel.

The third figure in our illustration shows a new winter coat, which made its first appearance in August and is already seen on the Avenue Champs Elysees. Made of green ottoman silk, the silk that has been so long associated with aristocratic old ladies, and which has taken first place as the fabric for coats in Paris this winter, it is made comfy by a lining of paler green wool. Of course, the rich banding of fur and the fur collar and cuffs stave off zero temperatures also. That habit we had of wearing a wide band of fur straight around our narrow coats last season was very fine for slender people, but don't you think that this curving the fur and placing it in vertical bands up the side is better? It is more graceful, and it permits a short person to luxuriate in fur bands without taking inches off her stature. It doesn't do a bit of damage to the thin people, either.

The third burden of my fashion song today is the separate jacquette. Last winter the pretty debutantes were all marching up and down 5th avenue wearing very short box jackets of fur, which were so piquant and charming they must have hated to abandon them. But there is an end to everything, and the short jacket vanished. It has come back again for the winter of 1924, a bit grown up, but still as youthfully insouciant as ever.

Some of these little protectors achieve a really new line, a mighty difficult thing to do in view of present fashion restrictions. The model you see here does that. The artist sketched it in front of the Ritz, on one of our wintry August days with the thermometer fluttering around 59, while the pretty American girl who wore it was dancing about to keep warm. She had it tucked up around the neck, as you see it, but in the couturier's salon it was worn open, showing wide, ermine edged revers. The cut is almost triangular, with the base of the triangle forming the shoulder line, the sides converging toward the pockets, which break it, extending a jaunty welcome to cold hands. It is made of ziblikasha in the new fuchsia red, a shade that one couturier calls "violine," and prodigiously smart. When the jacquette is worn open it reminds you vaguely of a smoking jacket, with its rounded corners and its revers. The dress worn beneath it, a part of the complete costume, is of brown ziblikasha with fuchsia buttons and bands on its jumper blouse.

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of each pattern you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

How to Use the Patterns

PATTERN No. 1641 is particularly becoming to full figures — the long lines giving the slender effect we all prefer and the plaited sides giving ample room to walk in easily—taking away that too tight appearance one sometimes sees in plain skirts on stout women.

Dark colors and full finished materials will be more becoming in this design; and one material may be used to good advantage. The most difficult part will be laying the plaits, but this needn't be hard if done in the right way.

Perforations are made on the pattern, showing exactly how to lay three plaits, and a basting thread or French chalk should be used to show each perforation. After the pattern is removed, start with the plait at the right hand and pin in places from the top, down. Look at the wrong side to see that the plait is as smooth as on the right; then baste in place from top to bottom. Do this with every plait, and leave the bastings in until the dress is finished and pressed.

The pattern gives a choice of a long, dart fitted, flaring or shorter length sleeve; and the opening at the neck, coming as it does to quite a deep point, is a becoming feature.

Here is a slip cut in two pieces instead of one. The pattern number is 2200, and no doubt will be a favorite with many. The upper part of this slip may be cut straight across the top in camisole style, or it may be cut with a narrow shoulder seam and rounded in the back and front at the neck line. There is a one piece gathered skirt attached to the waist, which measures at the bottom, for size 36, about one and one-half yards. This design is suitable for cambric, long cloth, sateen, satin, crêpe, pongee, or wash satin. If one wishes to trim it a little, bound edges with narrow lace whipped on would be pretty. The binding could be cut from a contrasting color; and in that event no lace would be necessary; a little embroidery on the middle front would be enough decoration.

If the straight top is preferred, it would be pretty to put a row of feather stitching at the bottom of the hem—using the same or a contrasting color. The straps may be made double and seamed together on the wrong side. Be careful not to have the tension too tight; or, if sewed by hand, take an occasional backstitch, and don't pull the thread too tight.

A scalloped or pointed hem line would be pretty for the bottom of the skirt, and the hem should be turned up straight all around, then the scalloped or pointed outline marked on it. After this is done run a short stitch all around the outline, taking the stitches through both thicknesses. Then cut just outside these stitches and bind the edge.

The long waisted bodice and full skirt of pattern No. 2097 seem especially suitable for the lighter weight materials. One of the beautiful changeable taffetas would make up charmingly for a young woman, being just the thing for dancing. Such a material would need but little trimming—just lace or metallic braid to finish the neck and the edges of the sleeves and to outline the bottom of the waist. A plain satin slip with all over lace, for the full skirt, would also be pretty, using the lace over the satin for the bodice also.

A girdle made of several narrow ribbons in different colors would be attractive. This sort of girdle should be finished with long ribbons at the left side.

The closing of this dress is on the left shoulder and under the left arm, and the skirt is left open for closing on the left side.

The short sleeves are cut in one piece, and the skirt is straight—in two pieces—and gathered at the top, and joined to the bottom of the bodice.

Satin, satin crepe, or plain satin would be lovely for a dress of this kind for some one a little older; while one of the pretty all wool challis would make up by this design into a most attractive dress for afternoon wear at home. If the neck and sleeve edges were bound with wash satin, the dress would wash and iron like a handkerchief. The sash or girdle would be a separate thing, and could be dry cleaned when necessary. Or, better still, the waist and skirt could be put together with a piping of the wash satin or the dress material.

Happy Is The Mother
when the baby is well

Constipation is the bane of babies. Prevent it with half a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

IT requires no long experience in the bringing up of children to understand that food waste must pass out of the system promptly, and so the intelligent mother will watch the baby's stools.

In infancy the child should have two or three passages in 24 hours, and in childhood one or two. Less than that will soon tell in canker sores, coated tongue, foul breath and restlessness. As these signs develop, promptly give half a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in a few hours the symptoms will vanish.

Thousands of mothers have reared proud families with no other medicine than Syrup Pepsin, for it has relieved their families of constipation for thirty years. Rev. Mary F. Malcolm, Belle River, Ill., and Mrs. James Richmire, [illegible], N. Y., have had great success with it and constantly urge others to use it.

Here you have a laxative ideally suited to family purposes, as it acts gently and without griping, is exceptionally pleasant to take, and contains no opiates or narcotics.

The formula is clearly stated on every package and is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and agreeable aromatics. A bottle, which can be had at any drug store, lasts a family months and costs on average of less than a cent a dose. Give one-half to a teaspoonful, according to age, for constipation, biliousness, loss of appetite, flatulence, belching, and to ward off fevers and colds. You will be grateful to see your child have natural sleep without the use of opiates.

Use it yourself and give it to the adults in the family. There will be less sickness, less absence from work and school. When you see what Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does for you you will discard pills and powders and salts and coal-tar drugs disguised in candy. A remedy like this, that sells over 10 million bottles annually, the largest sale in the world, must have superior merit. We guarantee it or refund your money.

Free Sample Bottle Coupon

There are people who very rightly prefer to try a thing before they buy it. Let them clip this coupon, pin their name and address to it, and send it to the Pepsin Syrup Co., 518 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois, and a free sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will be sent them postpaid by mail. Do not inclose postage. It's free.

SYRUP PEPSIN
The Family Laxative

THE ANTI-PETTING STANDARD by Doris Blake

Its Message to Girls Is That Kissing Is Not a Short Cut To Popularity

JUDGING from the letters addressed to me, the absorbing problem in the life of the young girl is whether to be popular she has to be loose and easy in her conduct with young men, particularly whether she has to kiss every boy with whom she has a "date."

She writes me times without number that the nice girl, the home loving, refined, decent girl, hasn't a chance in the world with her competitors who can smoke, swear, hold their liquor, pet, fondle, and kiss. Frequently I am told by a correspondent that she has decided, after a number of lonely evenings, to emulate the example of the frivolous one, as men do not appreciate qualities that are built on ideals and self-respect. I am told by others that, having wearied playing patience with the nice girl rôle, they took a flyer into the line of conduct men seem to favor and came out no happier for the experience.

During the last couple of years, when the flapper reign was in its more or less dubious glory, these complaints multiplied by the thousands, proving to me, at any rate, that the average girl has ideals and only under stress of fear of being isolated and lonely is she tempted to part with them.

Good-by to Flapperism.

Now, with the good news that flapperism has gone out, because it was found to be a poor matrimonial investment, and a young person takes the flapper's place who realizes a certain amount of mystery and reticence is necessary to charm the opposite sex, I look for fewer questions as to whether a girl must be a petter to be popular. The competition will be fairer, with the exodus of the girl who found that mauling and being mauled didn't earn anything to brag about in the way of matrimonial dividends. Whether this flapper person was a hypothetical creature or not, undeniably she was a disturbing influence in the life of her sisters who were trained to less promiscuous outbursts.

You may accuse men of conduct that is unbecoming. Nevertheless, girls, to a large extent, are regulators of that conduct. They set the standards. The men simply fall in line.

All you young girls need to realize now is that it is up to you, individually and collectively, to stick together on this new anti-petting standard that is being popularized by the flapper's younger sister. It goes without saying that to retain her charm and lure she is not going to be manhandled the way her sister was.

What a College Boy Thinks.

And just in the event that you still have a suspicion in the back of your mind that kissing is a short cut to popularity, I want you to read what a college boy has to say on the subject:

"I wish I might talk to some of those girls and tell them exactly what is wrong with the kissing habit," he writes. "I have been two and a half years at a large midwestern university. I have met and dated with all sorts and classes of girls. At college and away from it, I have met any number of girls who made no attempt to thwart a young man's attempt to kiss them. Even though I enjoy petting parties, wild parties, and such affairs, I realize they are neither right nor proper. I know I do wrong, but I am not writing this to tell about myself.

"Even in my experience, I have always found that the most respected girls are those who do not let the fellows become too intimate with them, and who do not give their kisses freely to every man they go out with. Of course, oftentimes their refusal to let a man kiss them may result in the loss of that man, but if a fellow goes with a girl only because she lets him kiss and pet her, is he the kind of fellow a self-respecting girl wants to know? I think not. With a "straight and decent" fellow, that spark of manhood, which lies dormant in even the worst of us, is awakened by the girl's refusal to be kissed by every Tom, Dick, and Harry.

"Many times I have dated with girls who refused to let me kiss them. I didn't go back to them because I thought they were slow. That was before I had any sense. Now I realize they were decent—not slow. I also notice that they are the happily married ones, while the others are either single or married unhappily, except in a few cases.

Plain Common Sense.

"Take it from me, when a man's passions are aroused by feeling a girl in his arms, he just loses his head. The dresses the girls are wearing, with nothing or little beneath them, can make a man easily lose control of himself. Don't think I am preaching. If a girl were here now and she gave me the chance, I'd kiss her and act the fool. But I can tell you that when I marry I will marry a girl who has not been handled by me or other men freely, believe me. Any fellow will do the same unless he marries in a moment of light-headedness.

"Would you rather the fellows say this about you: 'Yes, she is a good petter. She sure can kiss. Nothing to it. She'll kiss any one and bar no comers. I don't doubt that she'll do a darned sight more than kiss, too.' Or this: 'Yes, she is a little slow, but let me tell you she is a straight kid. She won't kiss every fellow she dates. She is too darn decent, and don't let any one tell you she isn't 100 per cent right.' Would you rather have a fellow fight over you because you are decent, or have the fellows drag your good name in the dirt in every poolroom and drug store where they congregate? Don't tell me they won't do the latter, because I am a fellow and know how fellows act and talk."

From a Business Man.

And this from a young business man of 27: "I don't favor the girls who are so formal they freeze you. I like bobbed hair, a little powder, and rouge. Any young man likes the lively girl, but it is easy to be popular and yet keep one's self free from promiscuous lovemaking. Why is it that girls think that in order to please men they have to let men do about as they please with them? Don't they know that by doing so they lose their respect? They're considered as playthings, picked up today and dropped tomorrow. But maybe that's what they want to be taken for. It is a pleasure to go out with a girl who, by her actions, orders 'Hands Off,' and is nevertheless a real girl who enjoys a good time, a dance, a swim. One leaves a girl like that the better for having had the privilege of her company.

"I contend that men will not force improper lovemaking upon a young woman unless her actions show that she will stand for it. We are a lot of dirty rotters. But thanks be for the girls who help to keep alive the few decent instincts in us by their own attitude of self-respect."

Jack Sprat Combats Fat
A Costly Flour—A Secret Formula

White bread, while wholesome, is overloaded with starch, and starch makes fat—so health authorities agree. Jack Sprat is low in starch content, high in nourishment. It is made under a secret formula known to no other baker, and from a special anti-starch flour. One flour ingredient costs nine times more than white flour—but practically all starch is removed. A costly process—so no other bread is like Jack Sprat—none can give Jack Sprat results.

Banish Fat, Then Youth Returns

Eat Jack Sprat regularly at all meals. Toast it for breakfast. Use it for sandwiches at luncheon—at night for dinner. Note its delightful "tanglike" flavor. Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

He Needs Encouragement.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a young fellow in my neighborhood whom I have known about two years, and whom I like very much. I meet him often on the street, and when we walk alone he often tells me how much he loves me. He has never taken any advantages and has always treated me nicely. Do you think he really loves me? DIMPLES."

Dimples, I think the young man must care for you. He has proved it in his treatment of you. I feel you have not given him the necessary encouragement, dear. The next time you see him, invite him to spend an evening at your home. This will show him that you would be glad to have his friendship.

Friendless and Unhappy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I'm a girl of 17 and I'm not at all good looking and I'm friendless. I've neither girl friends nor boy friends, which, of course, makes me unhappy. I'm a telephone operator and on split hours and at times I think that nobody wants to bother with me on account of my hours, but I've not had a girl friend for the last two and a half years. Please advise me, although this is not a love affair. Do you think my position has anything to do with it? "LONESOME."

No, dear, I do not think your position has anything to do with it. It must be that you are not friendly in your manner toward others, as it is not the natural thing for a girl of your age to be without friends. You should have many friends, dear. Take an inventory of your qualities and compare yourself with the girls who are popular. You must come in contact with many girls at your place of business and can do this readily. Make it a point to be friendly with every one, have a smile for all, be unselfish in your manner—and you will cultivate friends, I am sure.

To Be Expected.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16 and have been corresponding with a boy friend four years my senior. I love this boy dearly and I know he reciprocates my love, as he has often told me so. Up until a month ago, he wrote to me constantly, but for no reason that I know of he did not answer my last letter. I am sure I did not offend him in any way. Do you think I should drop him a card and ask him what the trouble is, or do you think he does not wish to keep up our correspondence? "WORRIED."

Worried, I shouldn't write him again if I were you, dear. You know the boys are fickle, just as the girls are, so I guess the young man has found some one who interests him more than you do. You mustn't blame him for it, though, as he is still young and is likely to change his mind many times. The thing to do is to have many friends, and then if one goes back on you you won't mind it so much.

Better to Forget Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man, 19, and in love with a young lady who is 16, and who lives out of town. Her mother strictly forbids her or me to write to each other. We did not do anything wrong, so can you please tell me what to do. "GEORGE."

George, I think under the circumstances it would be wise for you to forget about this young lady. If her mother does not approve of your writing to her, you would place her in an awkward position by continuing to do so. There are plenty of nice girls in your own city, and after all it is more fun to have a girl you can call upon and enjoy things with than one you have to think about and write to, don't you think?

JANE BORDEN had married him, suddenly and unexpectedly—on an impulse. And then she had ridden over to tell the other man that their friendship must end. With dreams of happiness, she rode back to her husband's cabin—her own new home—and found him drunk, surly, vicious—more of a beast than a man.

A DRAMATIC SITUATION in a powerful story of the forests and sandhills of the south! This new serial, starting next Sunday in The Tribune, is full of action and interest from the dashing forest fire rescue in the first installment to the adventurous moonshiners' raid in the last. The setting in these southern wastes of woods and sand is pleasing and unusual. And the plot maintains the interest all the way. It is a fine story of love and adventure. Don't miss the opening installment in the magazine section of next Sunday's Tribune.

Swift rides in the night through forest and sandhills . . . a girl fighting for existence . . . moonlight raids with horse and gun... dark plotting and treachery... love and adventure... make up this fine story starting in next Sunday's Tribune.

"FEET OF CLAY."

Presented at the Chicago theater.

THE CAST.

Tony Channing	Ricardo Cortez
Bertha Lansell	Julia Faye

Dr. Fergus Lansell	Robert Edeson

By Roberta Nangle.

IN "Feet of Clay" Cecil De Mille gives you a picture that tickles your optics, even though it's rather a severe strain on your credulity. A sort of Ziegfeld of the movies,—he knows how to dazzle you with luscious looking girls, gorgeous gowns, and the most lavish of settings.

VERA REYNOLDS, who is pleasing in "Feet of Clay."

Unless you take your movies too seriously, this picture should entertain you. It should soothe the tired business man and thrill the not so tired steno.

The story? Mostly about two young things very much in love and struggling to keep off the matrimonial rocks. Kerry, the husband, cannot work because of a poisoned foot, so Amy, his wife, decides to earn a living for both of them utilizing her pretty face and figure as a model in an exclusive shop.

Of course, there is another man, fabulously wealthy, good looking, and very anxious to help Amy. And, to even things up, there is Amy's married sister, with more money than is good for her, and eager to help Kerry while away the hours when Amy is at work. She makes a beautiful mess of things, as such unhappily wedded ladies are wont to do.

The plot adjusts itself in the end, but not before Fate wreaks her vengeance on evildoers and it's a spectacular vengeance,—a drastic calamity such as De Mille loves to serve to his fans.

Rod and Vera Do Well.

The characters are well done. Rod La Rocque has a magnetism which helps him to get any part across, and in this he makes Kerry a boyishly wistful and appealing sort of chap.

Vera Reynolds is a dainty little morsel who knows how to wear clothes and to display a pleasing ankle. And in addition to her ornamental qualities, she offers a sincere bit of acting.

Julia Faye is almost perfect in her portrayal of the troublesome lady in search of sympathy. She vamps efficiently without offending your good taste, as most movie vamps do.

The other players are all capable, and the picture as a whole is good entertainment. Near the end of the picture there is a fantastic and rather terrifying scene of life after death with which the director may have meant to convey some overwhelming lesson—I'm not sure.

Anyhow, you won't regret having spent two hours witnessing "Feet of Clay."

ASK ME! ASK ME!

BELIEVER IN JUSTICE: Yes—but he retired from the screen for a long, long time. I've met him and know a lot about him. He has always been AWFULLY good to his mother.

MAYBE H. R. H. WILL VISIT HOLLYWOOD

By Grace Kingsley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Prince of Wales may visit Hollywood.

This thrilling word has been going the rounds of film circles ever since one day last week when a relative of the Gish sisters, in Washington, wrote friends in Los Angeles that the prince had told him he should much like to take a look at the center around which the film world gravitates.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS. 'Tis possible he and Mary will entertain the prince.

And what the prince wants he usually gets, of course—else what's the use of being a prince?

It is likewise reported that when his royal highness comes to Hollywood—if he does—he will visit Douglas Fairbanks. Douglas refused to admit the truth of this report. But the fact remains that Doug and Mary have given over all their film activities at this time, and are feverishly renovating their home, Pickfair, in Beverly Hills.

Now that it is practically certain that his royal highness is coming to California, there seems little likelihood that he will ignore the south in his visit.

Watch the film stars practice up the new dancing steps and buy new gowns!

Carol Dempster wrote us a card dated from Germany to the effect that she expected to come home soon and to visit her home in Los Angeles, where she has two sisters and a brother. The friends she knew here in film and dancing circles are planning all sorts of parties for her.

Carol hasn't been wasting the large salary she has been making with D. W. Griffith, but has purchased a home in Los Angeles, as well as one in New York and another in Paris. She is fetching home with her to Los Angeles a beautiful collection of objets d'art gathered in her travels abroad.

Sylvia Breamer Engaged.

A wave of sweetness and light seems sweeping over Hollywood. Young players are falling in love and announcing their engagements, and married players who have been at outs are making up.

It is a good idea to have a physician right in the family, thinks Sylvia Breamer, apparently. At any rate, her engagement to wed Dr. W. H. Martin, a well known physician of this city, was announced at a dinner party given recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewison, friends of Dr. Martin's, where some fifty guests, all society people or members of the medical profession, were present. Miss Breamer wore a simple white frock which set off her brunette prettiness nicely. Not behaving at all like a movie queen accustomed to a concentration of attention, Miss Breamer blushed deeply, smiled, and wept a little when her hostess told the glad news.

"The wedding will take place about the first of the year," said Miss Breamer. "I don't know whether I shall leave the screen or not. I should like to appear in an occasional picture, and Dr. Martin is nice about my keeping on if I wish. But I cannot decide just yet."

Miss Breamer and Dr. Martin met at a party in Hollywood about five months ago. It was a fancy dress dancing party, and they fell in love, really, before they had actually seen each other at all. When they unmasked they decided they liked each other even better. They have been going about to theaters and parties together ever since.

"Yes, Dr. Martin and I are going to take a honeymoon trip," said Miss Breamer, "but we haven't yet decided where we shall go. Possibly it will be to Honolulu. At any rate, I have never been so happy in my life."

Miss Breamer was formerly married to an Australian, from whom she was divorced about five years ago. She is a native of Australia and came to this country about eight

New Music Due at Chicago Theater

By Edward Moore.

NEWS of the beginning of the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra's fourth Sunday noon concert season this noon points up once more the influence this organization has had in encouraging the American composer. It has been the never flagging belief of Nathaniel Finston, conductor of that organization, that the country is in this decade at the dawn of a long coming, slow but inevitable day of national music. He has not been stampeded into any excited trumpeting of melodies merely because they were written by Americans, but a resolute confidence in the merit of certain composers and an encouragement of them.

NATHANIEL FINSTON, Beginning new season of concerts this noon.

His last year's innovation of giving operas in concert form, with soloists and choruses singing in English, is to be continued; his faith being that as the masses hear the librettos in a familiar tongue they will come to feel less awe and estrangement from the classics and, in this growing easiness, a belief that a composer can be as great voiced in the English tongue as in a foreign one. This belief, he feels, will make it easier for American composers to be recognized and will give them an opportunity denied so long as the American credo holds that nothing exalted can come except from Europe.

His placing of American compositions upon the same program with the works of reverenced masters of Europe has been and will be done without self-conscious stunting. The American works have been played with an attitude that they are worthy of such a position from a musical standpoint rather than from any patriotic motive.

The new season will begin with an all-American program, and following that many known and unknown American composers will be featured. The all-American program is to be matched with other programs devoted to the assembled works of nations and composers.

Concerts for young people, for various anniversaries, and special occasions will be given.

Works by several of the entrants into the famous American symphony contest held two years ago by Balaban & Katz will be featured, Mr. Finston having kept in close touch with many of the composers who competed in that event.

Mr. Finston is to play at today's all-American program one of his own compositions, an experiment in applying classical technique to modern American melodies. Of it he says, "It occurred to me that it would be interesting to try the use of jazz music in a manner that might be employed by a composer of symphonic dimensions were he to view modern American popular themes with an eye to dignifying them with harmonization and orchestration. I tried to imagine what Tschaikowsky, for instance, might do were he an American today and anxious to compose a work of the scope and caliber of 'The Marche Slav.'

"I used the form 'Marche Slav' and changed the folk and popular tunes of that composition for well known American melodies. I am frankly wondering if these modern popular airs are capable of upholding the best intellectual standards of music when so handled, and if they will be strong enough to keep the composer who so handles them free from indignity.

"I have eliminated jazz instruments from the compositions. There will be no moaning saxophones, no slide trombones, no cacophonic melange. The test will be wholly free from this kind of treatment."

More on a Painful Subject.

Here is a bit more testimony on the sometimes painful subject of jazz music. Probably none of it will make the slightest difference in the final outcome, but it is interesting as showing that the lowly jazz is finally beginning to affect some of the serious musicians with other thoughts

"HASSAN" PREMIERE DISAPPOINTS CRITIC

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The new poetic spectacle drama called "Hassan," just come to town after ten months at His Majesty's theater in London, may find a public. But your correspondent will not be of it. He saw all of "Hassan" he wants to see the first night. And that was considerable, seeing it played continuously from 8:15 to midnight.

It is another of those "Kismet" stories of Bagdad and the snoopy caliph, old Haroun al Raschid himself. And it is full of the spirit of adventure and songs of love at its inception. There is beauty in its lines, and color in its scenes, and eloquence in the soft voices of the English players.

Hassan is a confectioner sick of love for Yasmin. On the advice of a younger and handsomer man, he sends his fair one a love philter in the hope of winning her. And Yasmin, of a wanton heart, casts aside the philter but hangs on to the relative.

Thereafter, Hassan, falling in a swoon on the steps of the home of his heart's desire in the Street of Felicity, hard by the Fountain of the Two Pigeons is picked up by the caliph's party and carried into the House of the Moving Walls, where lives the King of the Beggars. And here there are houris and ballets and finally a dastardly plot to capture the caliph and nail him in his coffin with his eyes staring upward.

Hassan thinks up a way to save the caliph, and his reward is to be favored at the palace and given new velvet trousers and jeweled robes. Also a house and garden, where Yasmin comes to live with him.

But also there comes great misery of soul for him. The caliph, he discovers, is a cruel tyrant and a sneering butcher who stretches ladies on the rack and the wheel when they refuse to play in his harem. And before the very eyes of the sensitive Hassan he tortures lovers who prefer death to separation.

And so in great misery Hassan joins the caravan of pilgrims taking the golden road to Samarkand in search of the peace neither glory nor riches has given him.

There is beauty in the written text of "Hassan," the last work of James Elroy Flecker, an English poet who died in 1915 and never saw his work staged. And there is color and frequently a fascinatingly barbaric quality to the acted scenes. But mostly it is a disappointing spectacle that, turning from romance and stirring adventure into a tragedy of blood-letting and shrieking women, seems some way to belie its promise and defeat its purpose as entertainment.

A company mostly English reads the text with moving eloquence. Ronald Ayrton is the Hassan and James Dale, who played the Jew in "Loyalties," is the sneering caliph. Mary Nash is beautiful to look upon as the wanton Yasmin, and Violet Kemble Cooper plays the tortured lady with a blonde intenseness that is pretty if it isn't particularly moving.

"Izzy" Is Real Comedy.

The Chester stories of Izzy Iskovitch, the shrewd Jewish boy who went to Hollywood determined to become the greatest fillum magnut the world had ever known, have been made into a pleasant little character comedy by Mrs. Trimble Bradley and George Broadhurst.

"Izzy," they call it, and, if there is anything in a name, it certainly should do well in this man's town. When it was put in rehearsal there was a Jewish boy named Waldridge assigned to the name part. Not only was he the type, the authors agreed, but he was immensely funny. Two years back this Waldridge boy, picked out of the nowhere from which actors frequently hail, was rehearsed by Winchell Smith for "The Wheel." He was so funny the first night he almost saved the play.

I still believe he would have been a great choice for

Some Good Acting, and a Famous Play

By Frederick Donaghey.

NOW-AND-AGAIN, this manager or that one effects a cast like that in "The Swan," and makes all who attend his performances measurably dissatisfied with most other casts for a season or two afterward. . . . No other comedy in recent years has been acted (in English) with such of distinction and flavor and "manners" as this light, sarcastic, trivial, "wise" piece in the Blackstone;—and I doubt that it would stand up for long under acting not so good as it gets from these English players. (I chance it that Miss Le Gallienne so classifies.) . . . Yet, apart from her, this cast of good, obedient actors contains none, save Miss Le Gallienne, whose name means anything to the theater-goer-at-large. The two of the others who are known best, by virtue of past performances in Chicago, are in incidental rôles—Miss Skipworth, whose queen-mother is all that a queen-mother should be in or out of the theater, and Mr. Ling, the seasoned high-steward of the comic pre-war country wherein Molnar has put his gay, ironic scenes.

ALAN DINEHART He is the principal man in "Applesauce."

Miss Skipworth I first encountered in one of the early pieces from the London Gaiety, acting vis-à-vis with Laurence D'Orsay, and speaking raffish lines then with the same impeccable pressure that she exerts now on those that fall to her in the final act of "The Swan." And Mr. Ling, too, was in something with songs even longer ago, if I go back through the years he has been in-and-about: a tenor he was, with most of the attributes of the tenors in operetta when operetta was the most æsthetic of the theater's minor diversions. . . .

Mr. Owen, Mr. Hobbes, and Mr. Rathbone (who was with Benson's company in its unhappy American experiment) are welcome new-comers, so far as "The Swan" is concerned; and, for that matter, none of them gives out the notion that he may be good in just this piece, and in nothing else. . . . And, if I seem to be dwelling on the players rather than on what they play, it is for the reason indicated above—my belief that the comedy, although a gem in kind, would not survive acting other than what is applied to it. That Miss Watson and Mr. Owen better their respective predecessors of last season's New-York run I know; and these are the changes in cast that matter. No other actor now in my mind could be so good as Mr. Owen is in the part of the royal saphead, eager to be a good-fellow, and through helpless stupidity performing for the others as if he were the owner's son trying to be nice to the men down at father's factory. . . .

I urge you to see "The Swan," for itself and for its ensemble: you are not likely to see anything else (in kind) nearly so good in a long, long time. Although it bears uncounted proofs that Molnar wrote it before 1914, it retains a topical flavor that is unescapable, and that makes you forget as you savor it that there is no longer material in Europe for the kind of fun which is this play. It is sly, knowing, amiable fun like that which Captain Marshall, who wrote good comedy, put into "A Royal Family," years ago.

Concerning "Cyrano de Bergerac."

What a fuss was made about Rostand's comedy when it was new! That was when the war with Spain had place on the first page, and the preceding century was nearing its busy end of high achievement. . . . The cables carried word that Paris had never known anything so important as the play, itself, or as Coquelin's acting of the Gascon poet. The special correspondents devoted more space to the play than they ever gave to the Dreyfus case. Returning tourists insisted that "Cyrano" was the chief reward of going to Europe. The American drama-critics were in the

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

A PLAIN STORY SIMPLY TOLD. - - - - - - XLI.—THE DISCOVERY OF HORMONES.

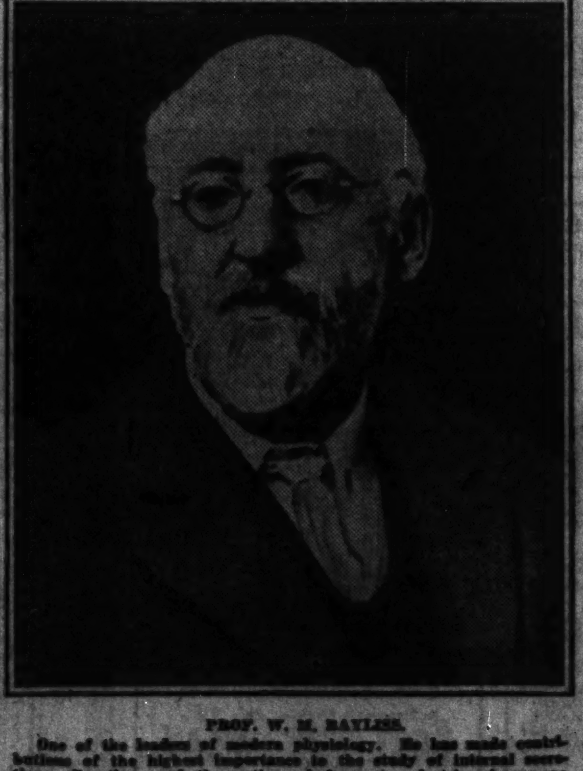
A PHYSIOLOGIST would class the different parts of the body as bones, muscles, nerves, and glands, and we have in conclusion to say something about the last. We have already spoken of the myriads of tiny tubular glands which line the alimentary canal. Another mass of tubular glands make up the essential part of the kidneys. They really form a filter of a remarkable pattern. Arteries bring the blood to the kidney tubules, which are stimulated to action by the blood. Each—by vital action, not a mere physical process—takes out of the blood the fluid nitrogenous waste substances and a certain amount of water, and the tiny ducts connected with the tubules run together and carry the waste or urine to the bladder.

But the main interest today is in what scientific men call the "ductless" glands: glands which extract substances from the blood but do not pour their secretion into special channels. We have already mentioned a most interesting example in the suprarenal glands: two little bodies near the kidneys, each about the size of a segment of a small orange, which pour into the blood a "chemical messenger" (or hormone) for regulating the supply of blood to the various organs.

It is one of the most remarkable discoveries of recent years that there are numbers of little glands entirely devoted to the manufacture of hormones. "If all the glands of internal secretion were rolled together they would form a parcel small enough to go into a waistcoat pocket, yet such a small mass can influence the working and growth of the whole body." In his interesting book, which we have already mentioned, Sir Arthur Keith, referring to the dispatch of secretin to the stomach, uses the following suggestive words: The secretin, or hormone, which acts as a missive "is posted in the nearest letter boxes, or capillaries in the duodenal wall and is carried away in the general blood circulation, which serves for all kinds of postal traffic. In a postal system where there are no sorters and which must be conducted by an automatic mechanism, letters or missives cannot be addressed in the usual way. Their destination is indicated, not by their inscription but by their shape. The molecules of secretin may be regarded as ultra-microscopic Yale keys sent out to search for the locks of letter boxes which they can fit and enter." They circulate round the body until they find their destination. "What is still more wonderful in this system is that the letter boxes, or we may call them locks, have a positive attraction for the key missives which are destined for them." It was Prof. Starling who named these messengers hormones.

The thyroid glands—two little lobes on either side of the windpipe—are bodies of this nature which have attracted a good deal of popular attention of late years. The secretion formed is discharged straight into the blood stream, and for that reason they are called ductless glands or glands of internal secretion. They will be discussed at greater length in a later section of this work. Here it is enough to say that the chemical stuff, or "hormone," which they secrete increases the vitality of the tissues; it makes the tissues "greedy for oxygen," and the work goes on more briskly. Hence it is that decay or imperfect development of the thyroid glands leads to that state of bodily and mental feebleness which is called "cretinism," while the extract from the glands can be used for the purpose of "rejuvenation." This small organ, the thyroid gland, is necessary to the health and normal development of both body and mind, and this knowledge has been put to practical application in some cases with astounding results.

Near the thyroid glands are four small bodies—the "parathyroids." The function of these is not clear, but there is serious nervous trouble if they are removed. Then there is a "thymus gland," which seems in some way to prevent the sex organs from developing too early. It is situated in front of the breast bone, and must act by "postal service." The internal sex organs themselves post a good many of these "hormones" in the blood. Everybody knows the striking difference between a normal and a castrated animal. The development of secondary sexual characteristics, such as antlers, seems to be largely stimulated by chemical messengers of this kind. One of the most interesting illustrations is in connection with the milk in the mother's breasts. How does the mammal mother come to have this rich development of her milk glands just at the moment when it is needed? It has been discovered that, as soon as she becomes pregnant, the ovaries begin to discharge a hormone into her blood, which finds its way to the breasts and stimulates them.



PROF. W. M. BAYLISS.
One of the leaders of modern physiology. He has made contributions of the highest importance to the study of internal secretions, digestion, and the action of ferments, electric phenomena associated with vital processes, the production of heat in the body, and the regulative functions in general. His "Principles of General Physiology" is one of the great books of the science. Profs. Bayliss and Starling have conducted many investigations together.
[Russell Photo.]

Probably the embryo itself also produces hormones which pass into the mother's blood, and serve a useful purpose up to the time of birth.

The Pituitary Body.

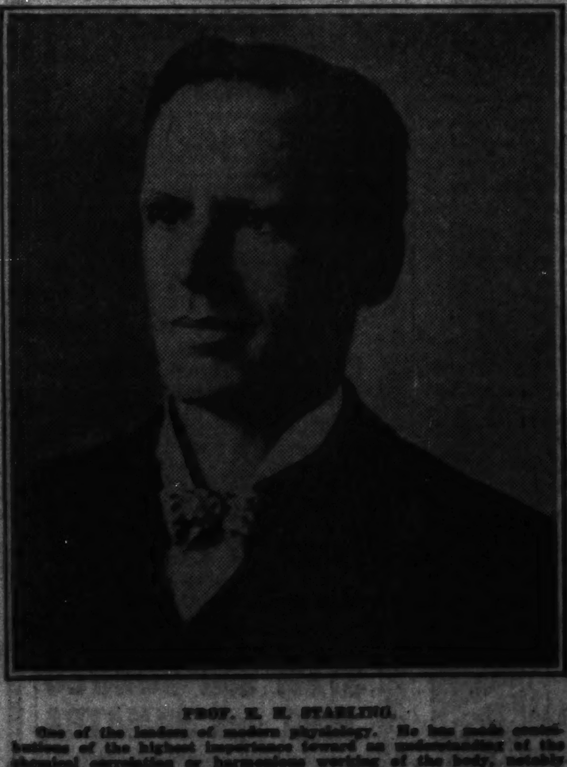
FINALLY, there is a remarkable and long neglected little body in the head, the "pituitary body," which is a rich laboratory of hormones. It controls the growth of tissues by stimulating them. When it is removed from an animal the body becomes feeble and undersized. On the other hand, some rather unfortunate people have their pituitary body overgrown, or overactive, and they develop unpleasantly large faces, hands, and feet, or become "giants."

Such, as far as one can tell it in so brief a space, is the tale of the wonderful mechanisms in the body. Even the skin, which binds and protects this marvelous system of parts, is a remarkable organ when one has time to study it thoroughly. On the tender eyelids of a young child it is as thin as tissue paper, yet on the palms of some "horny handed son of toil" it will produce protecting cells until it becomes an eighth of an inch thick. It is, moreover, rich in sweat glands (which, as we saw, are most important for regulating the temperature of the body), lubricating or sebaceous glands, corpuscles for the sense of touch, and little pits in which take root the hairs which were once of great service to the body. Every internal surface also has its lining, or skin; tough where toughness is required, but so fine in the right places that gases and fluids can pass through it for breathing and nutritive purposes. "The proper study of mankind is man," said a great poet; and we may surely add that we know no more interesting study in the universe.

Before we leave the subject of this article a further word should be said.

The comparison of the body to an engine is very useful, but it is more than a little apt to lead us astray. For the body is living, and in higher animals, at least, there is a "mind" that counts. No one has succeeded in making clear the relation between mind and body, if there be a relation, but what we are sure of is that there are two aspects, two sides to the shield, the mental and the bodily. Just as a dome has its inner concave and its outer convex curve, inseparable from one another, two aspects of the same thing, so the living creature is a feeling, remembering, willing, and sometimes thinking being, just as really and truly as it is a feeding, moving, storing, and energy transforming system. On the one side there is "mind," probably present even when it is not apparent to the observer; on the other side there is the routine of chemical processes which we call metabolism. Sometimes the living creature is more of a body-mind, sometimes more of a mind-body. We cannot solve the riddle: the mental or subjective and the bodily or objective activity are bound together in one. What we are quite sure of is that the ideal for the organism is a healthy body at the service of a healthy mind. Let us take an illustration of the influence of mind on body.

The famous physiologist of Petrograd, Prof. Ivan Petrovitch Pavlov, was the first to demonstrate the influence of the emotions on the health of the system. Every one knows that a good circulation and a good digestion make for cheerfulness, but the converse is also true. "A merry heart is the life of the flesh." The researches of Pavlov, Cannon, Carlson, and Crile have made it quite clear that pleasant emotions favor the secretion of the digestive juices, the rhythmic movements of the food canal which work the nutriment downwards, and even the absorption of what has been made soluble and diffusible. On the other hand, unpleasant emotions, such as envy, and mental disturbances, such as worry, hinder digestion and the smooth working of the nutritive process.



PROF. E. H. STARLING.
One of the leaders of modern physiology. He has made contributions of the highest importance toward an understanding of the chemical correlation or harmonious working of the body, notably by his study of internal secretions. Profs. Bayliss and Starling have done much together.

The Cult of Joy.

WHEN the hungry man sees the well laid table his mouth waters, but every one knows that a memory or an anticipation will also serve to move at least the first link in the digestive chain. Professor Dearborn writes: "It is now well known that no sense experience is too remote from the innervations of digestion to be taken into its associations, and serve as a stimulus of digestive movements and secretions." As was said of old time, "He that is of a merry heart has a continuous feast." When our joyous index is high, our digestion is good. As Dr. Saleeby has put it, freedom from care has nutritive value. It does not seem far fetched to wonder if the joyousness of singing birds may not react on their remarkably well developed capacities. We speak smilingly of our friend's "eupeptic" cheerfulness, but our smile is a little apt to become a materialism. We have to inquire whether our friend is not "eupeptic" because of his psychical success in the great task of happiness. The truth is that the mental and the bodily harmonies are the bass and treble of one tune.

The influence of mind on body finds a good illustration in the stimulation of the adrenal glands by strong emotion. Anger, which may be righteous, affects the production of adrenalin by the core of the adrenal glands, situated near the kidneys. The slight increase in this powerful "chemical messenger" or hormone, which the blood sweeps away, has numerous effects through the body. It constricts the smaller blood vessels, and there is less blood in the peripheral and more in the deeper parts. It raises the blood pressure, excites and freshens the muscles, adds to the sugar content of the blood, increases the coagulability of the blood and so on. In short, the whole body is prepared for a fight, and all under the influence of what was to begin with a psychical event.

"Good news, psychical if anything is, may set in motion a series of vital processes, complex beyond the ken of the wisest. What is true of digestion is true also of the circulation. Wordsworth was a better physiologist than he knew when he spoke of his heart leaping up at the sight of the rainbow and filling with pleasure at the recollection of the daffodils dancing by the lakeside. There are facts which point to the conclusion that a gladsome mind increases the efficiency of the nervous system. Good tidings will invigorate the flagging energies of a band of explorers; an unexpected visit will change a wearied homesick child, as if by magic, into a dancing gladsome elf; a religious joy enables men and women to transcend the limits of our frail humanity."

There is reason, then, to believe that emotion has its physical accompaniment in tensions and movements throughout the body, and in changes in the secretion of glands. There is a physiological reverberation of joy. But there must be more than this. The nervous system has a notable integrative or unifying function; it makes for the harmony of the bodily life. This function it may discharge the better if the psychical side is finding its due development. Thus it is well known that aesthetic emotion—delight in the beautiful—is very markedly a body-and-mind reaction, affecting the whole creature as a unity. It is practically certain that many people fail in health because they starve their higher senses and minds.

We venture to go further, under the conviction that physiology and psychology must join hands—as is suggested, indeed, by the name of the new science of psychobiology. The physiological ideal is bodily health; its essential correlate is healthy mindedness. No doubt the invalid may have a vigorously healthy mind and the athlete a mind diseased, but, on the average, the two aspects of health must develop together. Hence the importance of mental dieting, mental gymnastics, mental rest, mental play, mental stores; though these must be sought as ends in themselves, not as aids to digestion!

Some Good Acting, and a Famous Play

By Frederick Donaghey.

doldrums because, they wailed, our theater contained no actor capable of acting the part. They were depressive in the eloquence with which they expressed their forebodings when Richard Mansfield, in due time, explained that he had arranged for the right to give the play in this country; and then they resigned themselves to what they could not help, uttering a pious hope that he would not monkey with a masterpiece. . . .

Mansfield's Showmanship.

Mansfield monkeyed with this masterpiece, and, as was usual with him when he turned editor of plays, made it a better thing for the American stage than it would have been had he been less of an intellect and a showman than he was. He knew that he had taken on a venture whose risk was countered only by the unprecedented free advertising which flowed from the Paris réclame, and decided that valor was the better part of discretion when it was a question of preparing against the obloquy of possible failure in a play containing comparatively little of general appeal to American theater-goers of that period. . . . He made a good job of preparing the comedy for our stage, and a better job of acting the title-part. He was superior to any other of the actors I saw in the part; and I saw seven in less than a year, including the idolized Coquelin,—who, to be truthful, was as much like the Cyrano of history, of legend, of the play, and of fact as would be Thomas A. Wise or Roland Young or Al Jolson.

The Rape of "Cyrano."

Coquelin, in Paris; the late Charles Wyndham, in London; and Charles Richman and the late Henry Lee, in this country, were among the actors who had the rôle within the year Mansfield acted it. . . . Richman, then trying to fill John Drew's shoes as Ada Rehan's vis-à-vis, and Lee, who was highly regarded as an actor by many of the day's critics, obtained the part through a flaw in the copyrighting of the comedy for the United States. Mansfield was legally unable to protect his rights, although he continued to send the royalties to Rostand; and the piece, under the fantastic and dishonest statutes having to do with the protection of intellectual and literary property in this country, was free to any actor who cared to make use of it. . . . Among those who took advantage of Mansfield's plight was the famed Augustin Daly, who wore the largest and shiniest halo that then glowed in the American theater, of whose decencies and dignities he was held to be the custodian. He rushed the play into performance, cutting and slashing it mercilessly, with the inexperienced Richman in the exacting title-rôle and Miss Rehan as Roxane. They made a sad mess of it. . . . Lee's venture was a shabby, take-a-chance affair that served no purpose other than, perhaps, to keep those who saw it from buying tickets for Mansfield's. . . .

That Walter Hampden should have been able to carry a revival of "Cyrano" through two hundred and fifty performances in New-York was, to me, the most astonishing circumstance of last season in the theater: not because of Mr. Hampden's being the person who did it, but because of the discovery that there should be that much of popular interest in any play of the kind. The belief was, when Mansfield finished with it, that the comedy had passed into a tradition which nobody would bother to disturb. . . . I have not seen Mr. Hampden as Cyrano; and I am told by reliable gossips of few enthusiasms and no illusions where acting is concerned that he is highly admirable in the part. . . . Mansfield took to Cyrano a great deal; he lacked physique and stature; but he had brains, a sense of color, a rich and musical voice, and, while he never mastered the art of reading verse in facile and easy rhythm, he knew how to make the points and the effects.

Of course, the annals of Rostand's comedy on the American stage include the grotesque litigation wherein a Chicago attorney, Samuel Eberley Gross, sought and obtained a verdict that the play was based on a piece of his writing called "The Merchant-Prince of Cornville." I recall that the point of resemblance on which he based his contention was a scene that had served the theater through the centuries, and had just previously been used as a comic act-end by Hoyt in one of his farces, "A Milk-White Flag."

This-and-That.

Basil Dean, director of London's Drury-Lane Theater, has been imported to stage "Peter Pan" for Miss Marilynn Miller. . . . Reports are that Miss Doris Keane received what Mons. Gene Markey calls a "veritable ovation" when, last Monday night, she staged "Starlight" in San-Francisco. The play is an adaptation from the Hungarian by Miss Gladys Unger.

A new title is to be found for "Soft Music," by Elmer E. Rice and Mrs. Dorothy Parker. The reason is that they desire to avoid having the play confused with "The Great Music," by Martin Brown. . . . As to "The Great Music," the story seems to have some resemblance to that told so brilliantly by Maugham in his novel named "The Moon and Sixpence." This story has been dramatized, by-the-way; and the play is listed among the season's impending ventures.

BACK IN SONG-AND-DANCE

MISS CONSTANCE BINNEY

SHE made herself known in Chicago back in 1915 as an aid to the three Misses Fuller when, in one of their engagements in the Fine-Arts Building, they added folk-dances to their répertoire. She since then has been in the films, in pieces with songs, and in "straight" drama: early last year, it is recalled, she had the heroine's burden to carry in a gaudy frame-up by Samuel Shipman called "The Crooked Square." . . . She returns tonight as a singing and dancing star in "Sweet Little Devil!" wherein last season she took some "good notices" from the Manhattan reporters of plays.

New Playbills

What Is Due in the Chicago Theaters as Far Ahead as the Managers Know or Care to Tell About.

OPENING TONIGHT:

"Applesauce" in the La Salle.—A comedy by Barry Conners of which Allan Dinehart and Miss Claiborne Foster are the principal players. These two are recalled for their acting vis-à-vis last year in "Two Fellows and a Girl." . . . The play, itself, has not yet been acted in New-York; but it has been the subject of laudatory review in cities where it has been shown.

"Sweet Little Devil" in the Garrick.—A comedy by Frank Mandel with music by George Gershwin of which Miss Constance Binney is the star. The piece had a run last season in New-York. . . . William Wayne, Miss Ruth Warren, Irving Beebe, Bobby Jarvis, Miss Edna Dare, and Billy and Billie Taylor are of the cast.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT:

"Cyrano de Bergerac," with Walter Hampden, in the Great Northern.—Rostand's most celebrated play in a revival which Mr. Hampden carried last season through 250 performances in New-York. This will be his first appearance in Chicago since he acted in "Hamlet," some years ago, in the Princess. . . . Miss Jeanette Sherwin, a newcomer, will be the Roxane.

NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT:

"White Cargo" in the Cort.—A play by Leon Gordon wherein is shown the social and moral disintegration of the civilized Caucasian who undertakes life in tropical Africa. The play has been running for the better part of a year in New York, and is reported to be a success in London, also.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 12:

"Expressing Willie" in the Princess.—A comedy by Miss Rachel Crothers that has been successful for some time past in New-York. . . . It is to be acted here by a second company.

"The Potters" in the Great Northern.—J. P. McEvoy's comedy based on his weekly sketches of like name that were for a time a feature of the Sunday issue of THE TRIBUNE.

The Greenwich Village Follies [of 1923] in the Apollo.—Fifth issue of an annual which may be said to have established its trade-mark in Chicago.

Miss Fuller Now Acts.

Miss Rosaline Fuller, remembered as one of the three Fuller sisters when they gave old English songs in what is now the Playhouse and in the niche of the Fine-Arts Building wherein Maurice Browne operated his Little Theater for a time, is to be with Mr. and Mrs. Coburn in Eden Phillpotts' "The Farmer's Wife," a London hit of which much is expected in this country. . . . Miss Fuller last season was Ophelia to John Barrymore's Hamlet.

"Hassan" Premiere Disappoints Critic

By Burns Mantle.

"Izzy," but they say his lack of experience was too evident at rehearsal. So they engaged Jimmy Hussey to play the part. Hussey you probably know through his vaudeville appearances. He is Irish, but he has been telling Jewish stories so many years his accent and gestures are perfect. Fortunately, he is also agreeably modest.

"Izzy" is one of those unbelievable but funny comedies that frequently achieve a great popularity. A bad play but a good show. The young hero, forced to choose a career on his eighteenth birthday, chooses what he calls the pitchers. His five funny uncles, dealing in many things, from junk to pants pressing, guarantee to stand back of him for six months.

He goes to Hollywood, makes himself a nuisance until he gets a job, and then rises rapidly to a position of importance, making money for the uncles and securing himself a wife.

The romance does not amount to much. On the lot, Izzy, like Merton, meets a movie actress. She is sweet and tearful, one of the ringlet sisters frequently in distress. And she can't get a job. Izzy speaks to his favorite director about her.

"I don't like her," admits the director. "She hasn't any sex appeal."

"She has, too," snaps back Izzy. "She sex-appealed me."

But he is not sure he should marry her. He had promised his uncles that he would never marry any girl not of his religion. Then he learns that her name is not Prudence Joy, as supposed. She was born a Rosenblum. Which makes everything lovely. Isabelle Lowe plays the part.

One at Least Is Decent.

Another little girl with a fine, big voice who started out to be a grand opera singer and got tired of waiting for her chance is Mary Ellis. Now she is the prima donna of a new musical play called "Rose-Marie" and one of the hits of the town.

There is quite a thrill in the sheer decency of this entertainment. It is a clean and mannerly production, and the story holds together much better than most of them do. It also is dressed with a most attractive score.

There has been some originality displayed, too, in its staging. It is necessary at one point to illustrate a murder that is being enacted some miles from the scene of the play's locale, which is Canada. The lights are lowered, the side curtains partly closed in, and the murder is neatly etched into the action in pantomime.

Another time the action proceeds in a cellar. But in place of staging the cellar the velvet curtains are drawn, the lights turned out, and the characters enter mysteriously with hand flashlights as their only guide. The effect is a cavernous blackness the width and height of the stage.

Much the best of the new music plays, this "Rose-Marie." It commands the character and quality of an operetta. The cast is excellent, too. In addition to Miss Ellis there is Dennis King, who was the fiery Mercutio in the Cowl production of "Romeo and Juliet." King plays the handsome hero and sings a very excellent baritone, is so good an actor. William Kent and Dorothy Mackaye have charge of the comedy and Pearl Regay and Arthur Deagon are others.

Rudolph Friml and Herbert Stothart wrote the music, and Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II. the score. "The Love Call" is the song hit.

Saturday afternoon Miss Regay was dancing a waltz on the stage when a well looking young man, filled apparently with pre-matinée gin and an ambition to perform, crawled out of a box and began dancing around with her. He danced so well it was easy for the audience to accept him as part of the act. Miss Regay kept on dancing, but threw a frightened glance or two into the wings, and the first time the uninvited dancer got close to a stage door a strong arm reached out and hooked him in.

Down Among the Philistines.

Nothing startling in the new revues. Several groups of young women shielded from the bright glare of publicity by short tights and much powder, but nothing more sensational than that.

Hassard Short has brought in his new "Ritz Revue," which Al Jolson is said to have backed. For three years Short staged the Music Box productions, and achieved, I believe, a new standard in this type of entertainment. There the humor was frequently broad, but never, that I recall, offensive, and there was a startling richness of settings that worried even the opulent Ziegfeld, who still furnishes the mark at which his rivals shoot.

But in the "Ritz" affair Hassard has not done so well. He has something of the Music Box beauty in his ensembles, and there is speed and snap in his sketches. But there is little resembling good taste in the book, and many of the lines are offensively coarse. His principals include Charlotte Greenwood, and Charlotte has one rousing bit of burlesque. Clothed only in good humor and a huge Turkish towel, Charlotte tries to take a bath on her maid's day out. The phone rings. The doorbell rings. The dumbwaiter bell rings. The iceman calls, and the neighbors pop in. Charlotte getting in and out of the tub and answering all these calls without losing hold of the towel is a diverting spectacle at least.

Raymond Hitchcock fills in a few minutes before the curtain, introducing Moe to Aleck, etc., which is the New York first nighter's idea of real entertainment, and Tom Burke sings a lot better than most revue tenors.

Anderson Presents.

The "Village Follies," on the other hand, is noticeably free from gutter humor this season. And frequently touched with real beauty in its staging.

John Murray Anderson has always held this advantage over most of his competitors. He has a very real sense of beauty of color and pose, and a nice selection of ideas. He offers a "Liebestraum" ballet, for example, in which the music is played by an electric piano on a shadowed stage, and the dancing figures in pure white are silhouetted against a black background that is charmingly original. And another eighteenth century scene with the principal vocalists singing the ageless songs of long ago. He does this sort of thing better than the others.

His two big features this year are the returning Dolly sisters and the Lopez orchestra. The Dollys bring with them a progressive ballet, in which they illustrate a "Destiny" song. First Rosie is a playful flirt. Then Jennie is a naughty actress, selling herself for gold. Then Rosie is a cocotte in Paris. And finally Jennie is an Apache in Montmartre, where black shirted young men toss her about something scandalous.

The Dollys have not changed much in the six years they have been away. As sister teams go they have more rhythm and more grace than most, and Jennie has become something of a pantomimist.

The Lopez band, of course, is a big success. The radio has done that for him. And a vaudeville team—Moran and Mack—coming out for the first time where the folk who never go to the vaudeville theaters can see them, are the laughter success of the bill.

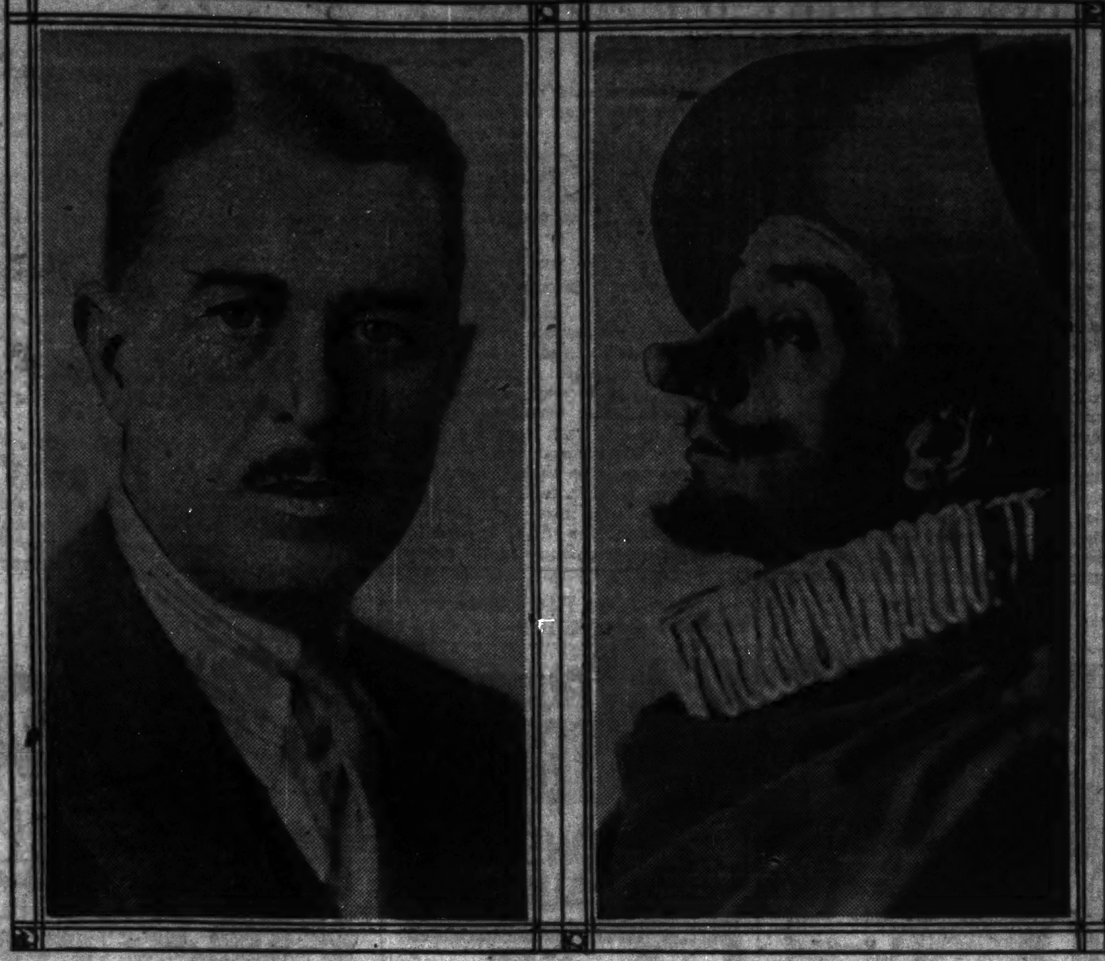
BOTH HAVE BEEN WITH BENSON



REGINALD OWEN — WALTER HAMPDEN

WHEN you hear or read that an actor is a Bensonian, the meaning is that he at one time or another played under F. R. [now Sir Frank] Benson, who was in Chicago with his company for three mean weeks in the Autumn of 1913, in the Blackstone. Many a celebrity of the English-speaking theater learned how while touring Great Britain under that eager actor-manager, who classifies as one of the most inept of all the actors in all the world. . . . And both Mr. Owen and Mr. Hampden toured with Benson. . . .

The former, in Chicago for the first time, is making a personal success in "The Swan" by the simple process of dutifully contributing his best to a good ensemble. He took over the rôle in New-York a fortnight ago from Philip Merivale, who had it all last season. . . . In London, Mr. Owen is a somebody of the theater as actor and as author.

Mr. Hampden has been a somebody of the American stage ever since he acted Manson in "The Servant in the House," back in 1908. He has since then appeared in Chicago in "The City," in an assortment of plays given by B. Iden Payne in what is now the Playhouse, in "The Call of Youth," "Life," "Good Gracious, Annabelle!" and "Hamlet." . . . He is pictured as made up for Cyrano de Bergerac, a rôle in which he will be seen here tomorrow night.

Maybe H. R. H. Will Visit Hollywood

By Grace Kingsley.

years ago to play in pictures, following a career on the stage in Australia.

Lottie Pickford and Alan Forrest have decided to let bygones be bygones, and have made up. They are living at the Cross Arms in Hollywood, and the other night they gave a making up party—Lottie and Alan always want to celebrate everything with a party—at which were present Norman Kerry and his wife, Mae Busch, Al Wilkie, and other picture folk. Lottie wore a blue chiffon, short, and looked blooming and happy.

In fact, both Alan and Lottie agreed that a vacation between a married pair was a good thing.

While neither will admit they are engaged to each other, Mae Busch and Al Wilkie, the latter a publicity writer for Samuel Goldwyn, have made up again and are seen about at the cafes and theaters together.

They held a little reunion party, too, the other night at the Montmartre in Hollywood—all to themselves and nobody to it. They seemed deeply engrossed in each other. Miss Busch wore a dark blue tricotine street dress and a small blue taffeta hat.

Francis MacDonald, Miss Busch's ex-husband, was present at the cafe with a pretty brunette, but though the two couples saw each other at dinner and brushed against each other on the dance floor, they never saw one another at all!

So Mildred Harris has captured the baby sheik! Ben Lyon, apparently forgetting how he promised to follow Barbara La Marr to the ends of the earth, has come back to Hollywood and is all taken up with the fair Mildred.

They were dancing at the Cocoanut Grove the other night, Mildred looking unusually pretty in a gold trimmed white gown.

Ben has given all his other slave bracelets to the poor and is now wearing only Mildred's, and it looks as though their engagement may be announced shortly.

Marshall Neilan was dining with some men friends in the husbands' corner at Montmartre cafe the other night, following his return to Hollywood from Europe.

I stopped and asked Neilan:

"I want to know about your European experiences."

"Didn't have any," retorted Mickey. "I worked all the time!"

Which shows that when I spoke of experiences Mickey didn't mean what I meant at all!

Sol Wurtzel had a birthday the other day, and Director Tom Buckingham and his wife had a wedding anniversary, so I suppose it made the expense more reasonable to celebrate together. Anyhow, they had a big party at the Flint Ridge Country club.

It was one of those proper parties where you took your own wife, and the veranda moonlight concessions were granted only to wives, certified sweeties, and things-in-law. Shirley Mason was to have been there with her fiance, Harlan Fengler, but Fengler developed a toe ache left over from his recent accident on the race track—one of those warmed over pains, as it were, convenient for the occasion—so he had Shirley all to himself that evening, presumably, for Shirley sent word she didn't want to leave him alone.

Stage News

Although the play failed in one version as acted by William Faversham in New-York, it is said that W. Somerset Maugham's arrangement of "The Mask and the Face" will soon be staged there. . . . Maugham is now in the United States. His "Our Betters," a failure when acted in this country some years ago, is numbered among the recent London successes.

Madame Sophie Tucker didn't make good in Earl Carroll's Vanities, and is back in the two-a-day. . . . "Polly of the Circus," in which Miss Mabel Taliaferro acted years ago in the Illinois, has been made over into a musical comedy.

Another piece to be turned into a libretto is "Never Say Die!" in which William Collier was immensely funny for a run in the Princess. . . . The new title is "That's That!"

A news-item is that a forthcoming revue will be called "Oh, Shaw!" and that an ambitious young woman, Miss Billie Shaw, will star in it. . . . A second cast has been organized for "Fata Morgana," in which Miss Emily Stevens is still acting in New-York.

Robert Ames, last in Chicago in "Kelly's Vacation," is to go into a play with music called "Dorinda." . . . With him in it will be Mrs. Ames, known to ticket-buyers as Miss Vivienne Segal, who sings well. She has been in the current Ziegfeld Follies."

"Keep Kool!" (which has music by a composer named Jack Frost) was removed last night from the New-York stage, where it has long been in performance with Miss Hazel Dawn, Charles King, and Johnny Dooley at the head of the cast. . . . Mr. Ziegfeld has bought the piece, but not, it is said, to tour it; instead, it is added, he will take the best things out of it and put them into his resuscitation of the Follies of 1923, which is among the bookings of the Illinois.

Harry Beresford is to act in a piece called "Out-a-Luck," by Fred Ballard; and it is said that the play is a revision of the one given a year ago in Chicago as "A Rainy Day." . . . Beresford was the actor of the title-part in "The Old Soak" in its long New-York run. He is remembered in Chicago for his antics in "Shavings."

The golf-play once promised for the Playhouse under the title of "Around in Par" is now called "Clubs Are Trumps," and has Harry Green, out of the varieties, as its star. . . . Green acted George Sidney's part in the London run of "Welcome, Stranger!"

Henry Miller, it is said, is to give up acting, but to continue to produce and manage. . . . Among the ventures announced by him for this season is a musical-comedy version of "Come Out of the Kitchen!" in which Miss Ruth Chatterton starred for a time.

Miss Helen Ware, whose name has not been lately in print, is to be in the cast of Martin Brown's play called "The Great Music." . . . She was a somebody for a time, and had a run of important rôles, including that of the Monna Vanna-like wife in the Chicago engagement of Eugene Walter's first success, "Paid in Full."

Julian Eltinge, making a tour of the movie-theaters, advertises this as his "last year in skirts." . . . "Morals," called "Chains" last year in Chicago, is said to be a flivver in London.

Miss Ruth Draper is to try the two-a-day in two or three cities; if she likes it, she will stick for a season. . . . Ida Rubinstein, a famous dancer and actress of Europe, is said to be under engagement to come over next season and play in something by D'Annunzio.

Tomorrow night's performance of "The Miracle" in New-York will be the 250th there. . . . Mr. Gest continues to say that Miss Mary Garden will appear in the pantomime as the Madonna for some special performance.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Agreeably Surprised.

My Dear Miss Tinée: After seeing "Manhandled" and "The Humming Bird," I am convinced that the screen has a brand new star. The new Gloria is an entirely different personality.

What miracle has put the breath of life into the goddess of the De Mille marbles and transformed the screen's silken butterfly into a brilliant emotional actress? Whatever the cause, metamorphosis is complete, and Gloria definitely takes her place among the really great.

There is a charm and appeal to this new Gloria, with the boyish bob, that was wholly lacking in her sophisticated and perfumed twin. The mask of artificiality is slipping and beneath we see a character pleasing in its wholesomeness and rich humanity.

In "Manhandled" Miss Swanson gives a most human characterization of a shy, awkward, gum chewing little shop girl. In her lighter moods she reminds one of Mae Murray, and by her adroit handling of the humorous and pathetic she is equaled only by Miss Pickford; but most of all she is just Gloria, the most original and distinctive personality on the screen.

Kind Words for Merton.

Dear Miss Tinée: As I sit gazing at my typewriter keys I am wondering just how to begin to express my approval of "Merton of the Movies," and I don't seem to be able to find an expression that will fill the bill. Not because the picture is beyond human praise—it is by no means infallible—but because its niche in the hall of fame has been hitherto unoccupied: to wit, the niche of adaptations which conform to the originals. With what sheer joy I watched the same Merton Gill make the same pathetically humorous blunders, attain the heights of a hollow success, only to be plunged into the abysmal depths of despair—in almost exactly the same manner as he did previously in the book and on the stage! O boy! Ain't it a g-r-r-and and glorious feelin'?

Of the few and minor changes which characterized the picture I objected seriously to only one, but that one, it seems to me, took the kick out of the climax. In the play, after Merton discovered he had been tricked and was merely a low comedy character, his emotions were marked; utter hopelessness and despair, followed by unmistakable anger. And that anger did not give way to forgiveness until almost the end of the play. In the picture, however, his anger, though unmistakable, is short lived, and when finally he does relent we find that we (editorial we) have received no thrills from the climax.

With a word of praise for the casting director, and a word of thanks to James Cruze (he did a mighty good job), I'll close my remarks concerning a picture I wouldn't have missed.

"Babbitt" was all that it should not have been. "Being Respectable" was creditable. "The White Sister" was excellent, and Colleen Moore as the Selina Peake of "So Big" will be impossible.

Elaine Likes Rodolf.

Dear Miss Tinée: I should like to reply to the fan who wrote about "Monsieur Beaucaire," in last Sunday's paper, if, as se says, the "paragon" couldn't have sustained it by his own performance, the picture would have gone unsustained. For Valentino was the picture, the whole picture, and nothing but the picture. His part, which would have been so easily overacted, was played to perfection. To my mind Lowell Sherman was only "another one of those French kings." (We have so many, and he did it no better than the rest.) Bebe Daniels was good, so was Doris Kenyon. But it is not regrettable that Lois Wilson did not have much to do—if all our stars were "the stars," where would the "sun" be?

ELAINE.

KICK KORNER FOR MOVIE FANS

Its Object—Objection!

Details That Vex.

Dear Miss Tinée: I've just finished reading H. L. L.'s indignant protest against technicalities. He surely emitted a mouthful. I can't for the life of me see why when they pay a quarter of a million berries to produce a picture they couldn't hire a little high school boy or some one with a bit of gray matter a-working to catch up such bits which irk or disgust or at least invite ridicule, according to the degree of the offense.

Did your sharp eyes see what I saw in the exquisite performance of "Monsieur Beaucaire"? Lady Mary Carlisle indignantly threw Beaucaire's rose on the ground and crushed it with a haughty hoof (pardon). Twice she ground her foot heavily into it, and twice the petals sprang up in dainty defiance, proclaiming themselves satin. When Beaucaire picked up the same rose it was a real one, with petals which crumbled and fell from his fingers.

This seems like a mighty small detail, but it did jar. The idea to be conveyed was important enough to call for two closeups, so why not have the details correct?

Wouldn't it be wonderful to have more films like "Changing Husbands"? It's such a joy to laugh and not have either your intelligence or sense of decency insulted. And how wonderful for a really beautiful woman like Leatrice Joy to have such a lot of facial expressions! She certainly is a joy. Most stage and film beauties can do about two things: cast their eyes up—or down—and "be took." Two hours of Corinne Griffith make me froth at the mouth and bite the furniture, though when she first appears she seems so lovely I almost melt. A plethora of loveliness palls unless it has a few changes.

Objects to Warren.

Dear Miss Tinée: I just saw "Captain Blood," and was much disappointed in it. I had not read the book, so had no preconceived notions about it, but J. Warren Kerrigan is most certainly not my idea of a pirate. Every time I see him, I am disappointed. He is good looking, but he lacks pep and force. You are always expecting him to do something which he doesn't do. While there were exciting scenes in "Captain Blood," the action dragged. The "Sea Hawk" was much better, because it had a better cast. I have liked Jean Paige so much in some other pictures, but thought she was a stick in "Captain Blood." Milton Sills played a pirate as I think most people think of one.

I liked "The Covered Wagon" very much, but I believe if some one besides J. Warren Kerrigan had had the leading rôle it would have been better. Of course, the wagons are the main attraction, but, just the same, a good leading man would have added to the attraction.

Another picture I liked, which doesn't seem to have attracted much attention, was "The Hoosier School Master." I don't know the name of the leading man in that picture, but he had pep and force.

I saw one critic thought the entire caste of "Monsieur Beaucaire" was good, except Doris Kenyon. I thought she was good, too. She acted just as I imagined Lady Mary Carlisle acted when I read the book. Didn't you think so? She was supposed to be a snob and haughty, and I thought Doris Kenyon gave this impression very well indeed. I agree with the one whose letter was recently printed that three good pictures are "Monsieur Beaucaire," "The Sea Hawk," and "Beau Brummel." I am fond of costume pictures, if there is an interesting story involved.

G. C. S.

P. S.: Wouldn't "Monsieur Beaucaire" have been beautiful in colors? I think it is a shame we couldn't see the colors of the costumes, as they must have been gorgeous.

New Music Due at Chicago Theater

By Edward Moore.

than those of hard language. The first deponent is Samuel Chotzinoff, who plays the piano for various noted violinists, and who writes in Vanity Fair about George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue":

"'Rhapsody in Blue' is a compromise. In that fact lies its success. It is built on two themes in the highest degree contrasting — a glowing phrase of symphonic proportion not unreminiscent of Straus, to which is attached, by a touch of pure inspiration, a 'jazzy' fragment of three descending chromatic notes reiterated with many rythmic changes, a fragment half humorous, half pathetic, perhaps a satiric comment on the grandeur of the theme, a 'jazzy' kidding of classical pretensions. Pitted against this is a boisterous, devil-may-care jazz melody. Several other tunes abound and many effects are exploited, but the interest is captured by the time honored development of the principal themes. Though Mr. Gershwin in this first attempt is often diffuse and blundering and has yet to learn the secret of economy in form, there is, nevertheless, so much vitality in the presentation and development of his material that the listener's emotions are almost constantly engaged.

"Mr. Gershwin has demonstrated, once for all, the suitability of jazz as thematic material for the larger musical forms. Whether, in the future, he or some one else will attain a skill ingenious enough to manipulate jazz tunes in such a manner as to reveal a sufficient variety of melodic and rhythmic contrasts and thus enable the composer to dispense entirely with conventional material is problematical, though not, in the light of what the 'Rhapsody in Blue' has already accomplished in this direction, improbable. It may well be that in the future annals of music George Gershwin will figure as a pioneer."

Mr. Morgan-Browne's Opinion.

Then comes one H. P. Morgan-Browne of England, who makes a pontifical pronouncement on what he calls "Negro Music Versus Helmholtzian Horrors." The Musical Courier quotes him. He says:

"Whilst Helmholtzian pedants are composing music often difficult to distinguish from any mere fortuitous concommitance of notes, such as a large dog might produce by treading the keys of a piano—and while they are busy showing us the weak points of all our musical instruments, especially of the violin (tonally perhaps the most beautiful of all the instruments) and again whilst they are upholding their music mainly by the argument 'all new music was thought hideous at first, therefore all music thought hideous now will subsequently be thought beautiful,' an argument equivalent to all potatoes are vegetables, therefore all vegetables are potatoes—while all this is going on in the music world a very different type of music seems in danger of being passed over entirely by musicians, exploited and brutalized to please people who are physically inapathetic and desire an excuse for jerking their limbs about. The music of the jazz band proper, as shown on some American records, finds its main characteristic in pianissimo (not the European pianissimo, e. g., mere lack of musical tone).

"It makes use of rare and moving qualities of tones, hauntingly subtle. The drum takes on the timbre of rustling leaves, wind-blown; the saxophone etheralizes the Helmweh of the Negro slave soul, and the tantalizing feints of syncopation fascinate the most refined musicians! And with what cunning are the tonal discoveries distributed? How badly do the moderns, super-moderns, need to learn from this Negro music, not to abuse fine touches by ostentatious repetition? Three or four puzzling and alluring tonal revelations will appear to vanish, it seems, only too soon; one listens in agony of anticipation for their recurrence, but it is not to be. Like the few but sudden gracious moments of delicately nurtured beautiful women, they are never repeated. They remain a tantalizing memory, heightening consciousness, to the point of melancholy fragrant frenzy.

"When one considers the clumsy insistence of our moderns who repeat again and again their most humble and threadbare inventions, one is amazed at the low place assigned to Negro music, so replete with invention, so full of that humble simplicity which is supposed to hail from the inmost shrine of esthetics—but the world cries again 'Release unto us Barabbas, away with humble melody, give us scientific dissonance, appeal to our intellect (soi-disant)!'"

Sousa on Jazz.

Finally there is John Philip Sousa with perhaps the most concrete evidence of all, since he has written some. He has a jazz fantasy for use on this season's tour with his band, which he calls "Music of the Minute." He says that he is doing this without apology and without belief that he is lowering the standards of his organization, and adds:

"It will be at least two decades—perhaps longer—before anyone in America will know whether jazz is going to be part of the permanent body of our music or whether it is merely a passing fancy with the American people. Personally, I believe it will achieve permanence, but that is merely an opinion—an opinion as good as but no better than the opinion of any other man or woman."

How to Listen to Music.

"Listeners to music have commonly thought too little of tone, vocal or instrumental," writes Percy A. Scholes, the critic of the London Observer. "It is true that a deep, rich contralto note will thrill the thousands, however stupid the song in the performance of which it occurs; but so, too, will a high soprano note, however shriekingly steam-whistled. In piano or orchestral playing people respond readily to a beautiful pianissimo, but so they do also to fortissimo, however harsh, and, indeed, the surest way to an encore is to end blatantly.

"Professional judgment upon musical performances ought, of course, to accept tone as its first criterion, but it often puts it last—if it allows it to enter into the consideration at all. Music, after all, is nothing but a manipulation of smaller or bigger chunks of tone of various qualities and colors, and as musical civilization advances the knack of grading sizes, qualities, and shades should grow, until very minute divisions and subdivisions at last become recognizable.

"Tone, then, as I have suggested, is the ultimate material of music; rhythm, pitch, harmonic combination, and so forth, being merely ways of treating this material. Yet more pianists are told that they play unrhythmically, or play wrong notes, than are chided for bad tone or lack of variety in good tone, and by some of us critics more vocalists are told that they sing out of tune than are told their tone is harsh, or thin, or thick, or samey. Musical criticism tends, I hope and think, to become more exact and detailed, yet it is perhaps failing somewhat here."

Perfectly true. The only trouble with the remarks and the application thereof is that recital giving is a business quite as much as an art, and high notes, steam whistle and all, always get applause and, by consequence, more business. Once again the inexorable law of demand and supply.

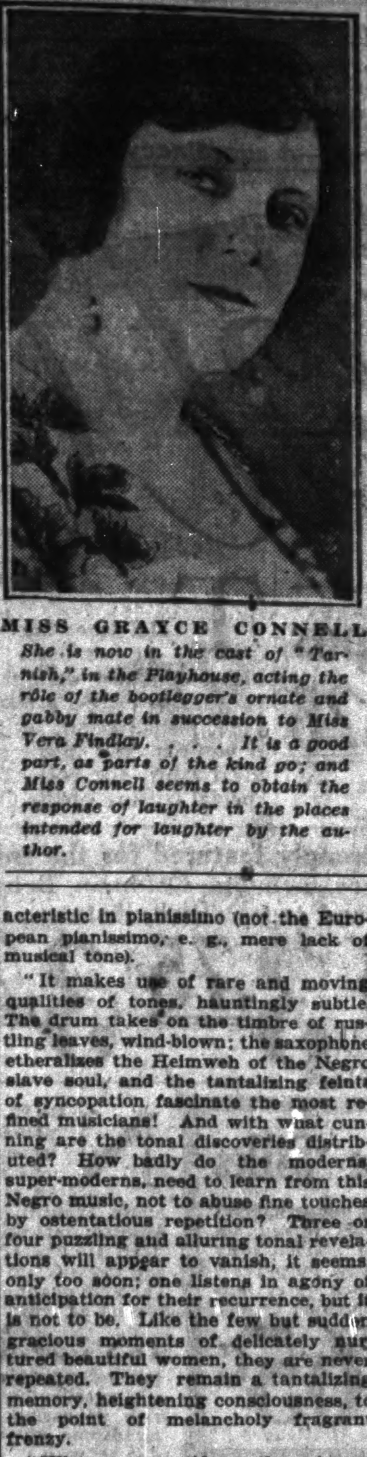
How They Used to Be.

The London Musical Times has an article on old programs, from which it appears that whatever may be the present musical shortcomings in London it will not do to speak of the "good old times." In 1837 the Philharmonic orchestra attempted Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" overture, but "broke down, owing to" (the name being mercifully withheld).

On one occasion Ole Bull gave a concert which, it seems, was not well accompanied, "some of the band playing in the minor instead of the major." At the opera, too, things did not always go well. On one occasion the chorus of prisoners in "Fidelio" proved troublesome. "We could not perform this chorus," says the chronicler, "in consequence of the chorus singers going away. It seems by this that Mr. H. has no command over them." Upon which the writer comments: "Being a chorus of prisoners, Mr. H. ought, of course, to have kept them between the bars."

COMIC RELIEF



MISS GRAYCE CONNELL

She is now in the cast of "Tarnish," in the Playhouse, acting the rôle of the bootlegger's ornate and gabby mate in succession to Miss Vera Findlay. . . . It is a good part, as parts of the kind go; and Miss Connell seems to obtain the response of laughter in the places intended for laughter by the author.

Mr. Neumann Starts Season October 12

F. Wight Neumann makes announcement of his list of concerts and recitals and of his roster of artists for the new season of music in Chicago. He has contracted for Sunday afternoon through the season, starting Oct. 12, in the Auditorium, the Studebaker theater, and the Playhouse.

On that date Vladimir de Pachmann will play a Chopin program in the Auditorium; Marion Rubovits, soprano, will sing in the Studebaker, and Mary Bryan Powers, also a soprano, will sing in the Playhouse.

A week later the respective theaters will house audiences for Geraldine Farrar in her new version of "Carmen," Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, and Oliver Smith, tenor.

The roster contains the name of virtually every singer, pianist, and violinist of note who will be touring the United States for 1924-'25. Thus, among the singers are Edward Johnson, Maria Ivogün, Helen Stanley, Marie Sundelius, Maria Jeritza, Julia Claussen, and Mario Chamlee. Josef Hofmann, Alfredo Cassella, Ethel Leginska, Ernst von Dohnanyi, William Bachus, Yolanda Mérö, Ossip Gabrilówitsch, Rachmaninoff, Heniot Levy, Edward Collins, and Mieczyslaw Munz are in the list of pianists. Kreisler, Heifetz, Huberman, and Georges Enesco are some of the violinists; while Mr. Neumann will bring Casals back for one of his recitals on the 'cello, and will manage the series in Chicago by the Flonzaley Quartet.

Whiteman to Tour.

We are told that Paul Whiteman is to make a tour this fall and that Chicago will be one of his ports of entry. He was in the neighborhood last spring, but could not find a convenient date in either theater or concert hall. Three grand pianos are included in his traveling equipment, but his organization is additionally interesting from the fact that twenty-five men play sixty instruments.

St. Catherine's Club for Dependent Girls, wards of the Juvenile court, will be the beneficiary of a concert to be given at Orchestra hall on Tuesday evening, Oct. 7. Renee Thornton will be the soprano, accompanied by her husband, Richard Hageman, and Ulysses Lappas, the tenor.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

A Bird in Hand.

"Well," said the happy bridegroom to the minister at the conclusion of the ceremony, "how much do I owe you?"

"O, I'll leave it to you," was the reply. "You can better estimate the value of the service rendered."

"Suppose we postpone settlement, then—say for a year. By that time I'll know whether I ought to give you $10 or nothing."

"No, no!" the clergyman demurred. "Better make it $5 now." C. T.

Obeyed.

A faithful country lass one bitter cold night was advised by her mistress to put an iron in her bed to warm it.

In the morning her mistress asked Sarah how she had slept.

"Pretty good, ma'am," said Sarah. "I had the iron almost warm by morning." D. A.

Only Too Well.

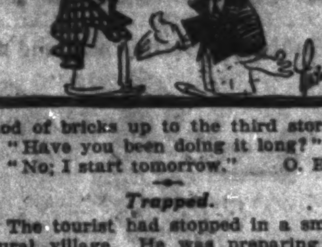
"So you let your bookkeeper go! What was the trouble—couldn't he balance his accounts?"

"He could. So well that he was beginning to juggle them!" M. D.

He Tired Easily.

"You look tired."

"Well, it's hard work carrying a hod of bricks up to the third story."



"Have you been doing it long?"

"No; I start tomorrow." O. E.

Trapped.

The tourist had stopped in a small rural village. He was preparing to resume his journey when he noticed the town constable watching him narrowly.

"What's the speed limit here?" he asked, thinking it wise to be prepared.

"Never ye mind, young feller," replied the rustic cop. "Jest yew try t' git out o' this town without bein' arrested." A. C.

A Shrinking Violet.

"Is that all the work you can do in one day?" asked Sam's dissatisfied employer.

"Well, boss," replied Sam, "I s'pose I could do mo', but I nevah was much of a hand foh showin' off." H. H. B.

Rage of Frustration.

Young mother—What in the world makes the baby cry so?

Ditto father [wearily]—I suppose he overheard me say that I managed to get a little sleep last night. L. B.

The Meanest Man.

Tom—I have found the meanest man at last.

John—Who? What did he do?

Tom—He's deaf, and has never told his barber. M. L.

Inside Dope on the Movie Stars

Conway's Fourth Attempt Looks Like "Happy Ever After"

By Julia Harpman.

WHAT is the secret of his charm? What makes him such a devil with the ladies? Is it because he can emote with his eyebrows? Is it his tawny beauty, his stalwart form, the sleekness of his dark hair? Millions of fans have admired him on the screen.

And four—count 'em, f-o-u-r (4)—women have tripped with him to the altar.

Ah, Conway, thou hast a winning way!

Conway Tearle comes from a long line of actors. His mother's family, the Conways, began a theatrical career in 1712. His mother, who was an actress, first married a cornetist by the name of Levy. Her father, E. B. Conway, managed the first stock company ever organized in America.

Tearle's grandfather was manager of the famous Brooklyn theater from 1872 until a dreadful night in December four years later when, during Kate Claxton's appearance in "The Two Orphans" there, the theater caught fire. There was a frightful loss of life. That destruction was the first great theater disaster in America.

His Real Name.

Tearle's mother was then married to Osmond Tearle, a famous actor in the days of Lester Wallack and his stock company at the old Star theater. It is not clear whether Conway, whose first name really is Frederick and who is sometimes called "Freddy" by his intimates, was born of the first or second marriage. There are contrary reports.

However, Tearle recently declared that "fortunately, my real name is Conway Tearle."

Conway, his mother, and her second husband went to England when Conway was about 7 years old to play in a London production, and the boy was given a child's part in a performance soon after. When he was 10 years old Conway could recite twelve Shakesperian tragedies. At 19 he played all sorts of rôles.

For two years he was a professional boxer in England. His nose was broken and his lips were cut, but the scars faded nicely and his ears, fortunately, did not suffer the disfigurement that makes ugly blobs of flesh on the sides of most prizefighters' heads.

He returned to the stage and to the elder Tearle's Shakesperian company. While in Manchester, England, when he was little more than 21, Frederick Conway Tearle played the rôle of Hamlet without a single rehearsal and without a slip in his lines. On a moment's notice he took the part of the dippy Dane when the leading man of the company fell suddenly ill.

First High Step.

The manager of a London theater happened to be in the house, and, informed of the unusual ability of the young actor, offered Conway the leading rôle in "The Queen's Double," a play that was later staged at the Garrick theater in London.

That was the first high step in Tearle's career. It was to lead to fortune—Tearle now makes $3,000 a week—and to many romances, loves that blossomed only to be seared by the bright flame of a newer love.

He was to have troubles, too; he was destined to incur the enmity as well as the love of beautiful women. Perhaps now, when his eye becomes satiated with his luxurious surroundings, he remembers the cold, unbeautiful inner wall of a prison cell. For, alas, one of Conway's wives had him jailed when he neglected to pay alimony that was due her.

Tearle talks with a pronounced English accent, the result, of course, of his many years' residence in Britain. He is nearly 45 now, very satisfied with himself, terribly bored, quite the landed gentleman of fiction.

No, Not the Truth.

"California bores me horribly," he said recently with a weary air. "I much prefer my estate in Westchester county, don't you know, than my place here in Hollywood. Of course, one must work in California—it is better to make pictures here, but it is so tiresome, so monotonous—the eternal sunshine.

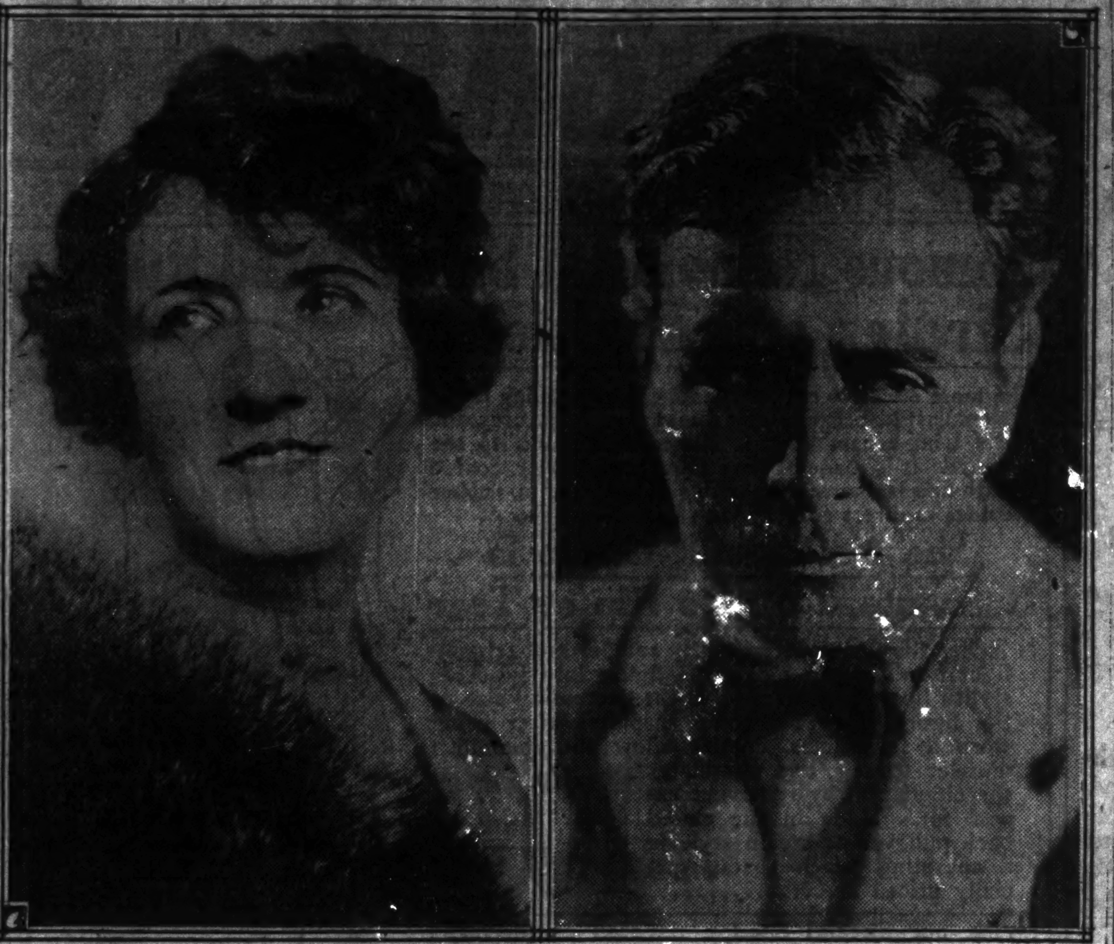
"I don't think you should print the truth about the motion picture stars," he went on. "The truth would destroy the illusion of the public. Why should the public know that Alice Terry's real name is Bridget McCarthy and that she was a film cutter when Rex Ingram discovered her? Now, my own name, fortunately, is Conway Tearle, and it doesn't matter if you publish the truth about me."

As a matter of fact, Alice Terry's name was not Bridget McCarthy at all, but was Alice Rodier. She was a film cutter, which is one of the most important jobs in the motion picture business.

However, back to Conway. . . .

Conway [or Frederick, as he was then called] met his first wife when they both were playing in his parents' English company. They were married after a brief courtship.

Two years later Tearle wrote his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Mary Tearle, from America: "God knows how many times I have been unfaithful." He pleaded with his wife to "let him go to the devil in his own way."



CONWAY TEARLE AND ADELE ROWLAND, HIS PRESENT WIFE.

Mrs. Tearle presented the letter, in its entirety, to the court. It read:

"I cannot behave as I have been doing any longer and leave you in ignorance. It may be an easy matter for you to get a divorce. It behooves me now to play the man for once and be truthful. I have not supported you for years, and God knows how many times I have been unfaithful.

"If you have any regard for me, do get a divorce and serve me as well as yourself. I am living in misery all the time, dear. It was bound to come. It was bred in the bone. Let me go to the devil in my own way. Just forgive me."

Mrs. Tearle No. 1 quietly secured a divorce in London in 1903.

Tearle played the title rôle of "Ben Hur" in a company that was sent to Australia. Later he played in the Drury Lane production, "The Best of Friends," and as leading man in Ellen Terry's company.

He came to New York to play opposite Grace George in "Abigail," after which he returned to England. Charles Frohman brought him back to America on a contract. He was lent by Frohman to his brother Daniel, who wanted Tearle to play in Sothern and Marlowe's supporting cast.

Julia Frowns on Him.

After two days of rehearsing, Julia Marlowe told Conway that she didn't think he could act and he was released. Charles Frohman, however, believed in Tearle's ability.

Later he played opposite Viola Allen, William Faversham, Ethel Barrymore, and other illustrious stars.

Tearle next married Josephine Park, another actress. Their romance was shattered by the ruthlessly beautiful Roberta Menges-Corwin-Hill, then called "The Pearl of Sheepshead Bay."

The vivid Roberta had broken many hearts. She was a ravishing beauty at the age of 16, when she eloped with Halsey Corwin, son of a wealthy railroad man and heir to $800,000, all of which he spent. Roberta was divorced from Corwin in 1906.

Two years later she married Capt. Arthur Hill of the Royal Irish Rifles, son of Lord Arthur William Hill. They were married less than a year.

Wins Our Hero.

Roberta was the daughter of Robert Menges, once prominent as the owner of a racing stable at Sheepshead Bay. She had the added distinction of being the first American woman sent to prison for smuggling. She spent three days in prison and paid a fine of $2,000 for smuggling a valuable fur coat into the United States.

She was startlingly handsome and wise as a serpent. She first saw Conway when he was playing with Louis Mann in "Elevating a Husband" at the Garrick theater, New York. Tearle and his second wife were then living at Reisenweber's, that erstwhile gay resort that was closed by prohibition.

Roberta Menges-Corwin-Hill sat in a front seat at every performance of Tearle's show. She deluged Conway with admiring notes and great bunches of roses. At last he fell before the siege. He eloped with Roberta to Paris, leaving his wife and the detectives she had put on his trail no inkling as to his whereabouts. He sent a note of resignation to Louis Mann, and Louis said he'd expected something to happen.

Tearle and Mrs. Hill sailed under the assumed names of "Mr. and Mrs. Nichols." That was in April, 1912.

Mrs. Josephine Park Tearle was given a divorce in the fall of 1912. The decree was obtained on the ground that Conway had been guilty of misconduct with "The Pearl of Sheepshead Bay." According to his wife, Tearle was then earning $175 a week on the stage.

$400 for Affections.

Mrs. Tearle No. 2 also sued the beautiful Roberta for $25,000 for alienation of Conway's affections. The suit was later compromised for $400. The papers in the suit recited that Mrs. Tearle had invaded a room at the King Edward hotel that was supposedly occupied by a Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Turner and she there discovered her husband and Mrs. Hill.

Tearle and Mrs. Hill were married in Jersey City on Nov. 27, 1912. Their marriage lasted four years.

On complaint of Mrs. Josephine Park Tearle, Conway was arrested and lodged in Ludlow street jail, commonly called "the alimony club," for failure to pay her alimony. He was released when payment was made by wife No. 3.

Later, when Tearle's salary had soared to $1,750 a week, Josephine sued for an increase in alimony and the court raised her weekly stipend from $25 to $75. Conway also was ordered by the court to pay Roberta of the many names alimony of $55 a week.

Roberta Menges Tearle named Adele Rowland [Tearle's present wife] when she sued for divorce. She charged that she had found Tearle and Miss Rowland, in negligee, together in an apartment on West 13th street.

It was strangely coincidental that the apartment upon which Mrs. Tearle No. 3 descended to find Miss Rowland and her husband together was the same in which Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, who came to be known as "the shooting show girls," made W. E. D. Stokes the target for their bullets back in June, 1911.

Tearle and Miss Rowland claimed that they were reading the manuscript of a play when interrupted by Tearle's wife. They were adequately chaperoned by Miss Rowland's sister, they said.

In answering Mrs. Tearle's accusation that she was clad in a nightgown when found by the irate wife, Miss Rowland told the court that that was the customary attire adopted by theatrical people when they read plays.

Referee John Gilroy held that this explantion was a tax on the intelligence. Subsequently, Mrs. Tearle was awarded a decree of divorce.

On the witness stand Tearle admitted that he had spent several nights at the Rowland apartment, but denied charges of wrongdoing. He said he kept his toothbrush at Miss Rowland's apartment, but that any pajamas he wore there were the property of Miss Rowland's brother, who was a resident of Washington. Miss Rowland, whose real name was Adele Ruggles, was married at the time Tearle first met her, but later was divorced, Tearle said.

Indiscreet Only.

Mrs. Roberta Tearle alleged that Conway had borrowed large sums of money from her "to use for living expenses, travel and various extravagances" until her resources were depleted. She charged that Tearle had pawned a valuable necklace of hers. Tearle denied both charges.

"It is true I have been indiscreet," he said, "but I am not so unprincipled as to accept money from a woman."

Roberta Menges Tearle, following the lead of her predecessor, instituted suit for $100,000 against Adele Rowland, alleging that "by wicked, wrongful arts, blandishments, flatteries and seductions" the beautiful Adele had deprived the much married Roberta of Tearle's affection.

"How can you deprive a woman of what she doesn't have?" asked Miss Rowland in reply.

Miss Rowland declared she had not known Tearle was married when she first met him. He was then separated from his wife, she said, and when she learned that he was married she pleaded with him to return to Roberta. She quoted Tearle as having said that Roberta's "habits made my life a hell."

"She is the kind one hates and still is sorry for," Miss Rowland said of Mrs. Tearle No. 3. "If she is hard up, I will give her a benefit, but I will not be coerced into giving her a cent."

Finally talk of the suit died out.

Miss Rowland and Tearle were married and moved into a beautiful home in Westchester. They have a lovely, yellow brick house at Hollywood.

Tearle, who went into moving pictures when Ethel Barrymore insisted that he play opposite her in "The Nightingale," is now the highest salaried movie leading man. Among his recent successes were "Bella Donna," with Pola Negri, and in "The Eternal Flame," with Norma Talmadge.

Once he declared in court he had refused an offer of $400 a week to go in the movies because it was "considered beneath the dignity of an actor to go into the moving pictures." But he changed his mind.

Meeting the Demand for Beauty in Radio!

No Horn—New Console Has In-Built Loudspeaker—Space for Everything!

HERE is something that enables you to enjoy radio in the home without the clutter of unsightly apparatus that plays havoc in the decorative scheme of your living room!

The horn speaker is out of date and out of place in radio for the home.

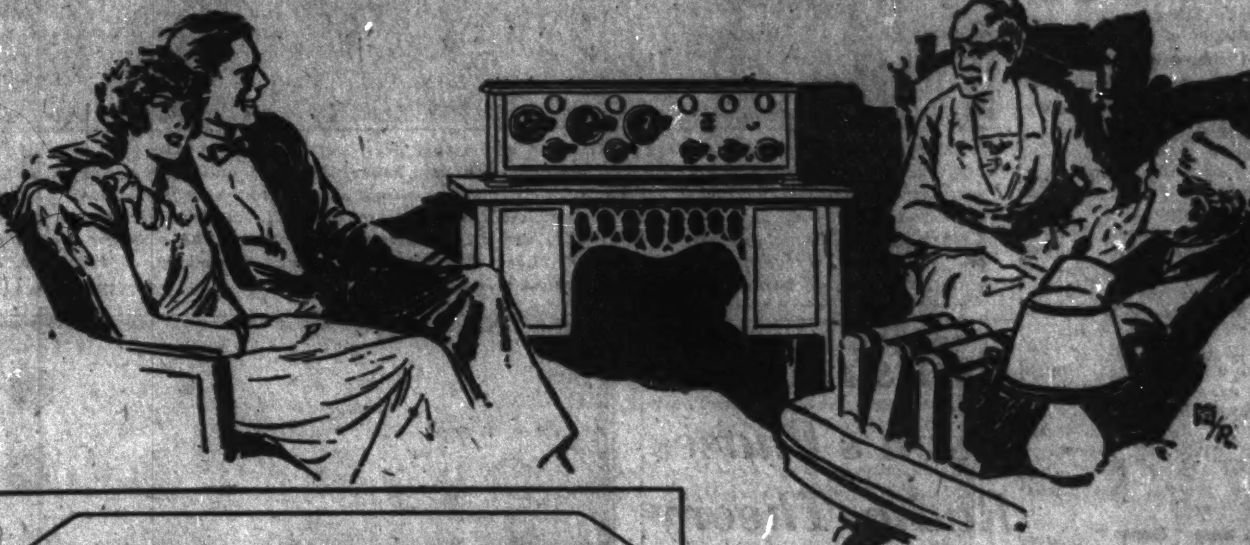
This console with its in-built loudspeaker is scientific and sightly.

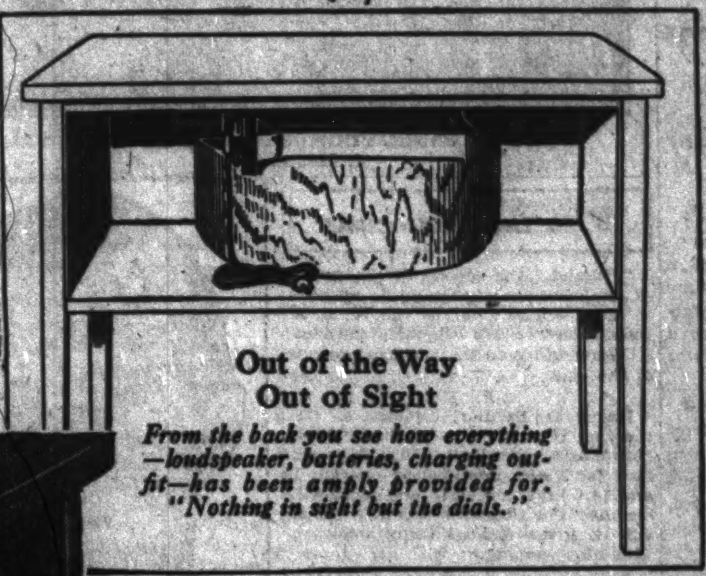
It does a better job of reproducing, for it has the best unit of all that have been tried and its soundbox is of resonant wood instead of metal, fibre, or composition.

The appearance of a Windsor loudspeaker console is a delight. Its convenience is a joy. A piece of real living room furniture of pleasing lines and finish—and it accommodates all the miscellany of equipment which hitherto had no place except on table tops, shelves or floor. Ample space on top for any set, with plenty of elbow room in front. Nothing in sight but the dials. Everything else goes inside—from behind—in spaces cleverly designed to hold the largest batteries and outfit—besides the self-contained loudspeaker—all unseen and protected from dust or disturbance.

Don't give an otherwise artistic living room the appearance of perpetual disorder! Don't let radio set at naught all efforts of careful housekeeping! And don't forego the utmost in reproduction! Your dealer has this console now; its beauty and utility will win you from the moment you see it.

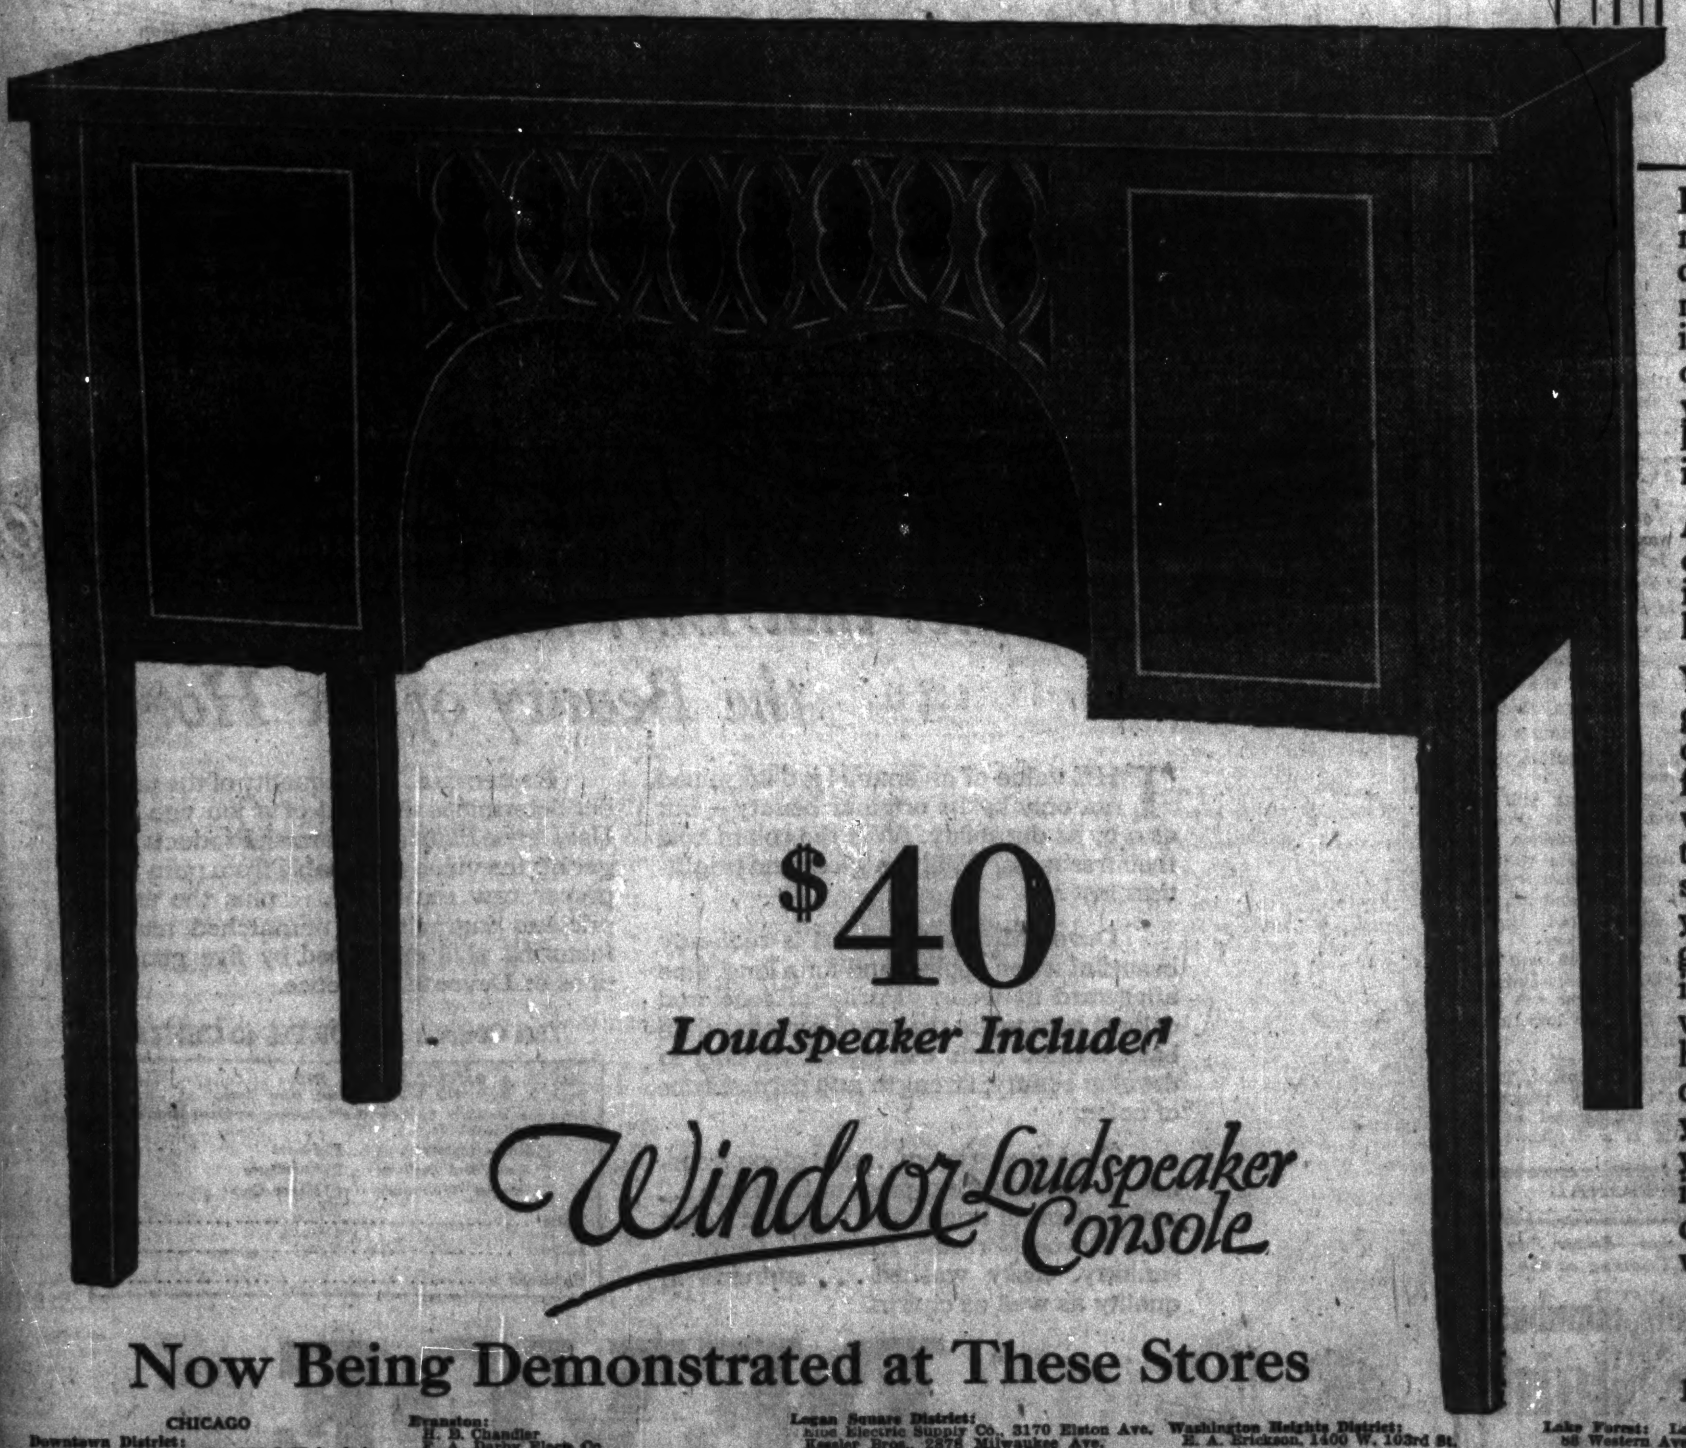
Accommodates any Receiving Set You May Have. Offers You an Altogether New Quality of Tone. Provides a Safe Place for Batteries, Outfit and You Don't Need the Awkward Horn.





Out of the Way Out of Sight

From the back you see how everything—loudspeaker, batteries, charging outfit—has been amply provided for. "Nothing in sight but the dials."



$40

Loudspeaker Included

Windsor Loudspeaker Console

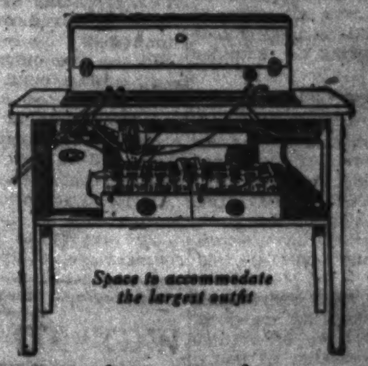
This Smart Console Conceals All Unsightly Apparatus—Nothing in View But the Dials

The graceful exterior of this console gives no hint of its inner utility, for it is a simple and effective piece of furniture in every line. But a glance at the interior reveals a most ingenious arrangement of the in-built loudspeaker with space either side and in back. These spaces are ample for the largest A battery, and the largest wet B batteries, and the largest charging outfit.

It makes no difference what kind of radio outfit you have—this console was designed for your use. It is an ideal and necessary part of any radio equipment in the home. It provides for every part of it—except the unwieldy horn which you will wish to discard surely as you hear the tonal qualities of the speaker incorporated in the console itself.

And the price, forty dollars, which includes the console, loudspeaker and unit, is no more than you must pay for any loudspeaker alone—of comparable tone!

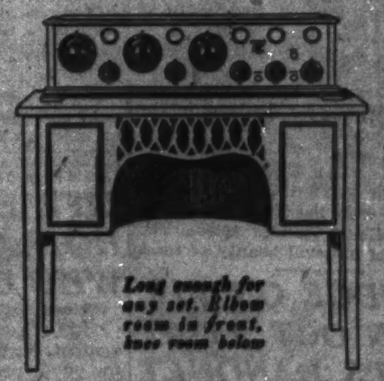
You will also discover in this console a generous forty dollars of value as a piece of furniture. It is the product of a famous furniture factory—famous for the honest worth and inherent beauty of its furniture. The design will speak for itself. The solid construction will be apparent when you examine it. Trim and graceful as it is, you can push it around a carpeted floor when weighted down with the heaviest outfit with no wobble or waver! When tuning in, you may rest full weight on your elbows. And note: there is ample knee-room so one can sit comfortable and close when operating the dials.



Space to accommodate the largest outfit

There are no doors or drawers, it is all readily accessible. The unit is up under the top, out of harm's way. The illustration shows how neatly and compactly everything is stowed away—note that the outfit pictured is made up of the very largest batteries in home use.

The console top is 38 in. long, 18 in. deep, and 29 in. high. Finished in mahogany or walnut.



Long enough for any set. Elbow room in front, knee room below

Dealers are now showing Windsor loudspeaker consoles and have them for immediate delivery to your home. See if your dealer is listed below. If not, ask any store or ask us. But make it a point to see this most welcome addition to the enjoyment of radio in any home.

ETHER LADEN WITH PLAINTS AS PARLEY NEARS

Erbstein Fears 'Big Ones' Will Drown Rivals.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

With readjustment of radiocast conditions by the forthcoming conference called by Secretary of Commerce Hoover a certainty, the ether lately has been laden with plaints from so-called "little fellows," who seem to anticipate being elbowed out of space for the especial benefit of a favored chain of high power broadcasters.

Radio audiences have been told on more than one occasion that "unlimited" power grants to favored broadcasters—by which was left the impression that these would be made up of a small coterie of class "B" stations—would mean that set owners far and near would be able to hear only "trust" programs, because of the fact that all others would be drowned out.

In each case the listeners in were appealed to to write to Secretary Hoover a protest against permitting increase of the present theoretical power limit—500 watts.

Erbstein Sees "Doom."

Charles E. Erbstein, owner of WTAS, Elgin, placed the matter before his hearers in the light of a movement of the "Big Five" to seize the ether and to force out of business all stations that are privately owned.

If such a movement is under way, it has been conducted so secretly and effectively that a number of members of the advisory committee of the conference have been taken unawares, these being the owners and directors of many of the stations whose doom Mr. Erbstein predicted.

In truth the situation lies not so much in the matter of power, when kept within reasonable bounds, as that of interference, due to stations within certain areas being upon wave lengths near together.

Serious annoyances also have been provoked by stations applying high power without the ability to tune sharply, as in the case of KYW. This interference to stations outside of Chicago radiocasting on wave lengths from 517 to 545 has been due, the writer understands, to the fact that the Westinghouse plant was not equipped adequately to get out sharply under the power applied during the summer months.

Tests Disprove Claims.

Several stations already are equipped, and more are equipping, to apply from one to five kilowatts power, but all are expected to be sharply tuned.

Tests by KDKA, KGO, WMC, WOS, WBAP, WHAZ, WGY, and other modernly equipped radiocasts have shown very little "spreading" over the old power.

On the other hand, with restrictions rather loose in the checking, many of the "little fellows" have been time and again guilty of getting so badly off their wave lengths that serious interference has been caused to thousands of listeners-in. This will form a subject on the conference agenda, it has been already decided.

Instances of such interference may be cited by the dozen by any habitual listener-in. A few nights before Mr. Erbstein made his dire predictions, KFKB, Milford, Kas., was logged by the writer while WTAS was broadcasting. Both are supposed to be on 286 meters. KFKB was brought up in a regenerative low loss tuner, with three stages of amplification, to be heard for blocks, despite the fact that WTAS is located between the receiver and the Kansas station.

Plaint of Another Type.

Strange to say, the announcer at KFKB was calling upon his audience to write in to let him know "how much interference WTAS at Elgin, Ill., on the same wave length as our station, is causing to KFKB programs." His talk on this subject lasted several minutes. That evening—Tuesday week—KFKB was 28 on the wave length dial, with Elgin at 28. The next night, after Elgin had signed off—and that always is quite late—KFKB came in at 28 on the dial. Evidently KFKB intended its plaint should not be interfered with too much by WTAS.

While no one will take seriously the idea that any clique would get very far in "drowning out" the little fellows, if such an aim were afoot there are regulations possible for all stations which would be hailed with delight by the great majority of receiver owners. One of these would have to do with long winded mediocre programs and piffling chatter which clogs up the ether endlessly. Another is careless tuning of transmitters. Still another is misleading propaganda.

Kenosha Team Wins Old Time Fiddlers' Contest

The winners have been announced in the old time fiddlers' contest held in connection with the nation barn dance program broadcast every Saturday evening from the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation station, WLS. The contest was on the basis of popularity votes by radio fans. The Kenosha team won first prize. This city was represented by Eugene Murdock and George Adamson. Second place went to M. J. Delehanty of Blackstone, Ill. The third prize was captured by Frank Hart of Aurora, Ill., and fourth, William McCormick, Marseilles, Ill. The fifth on the list was the Shana Park team, composed of Grace H. Smith, Mollie Bowly and Wade Smith.

South Africa to Get Six Kilowatt Station

C. Poole, Cape Town, in a report to the department of commerce.

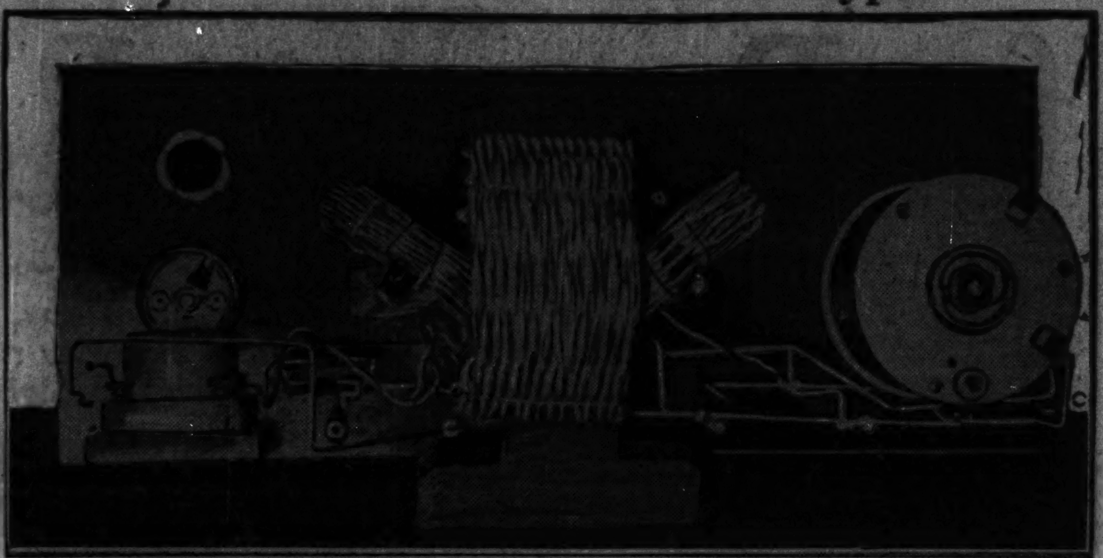
Low Loss Tuner of B. L. A. Type.



Many members of the Broadcast Listeners' association, 6240 Cottage Grove avenue, open meetings of which are held every Wednesday evening in Hamilton park field house, 72d street and Normal avenue, have turned to construction of low loss tuners, especially for reception of strong signals from nearby stations. The set shown is the model followed. It was designed in many low loss particulars by M. H. Romberg, electrical engineer of the University of Chicago. It will be noted that use of a baseboard is avoided. The coils are wound at home, and consist of: Primary, 12 turns No. 12, 14, or 16 DCC magnet wire; secondary, 45 turns No. 12 wire; tickler, 24 turns, all basket wound. The condenser is a 23 plate. British Add to Moon's Phases Radio Theory

Scientist Goes Further than Did Tuska.

[The following cable deals with a theory first advanced in this country that radio reception was affected largely by the moon's phases, but goes a little further in detailed conclusions than did C. D. Tuska here.]

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 27.—After a long series of observations a British scientist declares that wireless reception is best during the full moon period. It has been ascertained that as the moon first appears in the east, excellent reception follows from eastward stations, and as the lunar planet rises, spreading light, reception is distinctly improved over all sections illuminated.

In the first quarter of the moon reception was found better in the early evening. At the full moon the hearing clears late at night. During the critical period when the moon changes from full to new moon reception is said to be poorest.

These observations do not take in atmospheric or local conditions.

The theory is that certain interferences are set up between the earth and the moon, causing static lines of force between these bodis.

WGY TO GIVE "SILENCE" AHEAD OF STAGE DATE

The WGY Players, the oldest group of radio players on the air, will return to WGY, the eastern station of the General Electric company, on Friday evening after an absence of ten weeks. Their opening production will be "Silence," a crook play by Max Marcin. This melodrama will be offered to the radio audience before it appears on the stage of a metropolitan theater. "Silence" has been cast and is now in rehearsal, but the WGY Players will enjoy the experience of interpreting an author's script without first witnessing a stage production.

Edward H. Smith, director and leading man of the WGY Players since the first experimental air play, "The Wolf," has assembled practically the same company for 1924-'25 as was used last season. The chief exception is Miss Viola Karwowska, who was the first leading woman of the players and who has been reëngaged to play emotional leading rôles. She has a voice of unusual beauty of tone.

COOLIDGE ON AIR AGAIN OCT. 11 AT FIRM'S BANQUET

President Coolidge will be on the air again Saturday, Oct. 11, the occasion being dinners in various sections of the country and in European and Canadian cities, of the H. J. Heinz company employés. The dinners will follow unveiling of a memorial to H. J. Heinz. President Coolidge will speak from the White House, and several radiocasts, including KDKA, Pittsburgh, will broadcast the addresses.

MOOSEHEART ON AIR SOON; CALL LETTERS WJJD

Construction has been going forward rapidly at Mooseheart of still another radiocast for the Chicago district. The station will be of 500 watts power, will operate on a wave length of 278 meters, and will have the call signal WJJD. Two 150 foot antenna towers have been erected on the Woman's building, and the station is expected to go on the air this week with test programs. Jack Nelson will be program director.

Canadian National Begins Building Moncton Station

Montreal, Sept. 27.—The Canadian National railway has commenced construction of a radiocasting station at Moncton, N. B. The structure will consist of two towers, 150 feet in height, the design being of the Eiffel type. The setting of the towers and antenna is such as to rest broadly on a line drawn from Sydney, N. S., to Montreal. The main radiation will be from the western end, and will cover all Canadian National railway lines in New England and Quebec.

LIFE HARD FOR HOLLAND "HAM" WHO DOES THINGS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

THE HAGUE, Sept. 27.—Protesting against acquittal by Judge Leydana, the public prosecutor of a Hague court demanded a fine of 30 florins or thirty days' imprisonment for a young amateur accused of working a short wave sender illegally. The counsel for the defense argued for acquittal, recalling that the youngster was the first to reach America by a home built transmitter. He said a French amateur who performed a similar feat was decorated.

PICTURE WORLD'S FAIR AS RADIO STYLE DISPLAY

Refinements in Circuits, Designs Shown.

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—One hundred thousand radio fans circulated through Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment armory during last week to view the latest developments in radio at the Radio World's Fair. Those who expected to see revolutionary sets and circuits were disappointed. Those who looked for improvements and refinements in the style of apparatus were surprised.

The exhibits show that the radio industry is becoming stabilized and standards of design have been developed. The great number of booths and variety of apparatus clearly indicate that the industry has grown much larger since a year ago.

Interest Vastly Increased.

The thousands of people crowded in the footways were a good indication that the number of radio followers and the interest in listening in have increased tremendously since last winter.

One enthusiast from Chicago, surveying the Garden from the gallery, was heard to ask:

"Just where did that fellow stand who kept saying, 'Alabama casts twenty-four votes for Oscar Underwood'?"

All of the radio shows held this season, including the English exhibition, in Albert hall, London, and the "Concours Lepine," staged in Paris, indicate that 1924 has been a year in which radio sets have been improved but no radical changes have been made. The most notable feature at the London show was reported as "multi-tube receivers encased in elaborately painted and carved period furniture."

Radio devices at the Paris show are described as "nothing startling beyond adaptations of sets already known in the United States and England."

Chiefly a Style Show.

The radio world's fair is chiefly a style show and the newest device, which has attracted the attention of many of those who have visited Madison Square Garden, was the current supply apparatus which permits the use of the house lighting current in place of "A" or "B" batteries. There are several different designs of current supply instruments on display.

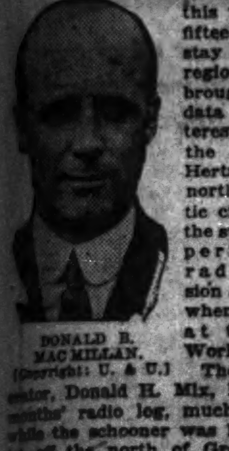
STATIC A FACTOR EVEN IN ARCTIC, MACMILLAN SAYS

Aurora, However, Fails to Cause Interference.

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—Dr. Donald B. MacMillian, Arctic explorer, returned this week from a fifteen months' stay in the Polar regions, and he brought with him data of intense interest regarding the action of Hertzian waves north of the Arctic circle. He told the story of his experiences with radio transmission and reception when interviewed at the Radio World's Fair.



DONALD B. MAC MILLAN.
[Copyright: U. & U.]

The Bowdoin operator, Donald H. Mix, has a fifteen months' radio log, much of it made while the schooner was locked in the ice off the north of Greenland. Mix handled a total traffic of more than 50,000 words, and more than 100,000 words of press matter were copied. Dr. MacMillian said: "We had a wonderful foreign news service, especially from the big station POZ, Nauen, Germany, and Leafields, England."

Static Bad in North.

When asked if he noticed any peculiar effects from static or the aurora borealis, Dr. MacMillian explained:

"We made eight months of continuous observations and have a photographic record of our observations relative to terrestial magnetism. These have been sent to Washington for study and tabulation by experts. We are hopeful that the results will cast some light upon the phenomena of static and will help to solve the problem of static interference.

"Static was bad, specially during terrific magnetic storms. Some of the disturbances were so violent that the magnetic needle traced like a scribbling pen across the record sheet."

Dr. MacMillian said that radio made his stay in the north tolerable.

"I clearly heard my sister and nieces and easily recognized their voices when they sent greetings to me from WJAZ, Chicago, last Christmas eve," he said. "Each Wednesday night at midnight WJAZ sent a special concert to us, and they always tried to have a friend of mine talk through the microphone, and I had no difficulty distinguishing the voices of different friends.

"Church choirs and sermons reached us regularly on Sunday nights, chiefly from stations in the middle west and west. We could hear the handclapping after a dance orchestra had finished a selection in a Chicago hotel as clear as if we were in the dance hall instead of frozen in the ice twelve degrees from the north pole.

Aurora Not a Factor.

"While the dancers were undoubtedly enjoying ice cream we were enjoying frozen walrus liver, the delicacy of the far north, and we had the same music as they danced to in Chicago. We were also troubled with mosquitoes and there were butterflies and bees on the land near the Bowdoin.

"The aurora borealis apparently has no effect on radio transmission or reception," continued Dr. MacMillan. "We even passed right through the aurora belt, and it did not trouble the radio waves in the east. After we passed through the aurora belt the display was to the south."

W-G-N Notes

Miss Claiborne Foster, who burst into theatrical stardom a year ago in "Two Fellows and a Girl," and who is leading the comedy company of "Apple Sauce," at the La Salle theater, will talk from W-G-N during Rocking Chair time next Thursday afternoon.

* *

J. Elliott Jenkins, radio engineer, who built station W-G-N as WDAP, is to relinquish his duties at the station to become consulting engineer of a group of other local radiocasts.

Jenkins is one of Chicago's radio pioneers. In 1921, with Thorne Donnelly he built the original WDAP in the Wrigley tower. The station was moved to the Drake in 1923.

Coupling a scientific education at Hill school and Princeton with years of musical composition, his talents were particularly adaptable to radio.

The Lyon & Healy Artist Series concerts, which are presented daily in the Lyon & Healy Concert hall, will be broadcast by W-G-N every afternoon except Saturday and Sunday, between 2:30 and 3.

The first will be put on the air tomorrow. Nedelka Simeonova, Bulgarian violiniste, is the artist chosen for this week's concerts. She is one of the brilliant artists who have come from the studio of the great Leopold Auer and has been touring America for three years.

Tuesday will be "Vogues and Frolics" night at W-G-N. Odette Myrtil, Jimmy Savo, and Fred Allen and various others of the principals of the musical revue at the Apollo theater will issue a broadside of fun and melody between 7 and 7:30 on Tuesday evening from the Drake Hotel studio.

The most important football games in the "Big Ten" and the middle west this fall will be broadcast by W-G-N. Although some of the games are still undetermined upon, it is definitely planned to broadcast the Illinois-Michigan from Urbana on Oct. 18, the Michigan-Wisconsin game from Ann Arbor on Oct. 25, the Illinois-Iowa game from Urbana on Nov. 1, and the Illinois-Ohio State game from Urbana on Nov. 22.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A new art of playwriting for radio was established in England this week when the British Broadcast company announced the result of the first broadcast play competition. The prize play, "The Tiger Hunt," written distinctly for radio, calls only for voices. It is an entirely new problem for playwrights. "The Tiger Hunt" will be performed by 2LO and simultaneously broadcast by seventeen BBC stations on Oct. 6.

LINK FRENCH STATIONS

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The Ecole Superieure broadcasting station is conducting trials for linking up great distances, employing short wave lengths. A regular liaison has been established between Paris and Marseilles on wave lengths of from 20 to 100 meters. Programs have also been exchanged between Paris and Casa Blanca.

At the Concours Lepine, the Paris exhibition of radio inventions and novelties, M. Edouard Belin gave a lecture on transmission of pictures and images by telegraph and radio, in which he declared his "crypto-stereo-telegraph" had been perfected for making practical the sending of messages and pictures so they could not be received except by the station for which they were intended.

Premier Herriot visited the exhibition, expressing surprise at radio's rapid development.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 27.—The Danish army has established six new broadcasting stations scattered over Denmark, from which broadcasting from all big stations in Europe will be relayed to Danish amateurs. The new stations are all of the small field type, easily converted for military use.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—A big German broadcasting station, "Ounkstunde," located in Berlin, soon will begin broadcasting market reports in code. The service will mean nothing to an ordinary receiving amateur. In order to make the service pay, a $5 charge is made for a copy of the code.

VIENNA, Sept. 27.—According to a report here from Rome, an Italian marine engineer, Ermanno Fiamma, has succeeded in perfecting a new system for controlling motor boats, airplanes, and torpedoes by radio. The system is said to differ materially from the one worked out in America.

PRAGUE, Sept. 27.—All of Shakespeare's plays are soon to be broadcast from here. This is the first time anything but native Czecho-Slovakian dramatic works has been allowed on the air.

MADRID, Sept. 27.—Former Empress Zita of Hungary and her children are ardent radio fans. At the small palace of Lequito, Spain, where they are living in the strictest retirement, receivers have been installed and the whole family declares these help them to forget their unhappy past and present exile.

"HYPERPRISM" LATEST ETHER NOVELTY

America's "syncopation" craze has been outdone in England (although it took a French-American composer, Edgar Varese, to do it) in "hyperprism," described by the British Broadcasting company as the "latest orchestral novelty." It recently was radiocast simultaneously over the company's chain of stations, the place of origin being 2LO, London, and proved to be a weird but fairly popular undertaking. "Hyperprism" is the combined musical crashing of percussion instruments, including tom tom, "lion's roar," slap sticks, Chinese blocks, rattles, sleigh bells, siren, crash cymbals, and blacksmith's anvil. Photograph, taken at 2LO, shows the "orchestra," with Eugene Goosens, conductor, standing at the left of Edgar Varese.

CANADA STATIONS PREPARING FOR DISTANCE TESTS

Definite assurances of Canadian broadcasting stations coöperating with the American stations have been received from J. N. Cartier, director of CKAC, Montreal, according to Arthur H. Lynch, who is arranging the forthcoming international tests.

All Canadian, Cuban, Porto Rican and American stations will coöperate as a unit during the tests. The European stations will do likewise.

In a recent address Mr. Lynch said:

"Every listener on the North American continent will have an hour each night for an entire week during which he can really test the distance receiving properties of his receiver without interference from a station within thousands of miles. International week will be 100 per cent silent during the specified hours and every listener may confidently look forward to hearing the overseas stations with the greatest of success."

Weather Bureau Extends Radio Forecast Service

The United States weather bureau has extended radio distribution of its daily weather forecast in the south Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico, and Caribbean to include five major broadcasting stations and thirteen subordinate stations for aiding local dissemination at United States coastal ports, and in Cuba, Haiti and the Virgin islands.

Russia Gets Into Broadcast Game with a Censorship

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

WARSAW, Sept. 23.—Radical Russians are rapidly getting "radioically" up to date, if the strictly censored programs and government monopoly on all broadcasting, receiving, and manufacture of apparatus can be considered progress.

According to a recent announcement, soviet Russia now has forty sending stations, each with a radius of 2,000 miles. But since all are intended for commercial service and not to entertain, the government is busy supplying a network of broadcast stations for entertainment and education.

All radio sets and parts will be manufactured by soviet ruled factories. Prizes are being offered for inventions adapting apparatus to the special needs of Russia. By inaugurating quantity production of radio the soviet government hopes to wipe out a considerable part of unemployment troubling the country.

Old Midwest Favorite, WLAG, to Be Heard Soon

Minneapolis, Minn, Sept. 27.—WLAG which closed down after the failure of Cutting & Washington, will be on the air again Wednesday, unless something comes up to interfere with the schedule arranged by its new owners, a Minneapolis flour concern. The wave length will be as formerly, 417 meters.

PARLEY TO COVER WIDE RANGE OF RADIO PROBLEMS

New York, Sept. 27.—[Special.]—The first session of the third national radio conference will be held in the Department of Commerce building at 8 p. m., Monday, Oct. 6, when Secretary Hoover will outline the aims and purposes of the conference.

This will be the third radio conference of national scope called by Mr. Hoover, the others having been held in February, 1922, and March, 1923.

The conference will consider and make recommendations regarding allocation of frequencies or wave lengths to the various radio services, giving particular attention to broadcasting. Some of the other problems will be those of inter-connection of stations by land wires, classification, power limitations and time divisions, the use of radio in marine service, amateur difficulties, and the general question of reduction of spark interference.

Collegeville, Minn., Joins List of Radiocast Centers

Washington, Sept. 28—[Special.]—This week's addition to radiocasts licensed by the department of commerce marks the advent of Collegeville, Minn., as a center of broadcasting activities, a class "A" station having been approved at St. John's university. It will be on 236 meters and have a power of fifty watts.

WBAX [254], Wilkebarre, Pa., has been changed from class "C" to class "A."

CHICAGO 'HAMS' WILL OPEN FIGHT ON INTERFERENCE

W. E. Schweitzer Named C. R. T. A. Head.

The Radio Traffic association, affiliated with the American Radio Relay league, has elected the following officers:

President, William E. Schweitzer, 9AAW, 9XBD; vice president, William Marquardt, 9DWX; treasurer, H. M. Marquish; secretary, Richard Schweitzer, 9AAW, 9XBD; sergeant at arms, C. E. Wright, 9DKK.

E. A. Beane, supervisor of radio for the Ninth district, spoke on new amateur regulations regarding short waves. He expressed the opinion that, with the assignment of frequencies, the amateur is the specialized expert of short wave communication.

Mr. Schweitzer will appoint a prominent local operator to assist in eliminating various forms of interference and to aid the broadcast listener in any reasonable manner. The appointment will be made before the next meeting.

While only licensed operators, or representatives of amateur stations may become members of the association, Mr. Schweitzer extended an invitation to all interested in radio communication to attend meetings, and made preparations to have numerous talks on radio given during the coming season. Mr. Schweitzer is desirous of seeing more "coöperation between the broadcast listener and the 'dyed-in-the-wool' transmitting 'ham,'" as he expressed it.

The next meeting of the Chicago Radio Traffic association will be held in the city hall, at 8 p. m. on Thursday, Oct. 2.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

"Smile While You Eat" Is Our Text for This Morning

By Mme. X.

ANIMALS feed; man eats. In this lies a profound distinction. The process of feeding has never been developed by the former into a function with social possibilities, as with us human beings. Perhaps few among us mortals, however, realize that under this form of entertainment lie certain health facts which, if rightly understood, would make a difference in this function and contribute to the health of those who as a habit take their meals together.

Dr. Frank C. Neff, a Kansas City children's specialist, urges his readers in an article in the August number of Hygeia to avoid finding fault with children or otherwise disturbing their appetites by family rows and so forth during meal hours.

"Constant reminders, well meant assistance, criticism, punishment, coercion—all are unnecessary, harmful, and without desired results. . . . Family differences at the table, fault-finding, criticism of the food, threats of punishing the child for infraction of the rules, are a few of the factors that destroy morale. An improvement in the child's appetite will result when these habits of environment are corrected."

All of which sounds like good sense and can even be applied to grownups. A little study will demonstrate that, as a friend of mine says, "a good joke has a dietetic value, an entertaining story will have marked and favorable action on the gastric juices, and the slogan 'Smile while you eat' will be of great value in stimulating proper digestive functions."

Developed to its ultimate possibilities, the theory may utterly change the attitude of hostesses toward possible guests. So-and-So may be a popular diner-out because his conversation promotes the free flow of gastric juices; such another, because his jokes have dietetic value; still a third, because his gentle manner soothes and allays dyspepsia. After all, perhaps the same guests will be asked as heretofore, but it will be for differently expressed reasons; for hostesses will continue to need gay, chatty, agreeable people who will entertain and divert the invited companies, to the advantage of the appetites and digestions of the latter.

All a Matter of Taste.

Carried still farther is the possibility that, if, as suggested, the motto "Laugh and grow fat" penetrates the intelligence of the careful, those folk to whom embonpoint may be anathema and a constant source of anxiety, they will choose their company and their guests among the gloomy and lugubrious, so as to avoid the fattening cachinations which some joyous ones among us promote. This will distribute the gay and gloomy according to the hygienic needs of the entertaining forces, and neither element will be left out in the round of social occasions. I would rather grow fat with the laughing crowd than cultivate the lean and emaciated with the lugubrious. But it is all a matter of taste—and tasting.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, who lived to a ripe old age, is said to have smiled often, but never to have laughed. And he lived and died spare and slender in figure. So it's evident, if one accepts this theory, that smiling is not so fattening, whatever laughter may be. Certain it is, to return to our sheep, that you are pretty sure to find in families where the dinner table conversation is full of bitterness and interlarded with criticism, complaints, and caustic comments there is a great deal of chronic dyspepsia and sluggish digestion. Of course, there will be disputatious ones who will claim that the former is the result of the latter, but it is a safe bet that it is possibly the other way around. So, cultivate the pleasantest possible conversational customs for your family meals. Besides promoting digestion, it will do much to promote family affection, of all things in life the most important and potent.

Danced with the Prince.

It is a pretty story, one on which the imagination likes to dwell, that of our tall, slender, and fair—very fair—Chicago girl and the young Baron Renfrew. All her life she will be pointed out as the Chicago girl who danced with the prince. I knew once, years and years ago, such a one, a woman, then no longer young, who was pointed out to my youthful eyes as the woman who had danced with the prince, meaning the grandfather of the present wandering scion of British royalty, when he came over to this country in—was it 1859 or 1860? She was an object of universal interest.

Apropos of this historic visit of two generations ago, Frank R. Chandler, in his coming work on Chicago, entitled "Che Cau Gou," includes a little story about the late Mrs. Hetty Green, of much renown in her later years as the penurious accumulator of millions. At the time of the incident which Mr. Chandler describes she was Miss Hetty Robinson, young, gay, and pretty. He writes:

"Miss Hetty Robinson's great social triumph, when only 18, was during a visit to New York on the occasion of a grand ball in the Academy of Music, given in honor of the Prince of Wales. The mothers and daughters of the aristocratic, newly rich Armstrong families, with their French maids and coquettish Paris costumes, were full of excited anticipations of the coming dance with royalty.

"She was on the favored dancing list. She had lain awake nights beforehand in planning how to make a decided impression on the young prince. For the occasion she appeared in a simple white Swiss muslin dress with pink sash and pink slippers on her feet and tiny gold drops in her ears, a charming picture of girlhood simplicity.

"She had heard the prince was much interested in the wonderful progress in America and especially about education among the common people, and so in the last figure of the first dance with him, in the grand right and left of the lancers, she plumped the question, 'O, your highness, do you know how the great masses of our people are being elevated?' The bugle rang out for the next quadrille, and off she was rushed to dance with a democratic colonel of militia, and for lack of opportunity no answer was then given.

"The prince's curiosity, however, became immensely aroused, and when the next dance was called the usher was asked to find Miss Robinson. Away back to the top of the dress circle she had sped purposely, and was discovered and, to the consternation of the dowagers and the competitive young damsels, she was called back to the dancing floor for her second dance with the prince; and when he pressed the subject foremost in his mind she laughingly responded, 'Go west to the Mississippi, go aboard a high pressure side wheel steamboat, and more than likely you will soon realize how in one tremendous explosion the masses are elevated!'

"By this quick-witted Yankee girl the plan succeeded, a decided impression on royalty was made, a practical joke perpetrated on a serious-minded Englishman of royal pedigree, and, furthermore, Hetty Robinson made a great point in exciting the envy of New York's Four Hundred."

The Girl from Chicago.

It was by no such crude and unconventional methods that our fair and lovely Chicago girl attracted the prince's attention at the Long Island ball a fortnight or so ago. She was a member of a house party, and her hostess came up to her after a gay evening and suggested that it was time to go home, the hour being something near 3 a. m.

"But I haven't met the prince," protested the Chicago girl. Unconsciously, in her disappointment she must have spoken rather loud, because her remark was overheard by Mr. Kruger, who, with his handsome wife, was much in the royal group. Mr. Kruger immediately went up to the young Baron Renfrew, who was dancing with another good looking young woman, and took him away on the spot, leaving her, the story runs, stranded in the middle of the ballroom. He hurried him over the shining parquet floor so fast that the baron nearly fell over an intervening chair, and presented him to the tall, slender blonde girl from Chicago. As he saved himself from falling over the obtruding piece of furniture, the baron caught the eye of the waiting maiden and both smiled, so when he was presented (or she to him) her first remark was with a continuing smile: "Chairs are so dangerous!"

Whereupon he asked her to dance and for the rest of her life she will be, as I have said above, pointed out as the girl who danced with the prince. She is quite a little taller than he, but he seemed to like looking up into that lovely (I will use that word again if I want to, as it's the one that best describes her) face with its shining eyes and halo of golden hair.

I have been pooh-poohing all the fuss made over this not extraordinarily brilliant or especially alluring young specimen of royalty, but when I heard that he had danced with Ginny I immediately found him wonderful and interesting, both as a mortal and a symbol. It is reported that he is everywhere that he goes enormously bored with the overwhelming, absorbing attentions of elderly ladies. They clamor to meet him, to sit by him, to dance with him, to talk to him; in short, to take entire charge of him. He has the not unnatural preference of the young for their kind, and sometimes makes frantic efforts to escape this all too ripe and luscious fruit.

It is not only in this country but in England, in India, and in other English speaking lands that these mature specimens of my sex seek his company. It is possibly one reason why he likes to take a trip every now and then over to France. The French women of the world have, I fancy, more savoir faire than to monopolise him. (Savoir faire,

MISS KATHARINE ADAMS.
[Raymor Photo.]

Three unusually attractive maids who are receiving their share of society's interest and attention are Miss Judith Boddie and Miss Katharine Adams, two of the most recent debutantes, and Miss Anna Marquis, whose engagement has been announced lately.

Miss Boddie was presented to society at an afternoon reception at the Indian Hill Country club on Saturday, Sept. 20, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Boddie of the North Shore hotel.

Announcement was made by Miss Marquis' father, Dr. George P. Marquis of 999 Lake Shore drive, of her engagement to Arthur Dixon. No wedding plans have been made public.

Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert C. Adams gave their daughter a coming out tea from 4 to 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon at their Winnetka residence, and there will also be a dinner dance for her at the Casino on the night before Christmas.

Protection, Aid, and Counsel for Women in Court

By Kate Webber.

SOME years ago a woman attorney in Chicago saw the need of a clearing house for women's court cases; and instead of dreaming about it she set about the creation of a practical association which would prove of real and lasting benefit to the cases which should stand in need of its assistance. The result was the formation of the Woman's Protective association.

That it has proved a real service toward the alleviation of woe among the women plaintiffs and defendants in the courts has been and constantly is proved by the increasing number of appeals and words of appreciation of aid given. The association also is recognized by the Chicago federation of women's organizations as a clearing house for all women's court cases.

Its object, as stated by the founder, Miss Nellie Carlin, and since adhered to by her successors, is to lend protection, aid, and friendly counsel to women in the courts gratuitously. The association strives to touch and know the real need of the women whose cases come into the courts and tries to create ways and means for happier and better environments for them.

The associaion is nonsectarian, is purely philanthropic, is a delegate body, and is supported by membership dues, benefits, and voluntary subscriptions. The workers are not paid and volunteers are always in attendance in the courts to render assistance wherever possible.

The follow-up work, as carried on by the Woman's Protective association, consists in safeguarding women and girls in their general welfare, reuniting families, and providing employment, safe homes, clothing, hospital care, financial and legal aid, aid for travelers, and summer outings. At Christmas time the members provide entertainment for hospital wards and assist at the Court of Domestic Relations, as well as providing gifts for women patients in hospitals and in the House of Correction. In some cases officers take worthy cases into their own homes as a temporary arrangement until better conditions can be provided.

The aim of the members is to maintain human and sincere interest, which is of fundamental importance in administering legal aid, as well as justice and truth and common sense.

Mrs. H. W. Hartough, president of the association, works indefatigably for the success of its undertakings, thereby carrying out the plans of its founder and her successor, Miss Margaret B. Dobyne, both of whom went far in creating real help for unfortunate women. Other officers are Mrs. Holger Pettersen, Mrs. A. H. Baker, and Mrs. Clarence L. Holtzman, vice presidents; Mrs. F. W. Masters, recording secretary; Mrs. A. H. McVeagh, treasurer; Mrs. A. L. McCarthy, corresponding secretary.

The Association of Chicago Bank Women, an organization comparatively young among women's clubs, will have a program of active work this week, when its members will provide entertainment for the wives of the delegates to the American Bankers' association, which convenes in Chicago. Miss Nina Carter, president, will have headquarters at the Congress hotel, and will be assisted by other officers of the association.

Mrs. Levering Moore is president of the United States Daughters of 1812, state of Illinois, which will give its autumn reception for members and guests on Thursday at the Sovereign hotel.

As president of the Woman's Protective association, Mrs. H. W. Hartough directs the work of the members, which consists of material aid and protection to women plaintiffs and defendants in Chicago courts. Further details of the association's object are given in a nearby column.

Mrs. Carroll D. Keeler of the Webster hotel is chairman of the box committee for a concert to be given on Oct. 7 at Orchestra hall for the benefit of St. Catherine's home for dependent girls. Renee Thornton and Ulysses Lappas will give the program, and the proceeds will go toward a building fund for the home, which has temporary quarters for the present.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The Chicago Woman's club will formally open the season next Wednesday afternoon, when a reception will be given from 3 until 5 o'clock in the club parlors to Mrs. Alfred Cogswell Tyler, president, and the following assisting officers: Mrs. George Packard, first vice president; Mrs. Frank Hugh Montgomery, second vice president; Mrs. Emile G. Levy, recording secretary, and Miss Katherine A. Jones, treasurer. The guest of honor will be Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, newly elected president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who has been an active member of this organization for many years, being elected to honorary membership last spring in recognition of her services to the club and to the community. On Friday morning at 11 o'clock in Recital hall an illustrated lecture on "Six Varieties of the Magic Carpet" will be given by Arthur Urbane Dilley. Following the lecture an informal get together luncheon will be given in the clubrooms for members only, to discuss club work and become better acquainted with the club organization. The better American speech committee will meet in the clubrooms on Saturday at 11 o'clock. All interested are invited. Speaker, Prof. John Scott of Northwestern university.

One of the most interesting and most important pieces of work being planned at present by the Illinois League of Women Voters and the Woman's City club is a pre-election citizenship school to be held at the city hall of Chicago, room 1006, on Oct. 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24. This school program is being prepared by Mrs. May Wood-Simons, chairman of citizenship training for the Illinois League of Women Voters and also chairman of municipal citizenship for the Woman's City club. Some of the topics to be presented at this school are "The Processes of Election," "County and City Government," "State and Federal Government," "Important Legislation, State and Federal," "Work of Political Parties, Platforms." The best speakers possible will give these courses—many of them teachers from Illinois, Chicago, Loyola, and Northwestern. Many women interested in citizenship will take a part in the work. The ultimate aim of this school is to interest and inform our women voters and to increase the voting percentage. During this school the noon recess from 12 o'clock noon to 1:30 p. m. will be divided into two sessions, which may be attended by employés of the city hall and county building and any others interested and not able to attend the morning and afternoon sessions. This school is open to the public and all interested are most cordially invited. There is no registration fee.

A meeting of the business and professional women's unit of the Woman's City club will be held tomorrow at 6:30 o'clock, when the second of a series of ten lessons in public speaking and citizenship will be given.

The Chicago Woman's Musical club will hold its first autumn meeting on Thursday at 2:45 in Recital hall. Elsie Thomas Barge has arranged the program.

A training course for political speakers will be held tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday at 10:30 and 1:30 o'clock at 233 North Michigan avenue under the auspices of the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club. Instruction in campaign issues, arrangement of material, practical hints, voice culture, and practice classes will be included. Distinguished speakers will be present at the sessions.

MRS. JOSEPH M. OWEN.

Three of the original members of the association, which was founded in 1885, are still active and will be guests at the banquet. They are Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, Miss Caroline Alden Huling, and Mrs. Charles H. Sergel. To be eligible for membership those desiring to join must be active in literary work. Clara Ingram Judson is president of the association.

CLUB ETHICS By Maude Swalm Evans

IT was the first meeting of the club year. The members who had arrived early were greeting one another joyously and with much conversation.

The new president drew the secretary aside.

"I'm going to call the meeting to order right on the dot—in just three minutes more."

"You won't have much of an audience if you do. Our members are always slow about assembling," the secretary demurred. "They seem to be enjoying themselves. Wouldn't it be better to wait a little while?"

"No, I don't think so. I've heard too much objection to our habit of starting late. Our members who live at a distance and those who have small children especially dislike it, for it means they must leave the meeting before it's over or arrive home late."

"Yes, that's so," agreed the secretary. "My family threatened to disown me because of it last year. You see, I have to stay until the end."

"It's easy to get into the habit of beginning late. First you wait five minutes, and then ten, and each succeeding time the members arrive a little later. They count on it. In fact, I've had some of them tell me that they stopped to do this or that because they knew the meeting would be half an hour late in starting. Wasn't it always? I believe the members will be on time if they know we are going to start on time, even if there is only a handful present. I'm going to try it, anyway."

The minute hand pointed to 2—the president's gavel descended.

"The meeting will please come to order," she said.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

dear, means knowledge and understanding of the world and a lot of other things much too complicated to express in two English words.)

Our old and unforgotten friends, Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams, formerly of Chicago, now of Biarritz, France, have had the pleasure of entertaining this popular prince at their villa near this well known seashore resort. He spent a couple of days with them in this delightful place, which is situated on the rocky heights overlooking the Bay of Biscay, with the steep and bleak Pyrenees towering on three sides and Spain just over the rim of the sky.

A Personage Over There.

Mrs. John Borden and her two young daughters returned to Chicago last Wednesday after a summer in England and France. In London Mrs. Borden's sister-in-law introduced her to most of the celebrities and entertaining folk of the great world of that most brilliant of capitals, wherein Mrs. Spears has the entrée. She, Mrs. Spears, is a personage over there, and her gifts as a writer are accorded much attention and commendation. She is returning to Chicago on Oct. 3, or thereabouts. She and her husband, Gen. Louis Spears, are traveling in the west. They were both enthusiastic about the strange and fervid beauties of the Grand cañon and other Arizona specialties.

Either on their way eastward or after they have been here a few days they will make a visit to John Borden's big stock farm in Mississippi, where he grows the finest brand of shorthorn cattle in the country. They return to England before long, where Mrs. Spears will be on hand when her next novel makes its appearance. "Three Pilgrims and a Tinker" is its name, and a quite intriguing one, too, I think, and it deals with people on the English Midlands. If it touches her former story, "Jane—Our Stranger," in power and merit, it will be one of the topliners of the season. It is to be hoped that this time her countrymen will not allow foreigners to discover the remarkable talents of this daughter of Chicago. The immediate predecessor of the coming novel has been accorded a recognition in England and France far beyond that given any American writer now living except Mrs. Edith Wharton and Anne Douglas Sedgwick. Yet in this country neither the critics nor the reading public gave it much attention when it appeared a year or so ago.

Mrs. Spears is so much in demand with the English public that she has more requests for contributions from newspapers, periodicals, and publishers than she can possibly fill if she were to write twenty-four hours a day. As it is, she does most of her work in the late hours of the night, or early hours of the day, according as one reckons time. She likes the uninterrupted silence of that period of the twenty-four hours when most of her kind are sleeping and life seems to hold its breath waiting for something to come out of the darkness. It is a fine interval for genuine work. Unhampered by things seen and heard, the brain creates its own universe and peoples it with brilliant phantoms who, in time, become as substantial as any contemporaries.

Flutter of Wings.

The tendency of Chicago people to roam is growing on them. It is becoming a positive obsession with many of them. The first question asked of most of us is:

"When are you moving to town?" or "Where are you going this winter?"

If two or more are gathered together the talk is sure to develop sooner or later into a discussion as to which route is the best to reach a certain point; which line of steamers gives you most for your money; which country offers the most excitement consistent with comfort, how most quickly and easily to meet other groups of travelers; what kind of clothes one should take if going on a trip that includes the South Sea islands, the Gobi desert, and Kamchatka, or that took in the Upper Nile, Scotland, and the Riviera. In short, Sir John Mandeville would feel like an unmitigated piker among the people with whom this column has lately been thrown (throwing a column is not so herculean as it sounds).

With the John McCutcheons and the Barney Goodspeeds headed for the Solomon islands, Thibetan Lamasaries, and the lairs of Chinese bandits; with the Charles H. Hamills and Tiffany Blakes debating as to whether next winter to meet at the ninth or tenth cataract on Cleopatra's favorite water highway; with the rendesvous in Chicago of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's increasing China bound cortège, and the many comments it and she excite as to what part they will play in the lively little war now going on in the celestial kingdom; with the Hugh J. McBirneys arranging to meet their friends on the Riviera, while Mrs. Leverett Thompson and her daughter, Miss Laura Thompson, are making plans for taking an apartment in Paris for the winter, with all these plans and planners in the immediate foreground, the present scribe feels as if she were standing on a quicksand of uncertainties and possibilities that would soon engulf her contemporaries or herself.

It is just the same flutter of wings that is heard in every grove and meadow these autumn days, as our feathered friends set forth for other climes. When they are all gone we shall still have with us the industrious sparrow and a few robins and the chirping and commotion will die away. So we human sparrows and robins will soon settle down to our winter routine in Chicago. (I wonder which of these worthy but unenterprising birds I am? I suspect that I am the humdrum, self-supporting, noisy little sparrow.)

Digging on the Nile.

"If we can't explore the remote regions of this interesting globe of ours we can at least meet and talk with other more fortunate mortals who are doing so. Last week it was my good fortune to get a glimpse of Thomas Whittemore, who is well known hereabouts because of various visits to Chicago, where he has secured much support for his work among Russians in and out of Russia. Mr. Whittemore is, however, not merely a philanthropist; he is much more an archeologist than anything else. Last winter he spent some months with an exploring expedition in Egypt. He is rejoining this undertaking in the near future.

The party is digging out of the sands of time and the Upper Nile region one of the palaces of Tutankamen. It is turning out to be one of the most important of recent discoveries in this line. It is a nearly perfect example of early Egyptian architecture, and has been buried over 3,000 years. It lies 150 miles or so south of Thebes and was built of sun baked bricks made of mud from the Nile. The frescoes on ceilings and walls are emerging bright and smiling from their long darkness.

It seems that when old Tut betook himself to Thebes his slaves and house servants simply shut up this deserted residence by taking out the furniture and boarding up the windows and doors, much as we do today when we abandon a no longer desired house. The sands of old Egypt and still older time blew over it and buried it. The weight of them broke some of the roofs and ceilings, sending them downward to the floor, but not otherwise hurting their material, so that the mural decorations and designs are easily reassembled and the bare bones of the life of that time can be studied by scholars. It is a most fascinating profession, that of archeologist. I can imagine nothing more thrilling than to be present at the opening of some ancient tomb, one that has been closed since before the era of the Ptolmies, or to look on the resurrection of some old temple or dwelling. It is the gorgeous background of the interminable and unfathomable past which makes the present so interesting and wonderful. Set against that, we see our successes and failures, our achievements and our defeats, in their true relation to each other and to us.

Other Chicagoites who will also be on the Nile this winter are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Bartlett and Mrs. Bartlett's father, Hugh T. Birch. They have taken a houseboat for two months and will entertain various batches of friends with trips up and down that historic old stream. It sounds like a pleasant prospect.

The First Hunt.

These autumn days are among the most delicious furnished by the weather man in this part of the land. The maples are getting splashed with scarlet and yellow. The oaks are turning a more dignified set of colors, though some of them are rioting a little. The woodbine and Japanese ivy are making walls and trees look as if the man with the red paint had tipped his pot over from the top of a high ladder.

The tri-weekly hunt at Lake Forest occupies the attention of the increasing number of equestrians out there. The first hunt last week saw some rather nasty looking spills, but apparently none that caused permanent damage. That plucky and brilliant young horseback rider, Miss Janet Chase, took a header from her steed when he tripped at a jump, and tipped off. A horse would have to shake her hard to unhorse Miss Janet. This one did, but he couldn't get rid of her, for she jumped up and caught her mount before he could escape from the field, and mounted as blithely as if she were stepping to the saddle from a mounting block. She and her sister, Miss Libby Chase, are among the most fearless and experienced of the north shore riders.

It's a good combination, fearlessness and experience. To be fearless without experience is to court disaster. To be experienced and yet fearful is to go at a jog trot through life.

ART AND ARTISTS

Force and Power in Blunt Genius of Swiss Artist

By Eleanor Jewett.

IN the Birch-Bartlett collection of modern European paintings there are, as has been mentioned before, two examples of the genius of the Swiss artist Ferdinand Hodler. It is not a genius that leaps to the eye. Its obviousness prevents that. It is broad painting with a lavish use of pigment and a careless molding of contours. It is brisk, blunt, abrupt, almost vulgar. There are no nuances, no subtleties to quicken your fancy. Notwithstanding, the veracities of Hodler are worth to the average layman a hundred of the atrocities of Matisse—not to go too far away to find our foil.

The great thing to remember in approaching Hodler is not to approach too closely. The greatness of his talent shines through his canvas as long as we refrain from familiarity. His lavish use of color superimposed is displeasing, childish, and grotesque until the proper perspective throws it into virile meaning. Once you grasp the force and power of his blunt treatment you are won to instant acknowledgment of his genius.

The portrait of the "Sculptor, James Vibert," is an astoundingly lifelike piece of work. Upon massive shoulders blocked out in bullish magnitude, their beauty of line lost under the clumsy folds of an illy cut coat, rests the impressive head, neckless apparently, for where neck and chest should be a torrent of square grown beard usurps their priority. The face is remarkable. The eyes and forehead are powerful and awake. There is a brain behind that bulwark of brow, and the keen edge of its comprehension is read into the splendid front that shelters the conscious glance beneath it.

It is seldom that as significant a portrait as this by Hodler is seen. Many portraits are distinguished; more are pleasing; the majority are interesting; a few are weak—but it is not with these we are concerned. Rank the best of the distinguished, pleasing, and interesting portraits by the side of "Sculptor, James Vibert"—give Hodler his distance and take your mind from petty details—there will be but a scanty group, I dare to wager, which will withstand the comparison and but a scantier that will lead the Vibert portrait.

The second canvas by Hodler, the "Head of a Soldier," is an equally lifelike piece of characterization. For it, too, the proper perspective must first be gained. Then only will the full effect of that magnificent head, thrown back in roaring abandon, be yours. There is power behind every one of the brush strokes that made that head possible. In fact, a chant of power sweeps through both of these examples of Swiss painting. That idea flashes again and again to the fore in any thoughtful consideration of these canvases. The clearest criticism of Hodler's painting might be summed up in a sentence. It is neither a polite sentence nor one fit to be spoken in the ears of polite society, but it caps his genius as neatly as a Shakespearean verse matches the passion of a Capulet's love.

"Finesse be damned, but paint like the devil."

There you have Ferdinand Hodler, though, were you of the mind, you might translate devil to Jove, for there is more than a touch of Godlike, first day creative power in the force that hurls his portraits into being.

The rest of this Birch-Bartlett collection is not particularly instructive nor inspiring. With the several extraordinary Matisse grotesqueries we are already familiar through an exhibit last fall of the same paintings. A slight, colorless woman, significant only because of the unchanging, unshaded colorlessness that pervades herself and her entire setting, is seen in "Woman with Book" by Pruna.

Two beautiful paintings are found in "Paris Street Scene" and "Street," both by Utrillo. The first is a charming rendering of the utter desolate chill that descends upon Paris with the autumn days. Rain is in the air. Mists threaten the old and delicately faded buildings. The square is empty. Merely the charm of Paris dwells and rules there, a charm that the painter has had the sensitiveness of soul to savor and the delicateness of touch to transfer to his palette.

The second picture, "Street," is exquisite. It is a beautiful handling of paint. Blues and grays, value—a hundred adjectives of praise leap to the lips as one drinks in the loveliness of the tranquil scene.

A dignified, sober, scientific painting is seen in "L'Institut de France, Paris," by Auguste Herbin. The Seurat canvas, a huge affair, "A Sunday on La Grande Jatte," is interesting as exemplifying one method of getting results in paint and also for bringing to life men and women of a half century or more ago. Women who wore bustles, women who preened themselves in that despised era when hips were fashionable, and men in tight-buttoned coats, tight trousers, and top hats, such a throng walks and enjoys itself in Seurat's Sunday outing, and such a throng amuses us now from the difference that exists between it and a modern crowd of Sunday pleasure seekers.

Paintings by William V. Cahill have supplanted the Joseph P. Birren exhibit in another of the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The Cahill paintings lack the spring and youth and freshness of the Birren landscapes, but they possess a peculiar modified charm that is distinctive. A phrase "radiant painting" seems to settle them in their niche. Light apparently shines through the pigment. The most amusing of the paintings is a clever dining room scene, "Table d'Hote," where a mirror is brought into service and the eyes of a young man twinkle with comprehending glee as the artist fixes him and his young companion upon canvas.

The Viennese school children's exhibit grows each day in interest. So exhaustive of the arts is this exhibit that it is difficult to pin one's self down to any portion of it. The wood carving, the pottery, the weaving, as well as the sculpture, paintings, and drawings, all demand appreciative comment. Either soldiers or games seem the most popular subjects for the paintings. Soldiers are also ably depicted in many of the carvings. A great many of the drawings, undoubtedly undertaken as illustrations for various fairy tales, are charming.

In one we seem to recognize our Alice of Wonderland adventure. The little girl, grown as tall as the forest trees, stands dazed in a glen while a chattering bird scolds her sharply for having been so silly as to have grown so tall. In another, a boy runs from an agitated trio of goats, a young and bleating kid clutched to his bosom. A third shows us the interior of a peasant cottage and an old woman who, a nursing bottle in hand, is trying hard to mother some nine or ten tiny, squealing pigs. Three of the little beasts are on the floor, a fourth is sucking from the bottle in her lap, and the rest are jostling themselves in a long tin tub until their turn for dinner shall arrive.

Undoubtedly the loveliest painting is the one of the rabbits in the garden. Were these paintings for sale, I believe several thousand dollars have already been offered for this special picture.

Not to be behind the times, the children offer, too, for your approval, a room that gives you your fill of cubism, futurism, and all the other isms, both rampant and dead. They, these examples of what might be art but is not, are amusing, but fail to carry conviction. In one way they are remarkable. The carvings are, to my mind, more artistic than the drawings or paintings.

This year the visiting instructor to the Art institute school will be Leon Kroll. Mr. Kroll is a native of New York City. He has won numerous important prizes, two of them—the Logan prize in 1919 and the Art institute purchase prize in the same year—having been awarded him in exhibitions at the Art institute. He has two paintings in the institute permanent collection: "Leo Ornstein at the Piano" and "North River Front."

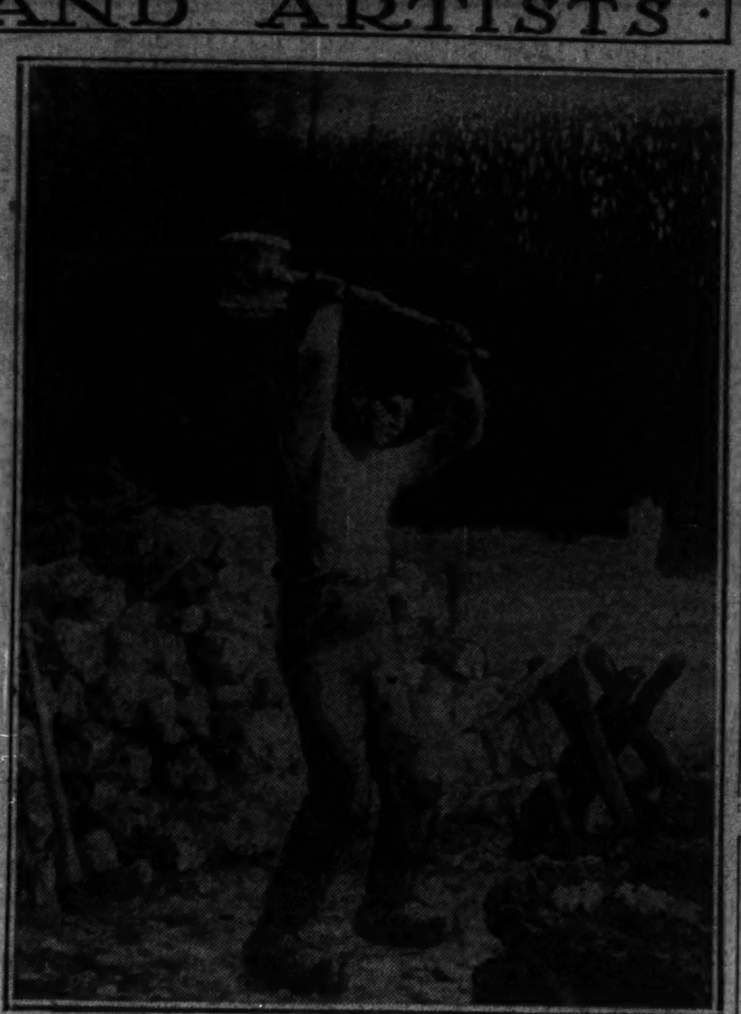
The first exhibition of the year at the Palette and Chisel club will open on Wednesday. The club announces it as "The Sixth Annual Bidding Sale of Little Pictures." In the past this exhibition has been exceedingly good. There is no reason to doubt its running true to form this year.



"The Wood Splitter," by Millet, one of the famous paintings in the Potter Palmer collection of celebrated paintings, a permanent gift to the Art institute. The gallery where this collection is hung has recently been redecorated. The paintings show now to better advantage than formerly. A visit once or twice to the permanent galleries of the museum gives the visitor a comfortable sense of the beauties and wonders that our institute will always own. The Potter Palmer collection is not the least of these.

Mineral Oil Users Try This!

The Scientific Triumph of Milk of Magnesia and Pure Mineral Oil Combined

Pure mineral oil is certainly the finest intestinal lubricant. But pure mineral oil alone cannot remove the deep-seated causes of intestinal poison and acid (sour) stomach.

Science has now discovered the ideal combination of lubricant and antacid—Mineral Oil and Milk of Magnesia—Haley's M-O.

The sweet, soothing milk of magnesia in Haley's M-O effectively neutralizes and counteracts the acids that cause heartburn, gas and belching, black spots dancing before the eyes. It goes straight and deep to the lower bowel, eliminating the poison. Then the pure mineral oil helps Nature carry them off.

Get a bottle of Haley's M-O today and discover for yourself the extra values of this perfect emulsion. Pleasant to take; both young and old like it. Your druggist most likely has Haley's M-O. If he hasn't we will supply it by mail postpaid on receipt of price. Trial size, 35c; family size, $1.00. The Haley M-O Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

EARN $20 TO $45 A WEEK EXTRA

WITHOUT INTERFERING IN ANY WAY WITH YOUR PRESENT JOB.

That's my proposition. It's simple. Just take one evening a week, not over a couple of hours, and talk to neighbors, friends and acquaintances. They're bound to be interested—for you will be telling them about something that will make them money, too.

One sale a week will make you $20—just one sale, mind you. There's no canvassing, no house to house work, just talking to people you know.

I will tell the whole story on Tuesday evening, Sept. 30, at 7:30. The meeting will last 1 hour. In that time I will explain how other men and women, now busy daytimes, are using their evenings to get fur coats, automobiles, new clothes, furniture, radio outfits, etc.

Don't come to my meeting unless you mean business—unless you enjoy meeting people—unless you want more money—unless you have good personality and think you can persuade people to pay out a little money each month for something that will increase (and maybe double) in value in five years.

Telephone me whether you're coming. Tear this advertisement out NOW and call me up the first thing Monday morning and tell me to save a chair for you. The talk is FREE and listening puts you under no obligation.

Telephone me personally.

A large manufacturing concern backed by 27 years' experience, with over a million dollar rating, has been adding to its sales force, as business justified it, right now wants two heavy hitting, high powered salesmen who are looking for a permanent position where their efforts bring them a good round sum of money. By this we mean men who can earn $1,000 a month and keep their feet on the ground. Some of our men were of characters who seldom read ads for new connections and others never had any selling experience before joining us. Our men are making commissions from $500 to $1,200 per month, and some even more. Our device is of such character that it has an irresistible appeal to merchants. It is an unfailing profit maker and that is the first essential to the success of any business. An average of 25% of our business is done of leads furnished the men in the field from our national advertising. We want men above average ability, clean records, who are able to talk convincingly and forget the 8 hour day when they are out on the firing line. We will train you if we accept you and guarantee you commissions on all sales in your territory, whether you make the deals or not. If you can qualify see MR. CASEY, Brevoort Hotel, Monday, 10-12 and 2-4, or phone for appointment.

EARN $20 TO $45 A WEEK EXTRA

WITHOUT INTERFERING IN ANY WAY WITH YOUR PRESENT JOB!

That's my proposition. It's simple. Just take one evening a week, not over a couple of hours, and talk to neighbors, friends and acquaintances. They're bound to be interested—for you will be telling them about something that will make them money, too.

One sale a week will make you $20—just one sale, mind you. There's no canvassing, no house to house work. Just talking to people you know.

I will tell the whole story on Tuesday evening, Sept. 30, at 7:30. The meeting will last 1 hour. In that time I will explain how other men and women, now busy daytimes, are using their evenings to get fur coats, automobiles, new clothes, furniture, radio outfits, etc.

Don't come to my meeting unless you mean business—unless you enjoy meeting people—unless you want more money—unless you have good personality and think you can persuade people to pay out a little money each month for something that will increase (and maybe double) in value in five years.

Telephone me whether you are coming. Tear this advertisement out NOW and call me up the first thing Monday morning and tell me to save a chair for you. The talk is FREE and listening puts you under no obligation.

Telephone me personally.

WHY IS IT

that people will rent an apartm't for $200 per month—sometimes never realizing that in five years they have actually spent $12,000 for the privilege of making the landlord wealthy?

We can sell you that same apartment on reasonable terms where over a period of five years your net cost to live there is only $4,336—thereby saving $7,464 in five years. Do you know an easier way to save $7,464?

The Very Reason

over 80% of the people in Chicago pay rent is because they have never taken the time or trouble to investigate the advantages of co-operative ownership.

DEERFIELD HEIGHTS.

See this beautiful property, covered with forest trees; sites 100x200 ft. each, with 50 ft. building line and other restrictions that will make this development one of the largest and most attractive we have ever attempted. The improvements include sewer, water, sidewalk, reinforced concrete pavement; gas, electricity, telephone, and ornamental lighting posts, which are already in and paid for. The McGuire & Orr standard of developing and selling high class residential property will be as rigidly enforced in "Deerfield Heights" as in any of our North Shore developments; just a few sites in the first unit remain which will be sold to "approved purchasers" at our opening price of $4,000 each. Those who have purchased are from Rogers Park, Evanston, Wilmette, Winnetka, Hubbard Woods, and Glencoe, and in nearly every instance purchasers plan to build within one year. REAL ESTATE NEWS

FALLING RENTS BRING WARNING FROM BOND FIRM

Straus Urges 6 Months' Building Slowup.

BY AL CHASE.

S. J. T. STRAUS.

Brakes on apartment house building in Chicago for a period of six months is "urged" by S. J. T. Straus, senior vice president of S. W. Straus & Co., leading mortgage bankers in this country, in a statement he issued last night. He declared that if a more cautious and conservative attitude isn't taken there is "a real danger of overbuilding in apartment houses and apartment hotels."

The word "danger," we hasten to add, refers to landlords. Tenants needn't shiver and shake—unless it be with laughter—over the predicament Mr. Straus says the owners are in. For the Straus official admits that already parts of Chicago are overbuilt and that rents are coming down, in the shape of honest to goodness reductions as well as liberal concessions in leases.

Admission Is Significant.

In view of the fact that most big bond house officials have, ever since the war, kept continually informing the public that there was a building shortage, this statement by Mr. Straus is significant. It's the first official admission that Chicago has caught up with the old wartime apartment shortage.

The public, of course, has known for a long time that there were plenty of flats, even if landlords didn't like to admit it openly. Rents have been slipping quietly, and those with nerve enough usually get big concessions, amounting to the same as much lower rents.

Tells Landlords to Be Cautious.

"There is need for caution in the situation," said Mr. Straus. "It should be borne in mind that we had an uninterrupted period of activity in the building industry in this city during the last few years and we've been rapidly making up the shortage that existed as a result of the cessation in the building program during the war period.

"I believe that the time has come when caution and careful judgment must be exercised in considering prospective building projects and that they should be very carefully scrutinized and their necessity thoroughly determined before they are undertaken.

Says Rents Are Being Cut.

"There are certain sections of the city, most especially the north shore and south shore districts, which, due to the large number of apartments recently constructed and those still under construction, have a very liberal supply of flats. This necessarily 'bears' the market for these districts, leading to rent reductions and to liberal concessions on one and two year leases."

Now, altogether, three loud sobs for the landlords!

Mr. Straus says his firm already has made its loaning policy still more conservative than heretofore, but adds that money is still plentiful for commercial hotel and industrial projects.

John Marshall Law School Announces Realty Course

The John Marshall Law school announces a course in real estate and business law. It will cover particularly real estate law, conveyancing, examination of abstracts of title and closing real estate deals. The work is given by the regular members of the faculty, assisted by examiners from the Chicago Title and Trust company.

METROPOLITAN LIFE LEASE.

The entire second floor of the Depositors' State bank building at the southeast corner of 47th and South Ashland has been leased for five years to the Metropolitan Life Insurance company at $6,000 annually. The bank recently sold its old bank building at 4633 South Ashland to Helen Schymanski for $130,000.

CHAIN STORE MAN LEASES SHOP.

L. A. Olmstead, operating a chain of sporting goods stores known as "The Vim," has leased the shop at 4117 West Madison from Oct. 1 from S. Lawrence. This will be Mr. Olmstead's sixth Chicago store and No. 16 in his chain. A. E. Ohlsen of Hooker & Slosson, and M. J. Connery were brokers.

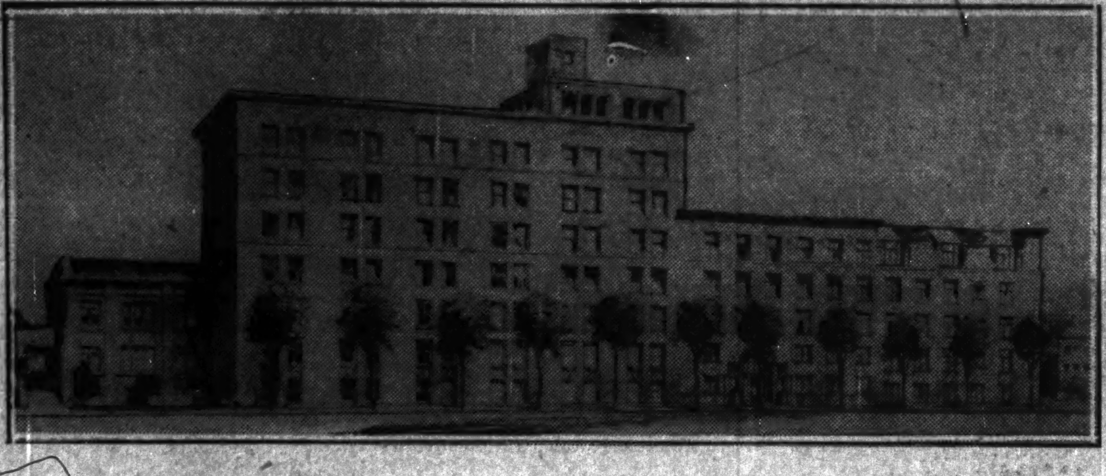
Grant Hospital and $500,000 Addition



Above is Grant hospital and the proposed seven story addition, plans for which are now being completed by Richard E. Schmidt, Garden & Martin. It will have a frontage of 112 feet on Grant place. It will adjoin the present hospital, shown on the reader's right, and connect with the Uihlein Memorial laboratory, the two story building on the left. The new section will contain a larger X-ray laboratory, offices, consultation rooms, extension of obstetrical department and 154 patients' rooms. There'll be a roof solarium and roof garden. The building, including alterations in boiler house, will cost $500,000. This is exclusive of furnishings and cost of land.

A replica of the Piedmont hills section of Oakland, Cal., is contemplated by Lawrence P. Romano & Co., in the forty-two acres just purchased from J. F. Gillen, 1200 feet west of the Ravinia station.

Winding roads will be laid out, a playground established for children and rigid restrictions enforced in the construction of residences.

The Romano concern, formerly known as the North Suburban Realty company, has established departments of building and architecture to aid buyers in developing their homesites. The property is near the Northmoor Country club.

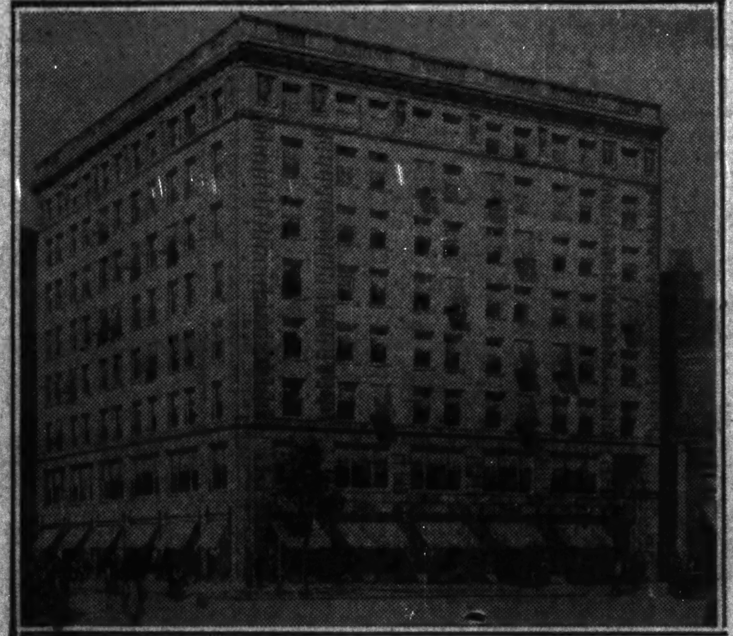
New Design for Michigan-Ohio Building



Work will start this week on the above eight story building at the northwest corner of Upper Michigan avenue and Ohio street by the John R. Thompson company. On Jan. 6 in this department we printed a picture of a proposed six story building on this corner. Yesterday Mr. Thompson leased the property at 114-116 East Ohio, 40x100, from Joseph H. Defrees for ninety-nine years at an annual net rental of $8,000. It was made on a valuation of $160,000 on a 5 per cent basis, or equivalent to $40 per square foot and $4,000 a front foot. Charles J. McKenna was broker for the lessee and Hedberg & Bistor for the lessor.

With this additional property Mr. Thompson has a frontage of 100 feet on Boul Mich and 115 on Ohio. He had Alfred S. Alschuler draw new plans for a building two stories taller than originally planned and much more attractive architecturally. It'll be of Bedford stone instead of terra cotta and with a much more dignified exterior.

There'll be a typical Thompson white tiled armchair rapid fire food emporium on the corner. Three other stores will face the boulevard. Shops will occupy the second floor and offices the upper six stories, with the top floor arranged for studios and architects' offices with skylights. According to Mr. McKenna, the building will be completed by May 1.

OLD WEST SIDE CHURCH BOUGHT FOR $31,000

One of the west side's famous old church edifices, the building at 3212 West Monroe, at one time occupied by a Unitarian congregation, was bought yesterday by the Metropolitan Church of Christ for $31,000. John J. O'Malley was seller. Charles H. Jackson was attorney.

According to the Rev. Perry Updike, pastor of the Metropolitan church, the old stone edifice will be completely rejuvenated. The exterior will be cleaned with sand blast and the interior remodeled and redecorated. It will be dedicated and occupied by the new owners on Thanksgiving day.

The Metropolitan, which is a branch of the Christian denomination, now holds services in St. Paul's Episcopal church, which was Bishop Fallow's pastorate. It formerly used to worship at the People's institute at Van Buren and Leavitt, which it sold some time ago.

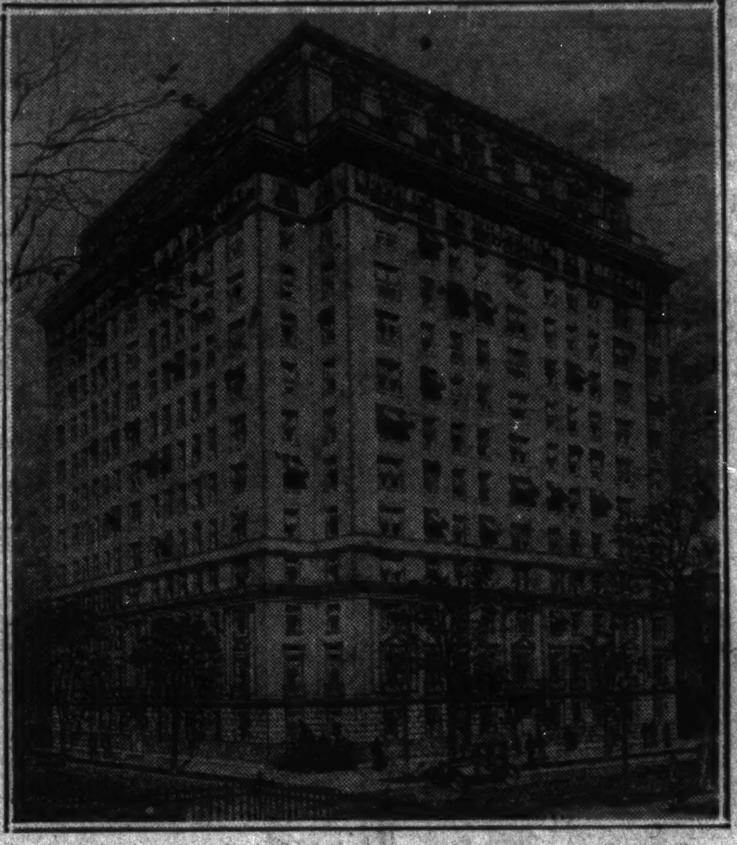
Booklet Tells of Radio in Apartment Buildings

What is claimed to be the first publication in Chicago relating to the installation of radio equipment in apartment buildings is announced by Albert W. Swayne, in the Wrigley building. The rules and regulations in the booklet are aimed to insure to individual families the best results from their radio outfits and at the same time to protect the building from a confusion of aerials. Free copies can be obtained from Mr. Swayne.

YELLOW CAB LEASE.

The Yellow Cab company has leased for twenty years the two story garage now being erected for them by Sears, Roebuck & Co. at the northwest corner of Des Plaines and Fulton at a term rental of $600,000. Holton Seelye & Co., engineers, designed it and are erecting it. Alex Friend & Co. and the Kesner Realty company were brokers.

Bostonian's Picture of Chicago Project



This picture needs an explanation more detailed than merely a recital of the kind of brick used, etc. Last March we told in this department that work had started on the above $2,500,000 fourteen story apartment building at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Barry avenue. Since then we've spent approximately $2,500,000 in phone calls trying to get the picture.

Mr. Thomas D. Collins, president of the Barry Apartment Building corporation, scorning F. W. Fitzpatrick, Charles Morgan, Allen Weary, and other capable and fast Chicago artists, engaged a Boston artist. That he is capable is evidenced from the unusually beautiful drawing he made. But Boston is not the fastest city in the world, and the picture is now, six months after building operations started, shown to an impatient world for the first time.

This explains why we're running a picture of a building which is so well under way. Twenty-five of the sixty-seven apartments are to be sold on a coöperative basis, the balance to be rented. There'll be four eight room duplex flats and two nine rooms in the two story setback at the top. The nines will have double story living rooms. All flats will have honest-to-goodness fireplaces. Mr. Collins says completion date will be March 1. S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a $1,800,000 loan. Robert S. De Golyer is architect. His plans call for the same quality of brick on all four sides.

Mark Levy to Tell 'Y' Class About Commercial Renting

MARK LEVY.
[Walinger Photo.]

Mark Levy, senior partner of Mark Levy & Brother, will lecture on "Commercial Renting" next Tuesday evening before the real estate class of the Central Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce. John P. Hooker of Hooker & Slosson spoke last Tuesday on "History and Elements of Real Estate Values" before the regular weekly class in real estate. This course is conducted by the Chicago Real Estate board in conjunction with the Central Y. M. C. A.

Catherine Warring Plans New Loop Fountain Lunch

Catherine Warring, who has operated a fountain and candy stand in the lobby of the Peoples Gas building for seventeen years, has rented the store at 331 West Monroe, for eight years and three months from Oct. 1, at a term rental of $22,000 and will occupy it with a fountain lunch. The Brownlee Realty company was broker.

BUYS LA SALLE RESIDENCES.

Joseph K. Narat has bought the two residences at 1206-08 North La Salle from the La Salle Avenue Baptist church for $32,000, through Prussing & Co. The property has a frontage of forty-two feet.

BUYS OIL STATION SITE.

The Standard Oil company has bought the southwest corner of North and Ridgeway avenues, 48x136, from Johann J. Bremin for an indicated $15,000.

Walgreen Drug to Open 53d Store on Roosevelt Road

The Walgreen Drug company has leased the corner store in the new Shetnitz building now nearing completion at the northwest corner of Roosevelt road and St. Louis avenue for ten years at approximately $4,800 annually. It will open its fifty-third store there within a month.

CATHOLIC BISHOP BUYS SCHOOL SITE.

The Catholic bishop of Chicago has bought 100x175 on the north side of Madison, 275 feet east of Kostner, from Michael J. O'Brien, for $50,000. A two story addition to St. Mel's parochial school, to accommodate 700 pupils, will be built in a year or so.

PLANS $50,000 RESIDENCE ON WISCONSIN LINE

A. M. Sick, former mayor of Park Ridge and an official of the Bunting Printing company of Waukegan, has bought the farthest north lot in Leslie A. Needham's Oakshore subdivision, just east of Winthrop Harbor, and will start work at once on a $50,000 residence.

The lot fronts west on Oakshore drive and goes back 359 feet to the lake. The north boundary of his lot is only forty-seven feet from the Wisconsin-Illinois state line. Mr. Sick now lives in Waukegan, but will make Oakshore his year round residence.

Mr. Needham states that his "Chi-nois golf course is just about ready to play on." The links occupy the southern part of the subdivision.

FIFIELD & STEVENSON PLAN NEW BOUL MICH SHOP IN WRIGLEY BLDG.

Fifield & Stevenson, who have had a men's wear shop in the McCormick building for twelve years, yesterday signed a lease for 1,616 square feet at the northwest corner of the main floor of the north section of the Wrigley building for ten years, through Winston & Co. They will open a branch shop about Nov. 1.

Says Mr. Fifield: "The room will savor more of the clubroom than the shop."

Says Gilbert Scribner of Winston & Co.: "This is the last available space on the store floor of the two sections of the Wrigley building."

Campaigning

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE crowded enough argument for a whole campaign into the speech in which he accepted the Republican nomination for the presidency. President Coolidge has delegated the oratorical fireworks of his fight to his running mate, Gen. Dawes. Meantime America enjoys a rare spectacle—a President sticking to his job of running the nation in the midst of a bitter campaign to unseat him.

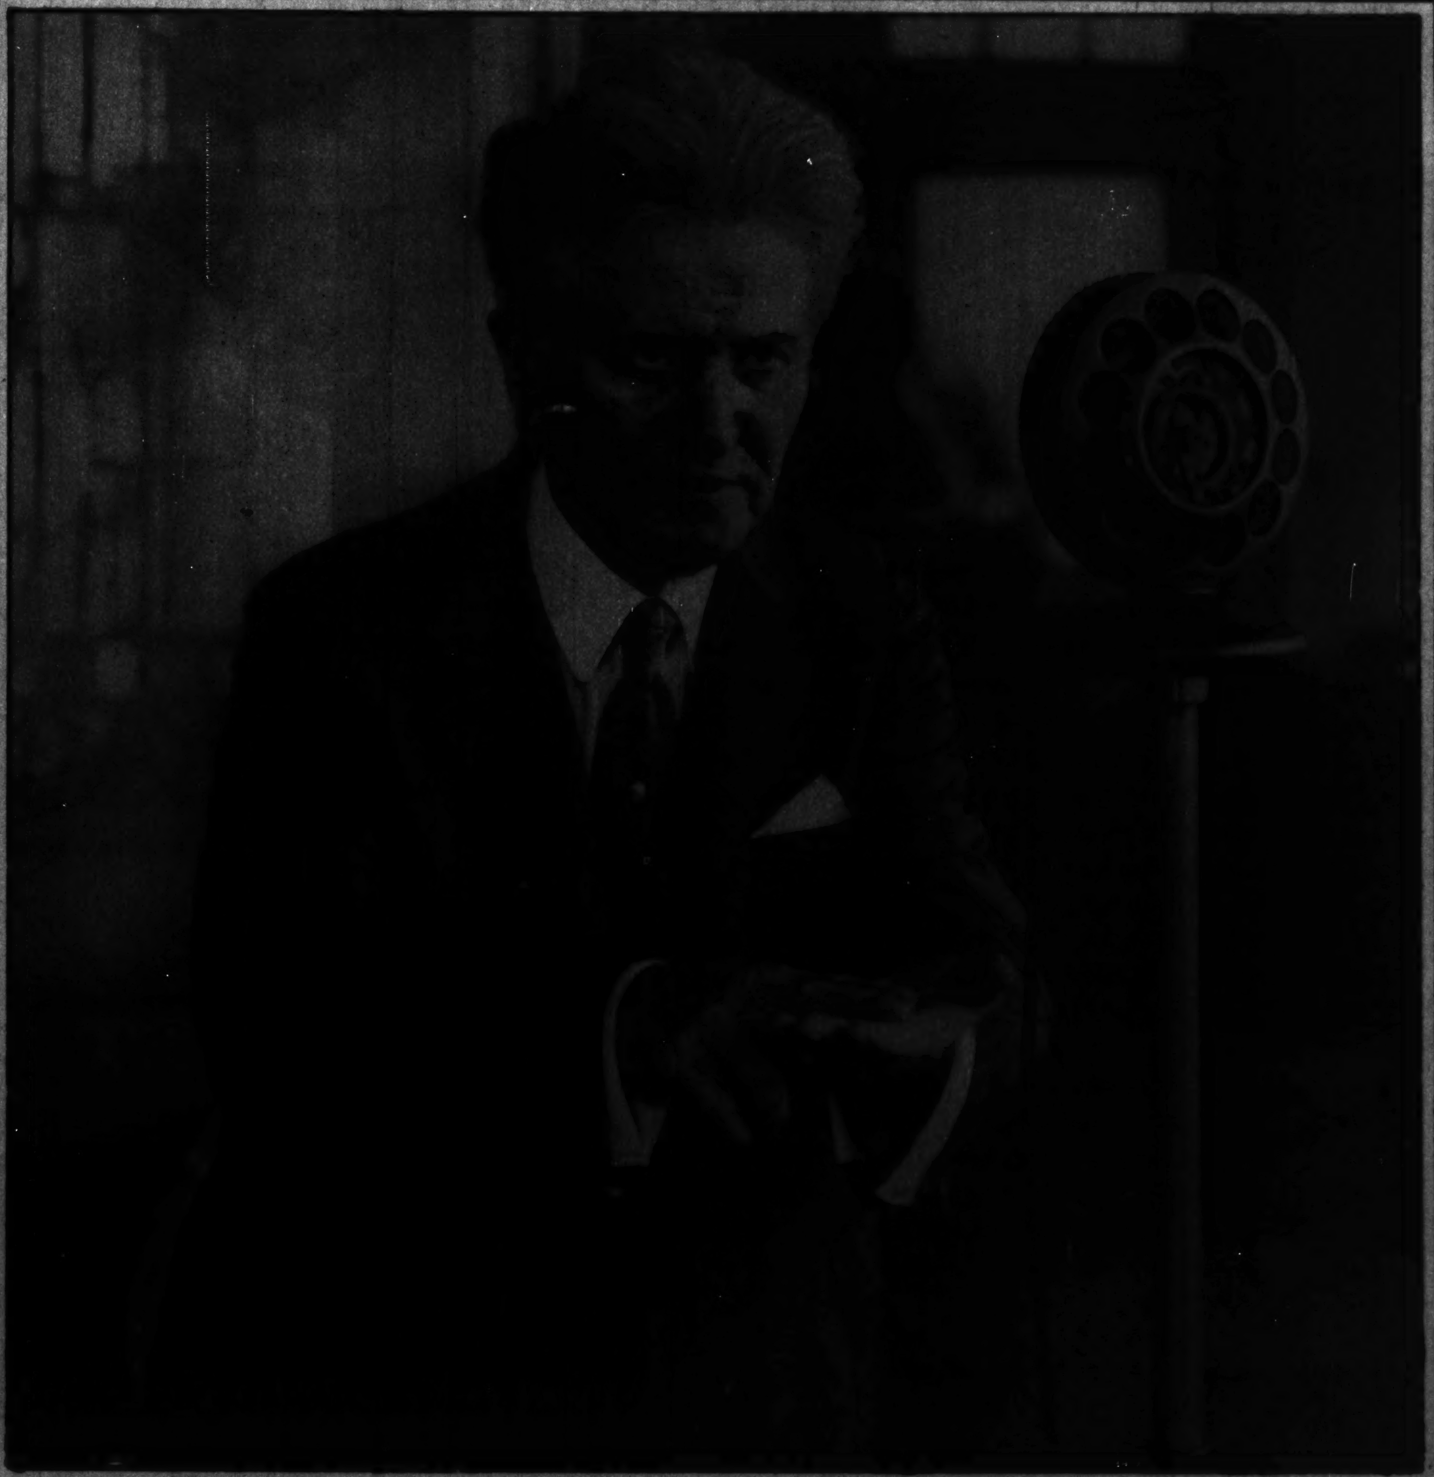
JOHN W. DAVIS TELLING CHICAGO why he should be President. The Democratic candidate was slow in warming to his task, but he has proved an interesting campaigner. The courtly gentleman from West Virginia has learned to study his immediate audience and to tell 'em just the things they want to be told, in every-day, home-folks' language.

(Tribune photograph.)



THE FIREBRAND OF THE FIGHT. Senator Robert M. La Follette launched his independent campaign in New York City before some 15,000 persons who paid from 55 cents to $2.20 each to see and hear him. The admission fee is one means he has taken to finance his candidacy. In spite of his seventy years Fighting Bob attacked Wall street, vested interests, and the power of the courts with all of his old fury.

VANDERBILTS SMILE GOOD-BY TO AMERICA as they sail for Europe. Mrs. Thelma Morgan Converse, at the left, was at the pier to say bon voyage to her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt. The active Mrs. Converse breaks into the news quite often. First she startled society by going into the movies or on the stage, or something like that. Next thing we heard, she'd quit her job because it meant too much hard work.

The Harmful Mouth Condition you must overcome

Thousands today are preventing tooth decay by restoring the natural action of the mouth glands

YOU are probably suffering from a condition of dry mouth. Practically everyone is today.

Dentists and physicians recognize it as a definite cause of the appalling amount of tooth decay which exists in spite of careful brushing and prophylaxis.

With our soft modern diet, the salivary glands grow weak from lack of exercise. And the instant they stop pouring out their alkaline fluids, the acids that cause tooth decay begin to collect in your mouth.

Brushing alone cannot help

Ordinary brushing is the merest temporary cleaning. Now men and women are using this tooth paste that keeps the glands working—overcomes all mouth dryness.

As soon as Pebeco enters the mouth you can feel your salivary glands begin to flow more freely. Your teeth are freed from the acids of decay. Your whole mouth is invigorated, revitalized.

Soon your glands are flowing continuously, and in this healthy mouth your teeth are safe.

Start now to make your mouth and teeth safe. Send today for a trial tube of Pebeco. Made only by Lehn & Fink, Inc. At all druggists.

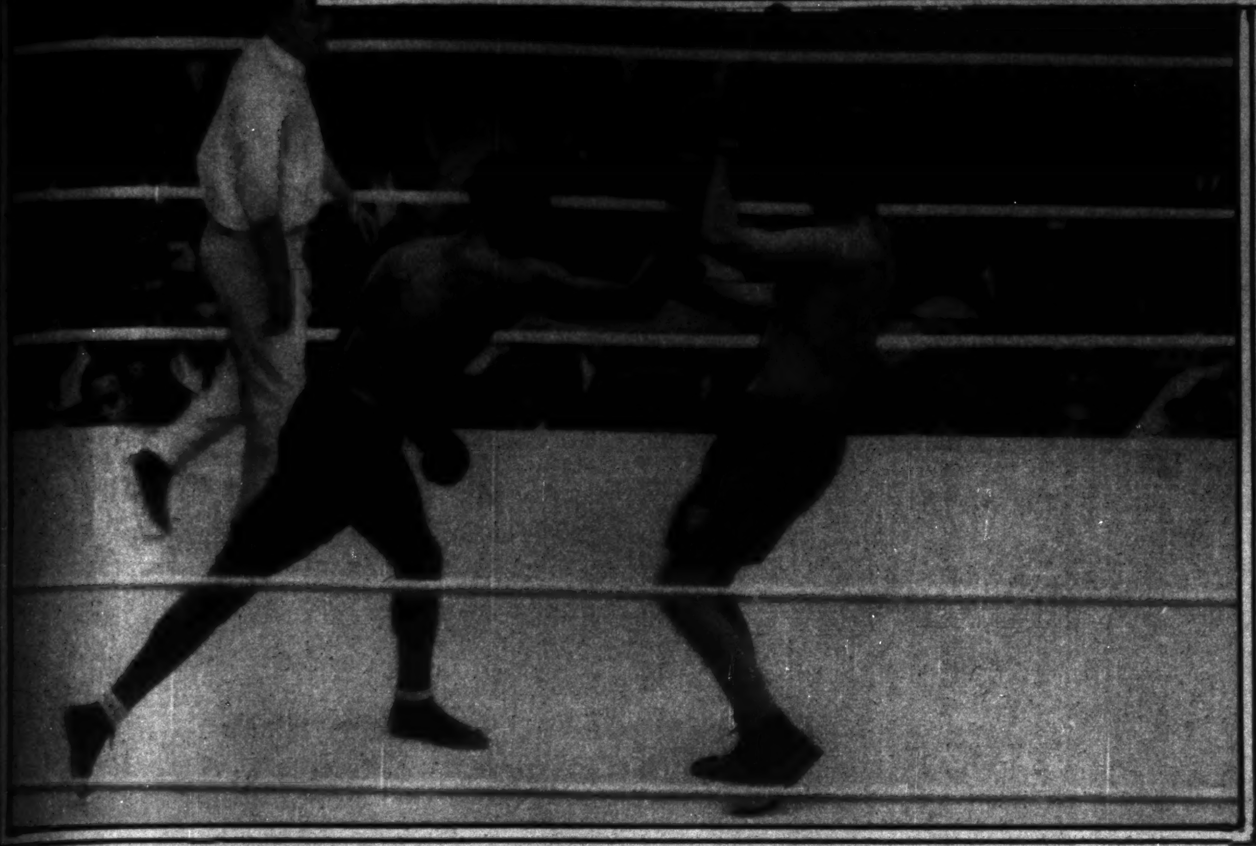
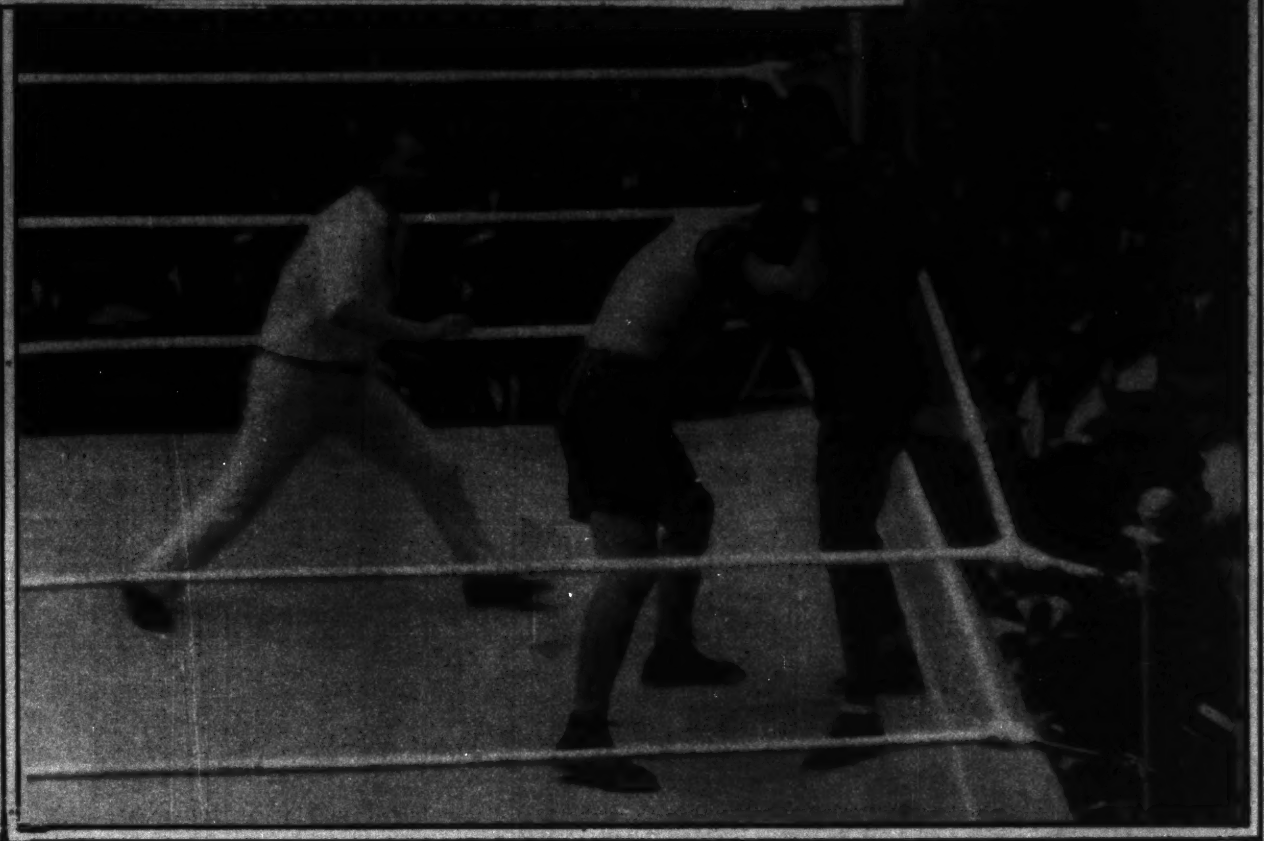
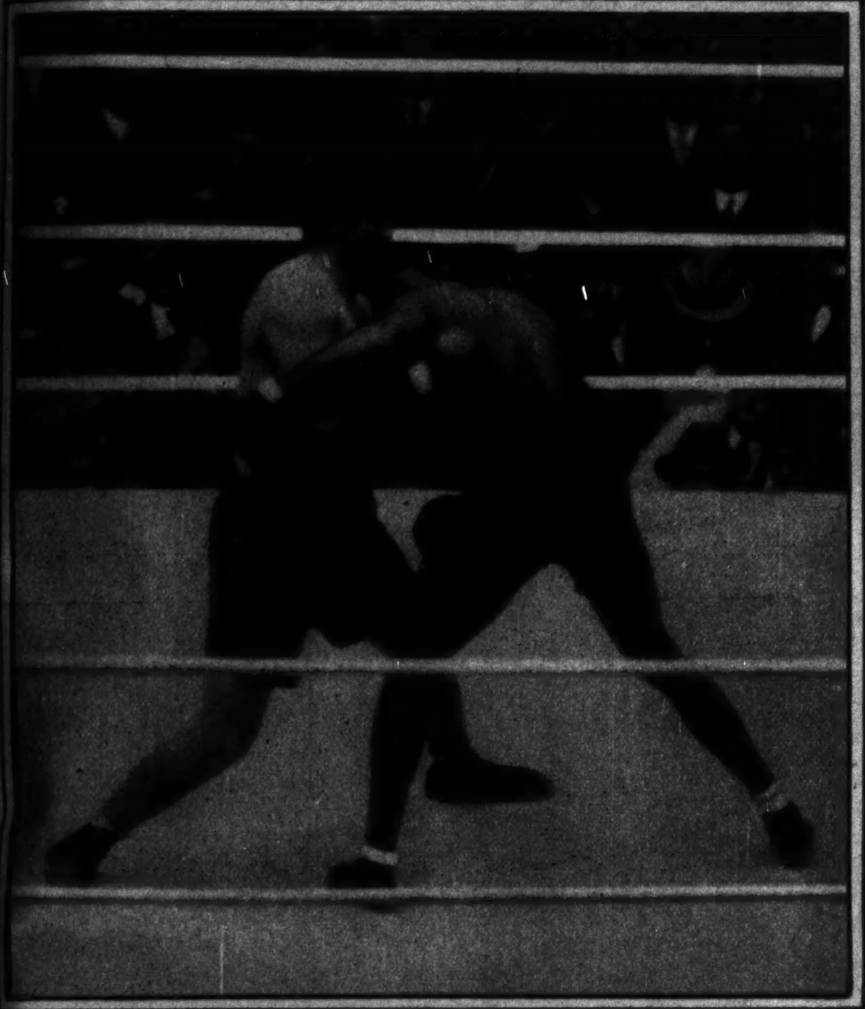
HARRY WILLS BEATS LUIS FIRPO



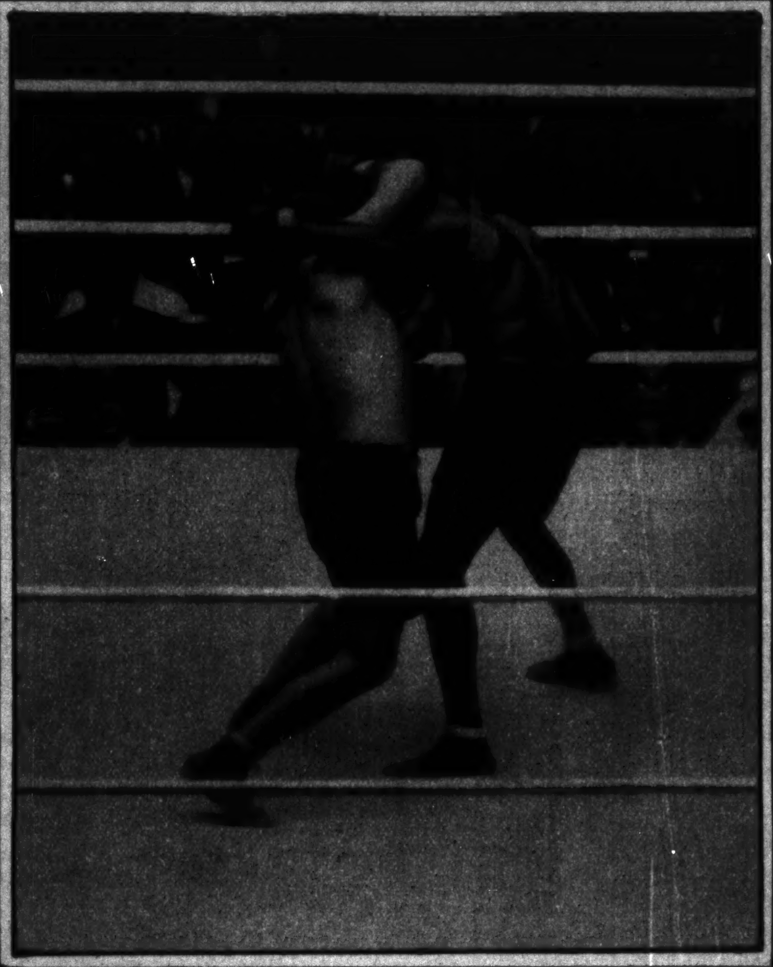
THAT FIRPO has many things to learn about boxing, defending himself particularly, is shown by the above picture. The South American has successfully blocked Wills' right swing for the head, but has left his body open for a left hook, which Harry has just started. Note the awkward defense of the Bull of the Pampas.



MISSING WITH WILD RIGHT SWINGS, Firpo generally fell into clinches. Wills permitted his man to push him against the ropes, thereby using up his vitality. When they went into clinches Wills generally locked one or both of Firpo's arms to avoid unnecessary punishment. When hitting with one arm free Harry had all the best of the milling.



WHEN THEY WENT INTO CLOSE QUARTERS Wills invariably buried his head on Firpo's chest in such a manner that Luis was unable to land effectively. At the same time, the Brown Panther generally locked Firpo's arms before any blows were struck.



WILLS, with one arm free, is shown sinking his right into Firpo's mid-riff. Harry had the South American's right blocked in an efficient manner and peppered his opponent with his right before they became locked and had to be parted by the referee. Firpo's poor defense is shown again, especially for the body.

IN THE SECOND ROUND Wills crossed a solid right to Firpo's chin and the South American went down for the count of five. The blow was delivered after the fighters had parted from a clinch. Although the Brown Panther tried to finish his man, Firpo hung on and weathered the round. The punch was the only effective blow landed during the entire fight. Wills won every round of the fight by a wide margin.

THE POLO BATTLE OF LONG ISLAND. The camera caught the ball in the air in this rapid-fire picture snapped during the first game of the international series. In a sharp brush Maj. Hurndall of the invaders has just driven the ball a bit towards the Yankee goal. The British players are in black shirts, the Yankees in white ones. America won that first clash easily, 16 goals to 5. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

CARRYING OFF THE WOUNDED. Malcolm Stevenson, one of America's aces, was thrown during the first game and injured severely. His place was taken by young R. E. Strawbridge Jr., and there were some fears that the substitution might prove fatal to the Yankee defenders. But Strawbridge acquitted himself nobly in the second game and America clinched the series by another runaway victory, 14 goals to 5. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

Doris Blake presents

the second series of photographs with character and handwriting analyses for which $100.00 each is being paid in our $15,000.00 offer

(Copyright: 1924: by The Chicago Tribune.)

Here is a Nordic woman of the Saxon branch of the race. Notice how much fairer she is than the Angles shown on this page. She is a dreamer of dreams and a yearner after things. Her writing shows she has written considerably at some time.

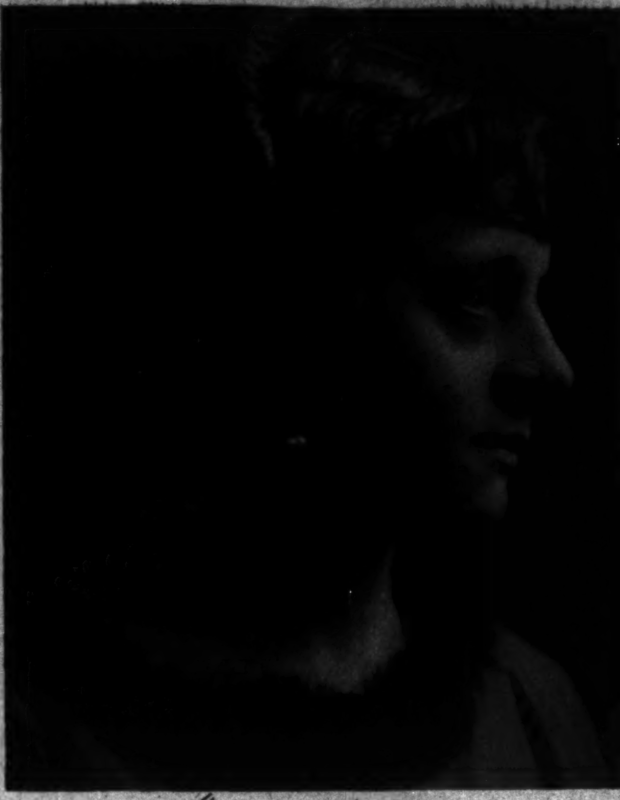
There are contradictions in her character. They fight against each other. She is strongly emotional, and she drives her will right over her emotions. She is a rapid thinker, and she has not yet reached the heights that her rapid mind might lead her to. She can act quickly and surely, and still, when forced to big decisions, she hesitates.

Perhaps it is because she has a set mind. It is hard for her to grasp new ideas. She keeps on in the ways that have become habitual for her, even when they do not lead where she would like to go.

There are moods visible about her mouth. Or perhaps they are memories. The two leave marks that are much alike. They have not been happy. The marks are graven in.

And so she goes on, dreaming dreams and yearning for things. Whether they will come or not depends on others. So she waits.

When it comes to spending her money, she will probably be cautious, and will get good value for it all.



MRS. LABINA GUERICH, Children's Home, Wauwatosa, Wisconsin. Occupation, Nurse-maid.

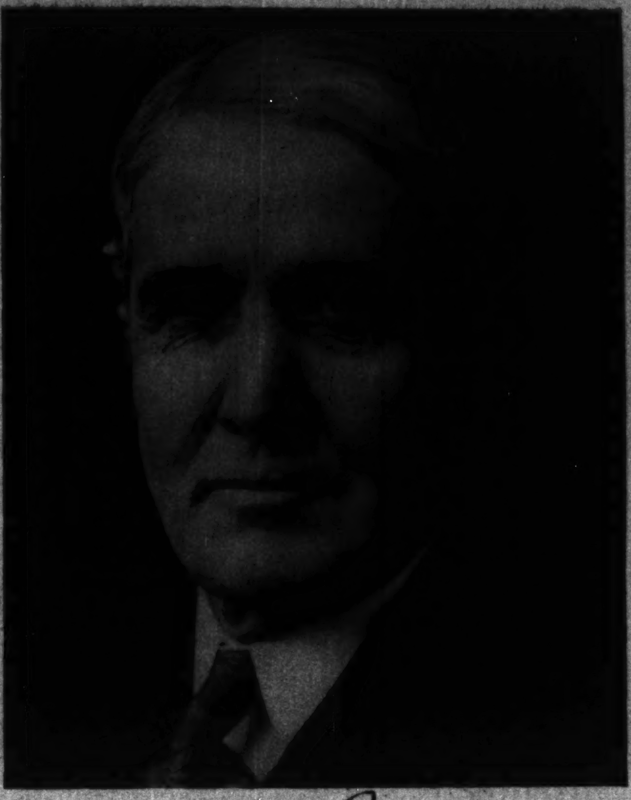
This handwriting shows an attempt to cover up a sympathetic personality under a crust of seeming hardness and indifference. The writer has always felt that his sentimental side was his weakest and most vulnerable spot, and so he has cultivated an apparent harshness of manner to cover his real self.

His face shows clearly that he is an accurate and critical judge of people, and of himself most of all. He is a good student and observer of affairs, and a man who relentlessly drives himself. His mind rules his emotions.

His face and writing are not of the same type. He cares little for power and authority. He likes his pleasures in moderation, and he likes, above all else, to share them with others. The writing looks too hard to go with such a face.

Is it a camouflage? He sent a little note pinned to the coupon, and the note was written in the hand that he uses now, while the coupon, being more formal, reverted to the style that he used to write in his younger years, a much softer, rounder hand. He is still questioning himself, and still trying subconsciously to hold back his sentimental nature.

He will probably spend his hundred dollars on some one else.



John J Boucher

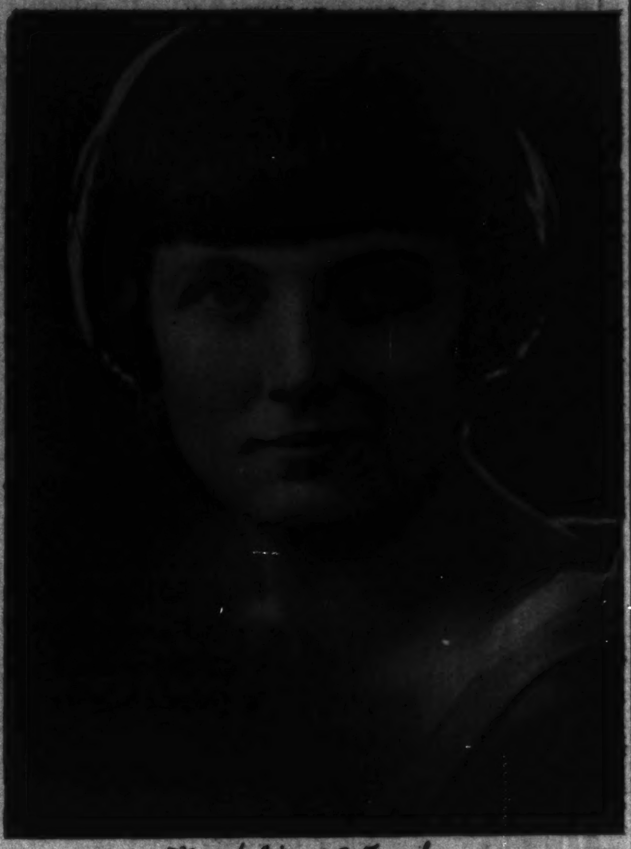
This girl thinks rapidly, and she makes up her mind rapidly. And woe betide any one who arouses her anger. Her temper lies just under the surface, ready to flame up.

This is because she sets such a high value upon herself. She is not the person to forget for one instant who she is or what the occasion demands. Things must be proper to win her approval; if they are not proper, they will win her displeasure.

This is only another way of saying that she is a Cromagnon. She loves art and quality, and has a deep intolerance of that which has neither. Her opinions are not half hearted. This is also saying only that her blood is that of the earliest civilization on earth.

Her writing indicates that she has not yet reached her full psychic maturity, but is still much a girl. She is stubborn, quick to act, and given to moods and reveries.

Her emotions are intense, but controlled, and hidden, where those who have no right to them will not get a chance to see them. She will be apt to spend her money for beauty in some form.



Madeline E. Tucker

MADELINE E. TUCKER, 3531 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Illinois. Occupation, Office girl.

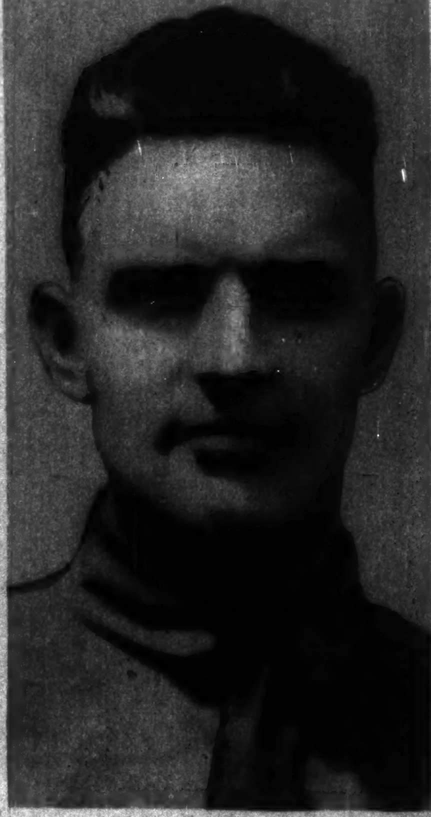
Here is a man with strong ambitions, who works hard to win the approval of his own conscience. What others say or think of him makes little difference. It is the approval of his spirit that he seeks. He is a good reasoner and a rapid thinker.

The man is a Nordic. This much might have been told from his uniform alone. Almost all men who engage in the military profession are Nordic. In addition, this man belongs to the Angle branch of the Nordics. He probably has strong, ruddy coloring.

In build he is motive. He likes activity, travel, changes of scene. His understanding of things and conditions is profound; he is quick and sure to perceive, but slow and deliberate to act.

His emotions are strong and he can be flattered. But the flattery must be of a reasonable sort, to lead him, because his reason and ambitions ordinarily rule and guide his emotions.

When he gets his hundred dollars, he may debate on how to spend it. There may be a piece of machinery to buy, or perhaps it will be a trip somewhere to see an interesting scene. Then there is the possibility that there will be a powerful emotion that will claim it all.



E. A. Conley

E. A. CONLEY, 303 N. Third Ave., Marshalltown, Iowa. Capt. 168th Inf., Iowa N. G.

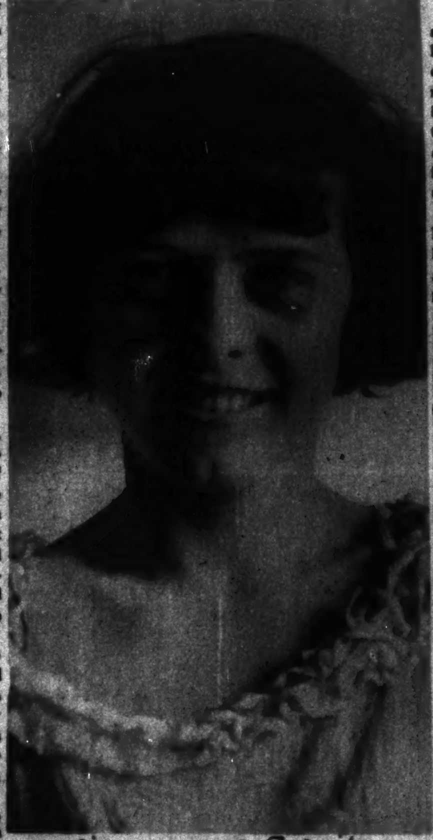
Here is the picture of a girl who was born to be happy. There is nothing that will ever take all the smiles out of her face, because she is an optimist at heart. Before her life is hardly more than under headway, she has worn deep laughing lines in her face, an augury of what the future holds for her.

She is not self-conscious. She knows how to forget herself completely and put her own existence out of mind. Her temperament is retrospective; she sees her ego last of all.

In blood she is Nordic, an Angle. She has no great understanding of people, but she does have intense emotions, which instinctively tell her just what is best to do, and this suffices. Being Nordic she is restless, fond of variety, and loves to go places.

Her writing shows she is quite feminine and still in her girlhood. She is easily swayed and led by example. For some years yet the persons about her are going to do most in molding her destiny.

She will be sure to be impulsively generous with her money, in her efforts to please somebody.



Lillian Phillips

LILLIAN PHILLIPS, 603 E. Jenny St., Bay City, Michigan. Occupation, School girl.

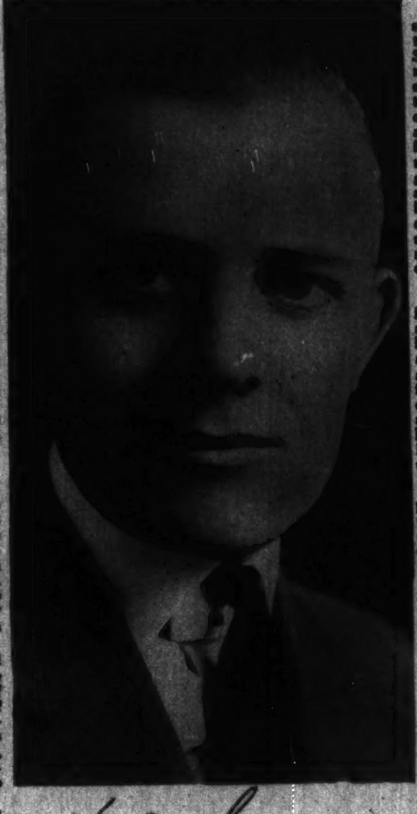
A man who is conservative, and sometimes holds back too long because he finds it hard to rapidly assimilate new ideas. His vision tends to specialize. He prefers a deep knowledge of a few questions to a broad understanding of many.

This man is a Celt. His writing indicates that his thoughts flow with great rapidity, never pausing long anywhere. His forehead and brows reveal a love of people. He understands people, and can handle them. He is inherently of a friendly temperament, and his greatest achievements will be done upon a basis of friendship. There are laughing lines deeply engraved upon his face.

He has little understanding of things. He is stubborn and sometimes obstinate, even in the face of his own convictions, because, although he knows he is wrong, he does not know how to set himself right easily and surely. This is his weakest side.

Both his eyes and cheeks indicate that he never quite puts himself and his own ego out of his mind. He is an opportunist. His build is motive. He, therefore, makes the best presentation he can of himself, to impress others.

He will probably spend his hundred dollars in a social or recreational manner.



H. L. Sawyer

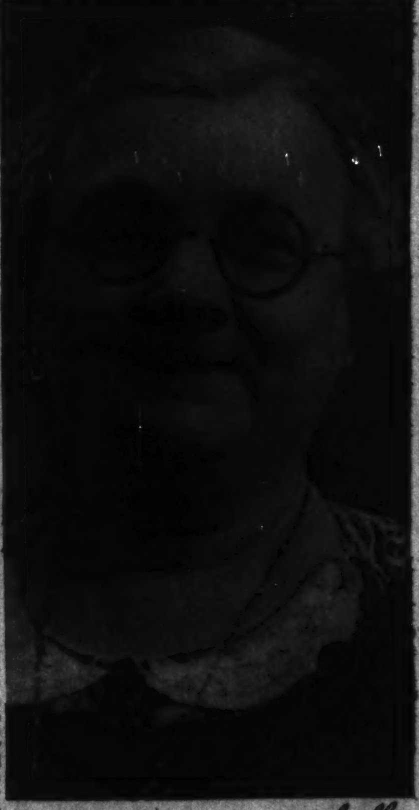
H. L. SAWYER, Pullman Hotel, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Occupation, Traveling salesman.

Here is a face that shows good judgment of things and conditions. She has the capacity of mind to learn by experience. She has aspirations to be a writer. Whether or not she ever succeeds at this will depend on factors other than having material out of which to get settings. Her mind all during the years of her life has been like a camera, recording scenes, sifting ideas, and putting memories together into ordered sequences.

She is Celtic. Her writing shows genius, and is remarkably open. Age has brought judgment and capacity to her, it appears. Her mind is forceful, and sometimes even dominating; she starts her tasks cautiously, and pushes harder and harder as she progresses, until she finishes.

Being Celtic, her temperament runs mostly to the human side. She is capable and informed on conditions, however, and can gauge them well. Empty words and flattery are indeed empty upon her ears; she sees through both. Her chin and lips indicate this. She has laughed so much in her lifetime that the lines show. Something else also shows. She has been so sure of her own mind that determination also shows about her mouth. To be determined and to be happy, all in one, what does this indicate? Success, of course.

She will be apt to spend her money in a wise and prudent fashion.



Lena B. Campbell,

LENA B. CAMPBELL, 520 E. Market St., Indianapolis, Indiana. Occupation, Housewife and Literary work.

A man of the Alpine race. An unusual type, because he is mental in his build and alert in temperament. His writing shows great nervous energy, and a mind set into definite channels, keen to his interests.

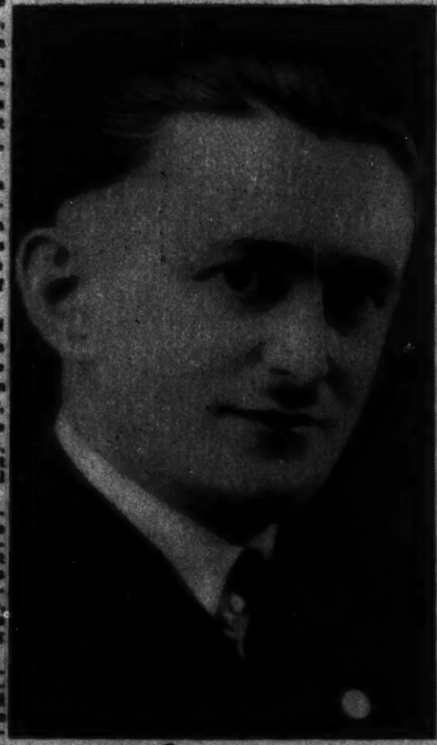
He loves routine. Given routine to follow, he exhibits the utmost push and drive, and he does his work so well that he wins his own approval of himself.

There is a wealth of imagination visible in his face and forehead. He has ideas that run in great flights of fancy, and because he has little understanding of things, his daydreams will not keep close to material verities.

Introspection is ingrained within him; he sees everything that concerns him in the light of his own eyes. For this reason he has poor understanding of people, but to compensate for the lack, he has an amazing grasp of conditions.

Being mental, his powers of physical endurance are not great, and he tires quickly where muscular endurance is demanded. His writing indicates this, as well as his face. He eases up before he reaches the end.

He may spend his hundred dollars in a social or recreational manner.



C L Prefontaine

C. L. PREFONTAINE, 30 West Scott St., Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. Office Manager. Photo by McGowan.

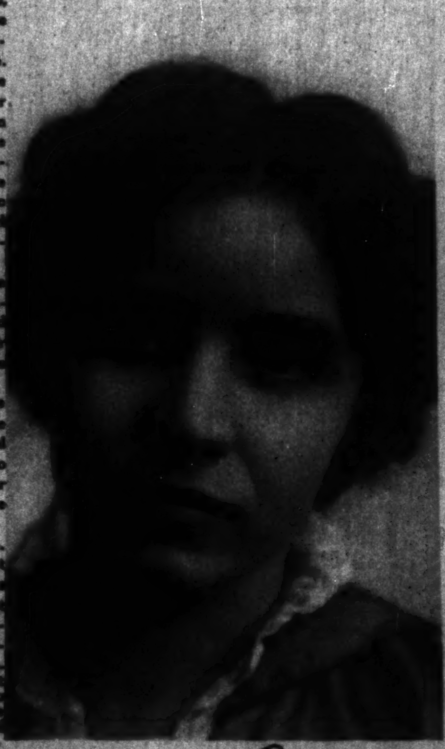
A bundle of emotions, this is what this face reveals. Her temperament is entirely feminine. Whether she is to be happy or unhappy in her life will depend upon others; she has only the power to sit and patiently watch. She has the strength of a rock to endure, and to resist, and to be patient, but no power to be self-assertive.

If her emotions are satisfied, she will be tranquil, seeking only mild pleasures, happy with her surroundings, caring little for mental pursuits.

But if her emotions are thwarted, she will be moody, phantasmal, and her emotions will turn to intellectual pursuits for the satisfaction that these only half give.

Look at her signature. One seldom sees one that seems as feminine as hers. It indicates that she is deft with her fingers, of a gentle temperament, strong and never-give-up tenacity, but credulous, and inclined to see only the gloomy side of things. She is a good judge of conditions.

Her reasoning is childlike and impulsive. She will probably spend her hundred dollar in charity or in looking forward to the happiness of some one other than herself.



Olga Laurie

OLGA LAURIE, 4640 N. Racine Ave., Chicago, Illinois. Occupation, Office worker.

Here is a face that is Nordic, and intensely mental in its build. The handwriting shows he has considerable discernment, and perceives easily and accurately the nature of things and conditions.

He thinks slowly, and he acts quickly. His forehead rises nearly vertically from his brows, a sign that his mind, materialistic though it is, travels slowly. In this case an ability to cogitate is also visible. His jaws are lank, and his chin is sharp and pointed. His nose is sharp. These features mean he will always act quickly. His weakest side, therefore, is his habit of acting too hastily.

But balancing this is his writing. It exhibits not a little of the same impulse to haste, but the individual letters show much shrewdness and ability to weigh practical matters and to analyze conditions.

This man greatly enjoys having power. But power, if he is ever to keep it, must be of the sort that handles and makes conditions. He is strong here. But he is too sentimental to drive people, and he is not sure enough of himself to manage things.

He will always be ruled largely by his emotions. Appeal to this side of his nature, and he will respond. For this reason, it is likely he will spend his hundred dollars in some philanthropic manner, or in a way calculated to bring happiness to some one other than himself.

Why choose fine toilet soap for washing your hands?

If you expose them to kitchen soap an hour and a half every day in the dishpan . . .

YOU wouldn't think of washing your hands with kitchen soap. Yet how much easier that would be on them than to wash dishes with it. For you spend only a few moments washing your hands—but it's an hour and a half a day that your hands are in the dishpan!

You thought you had to wash dishes with kitchen soap. And all the time right on your kitchen shelf was Lux! In an instant you tossed Lux into your dishpan. You wouldn't have believed anything could be so easy on your hands—as easy as fine toilet soap.

It's the free alkali in kitchen soap that does the mischief. It burns up the beautifying oils of your skin.

Lux contains none of that dread free alkali. It won't dry the important oils; it won't roughen your hands. When you use Lux in your dishpan, your hands are rid for good of that betraying in-the-dishpan look.

* * *

Perhaps you think it's extravagant to wash dishes with Lux. But you'll find that just one teaspoonful washes a whole pan full. One teaspoonful will do the breakfast or lunch dishes—maybe you'll need two for the dinner dishes. Keep the big new package of Lux on your kitchen shelf. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

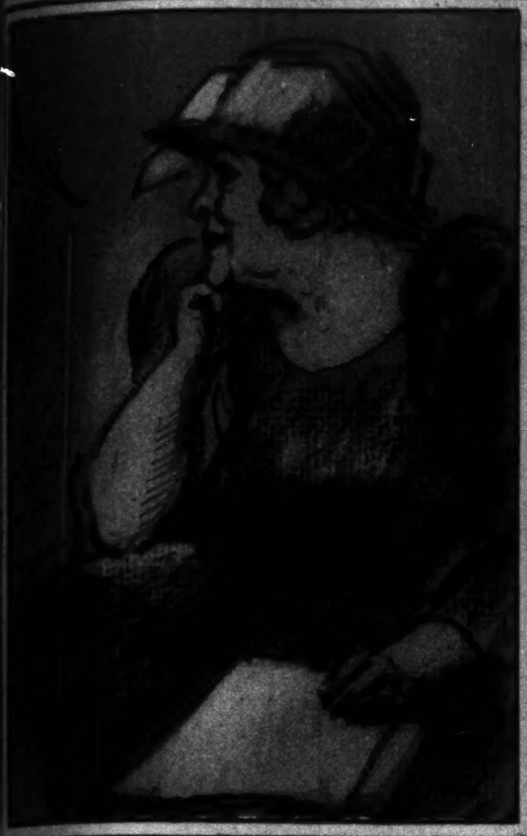
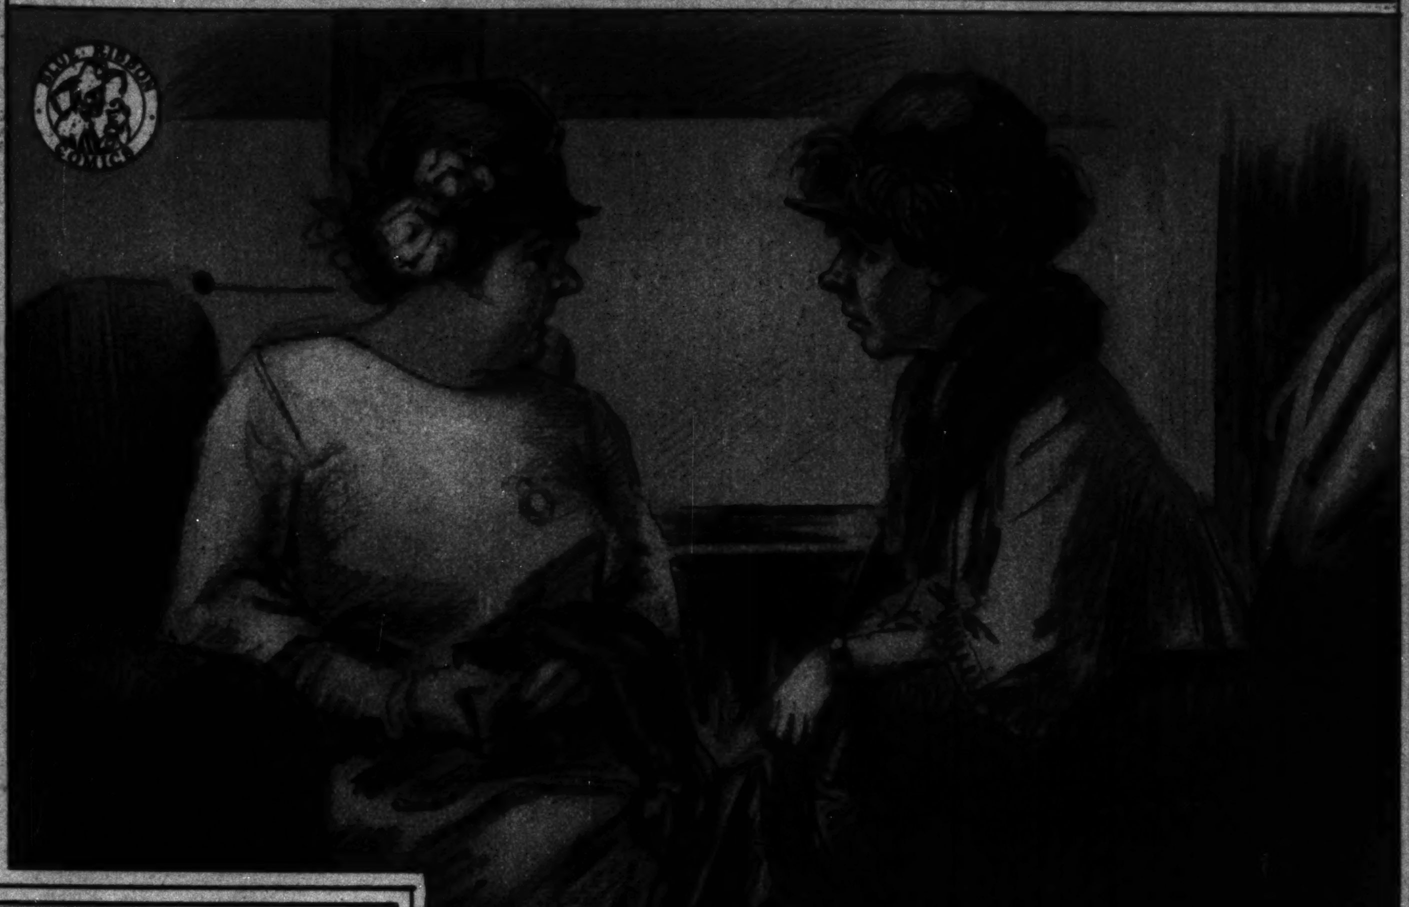
A Seat in the Pullman

By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune

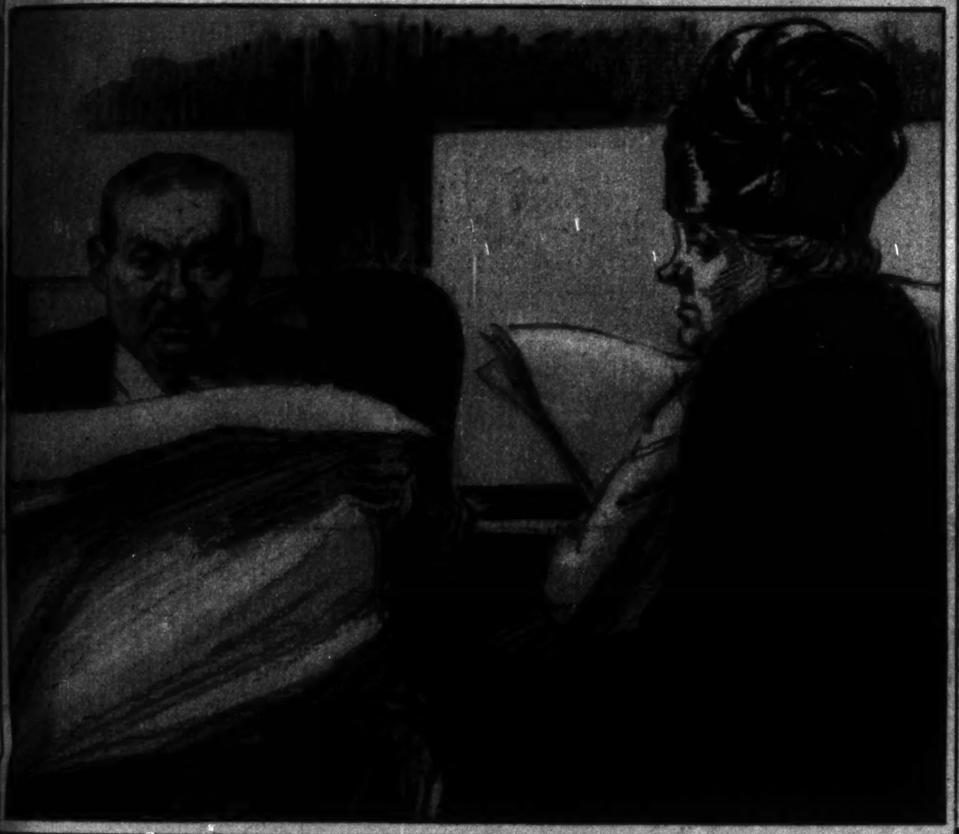


Lady looking out a window and not seeing the landscape, being intent on a mental picture of how the blue evening wrap will look with moleskin collar added.

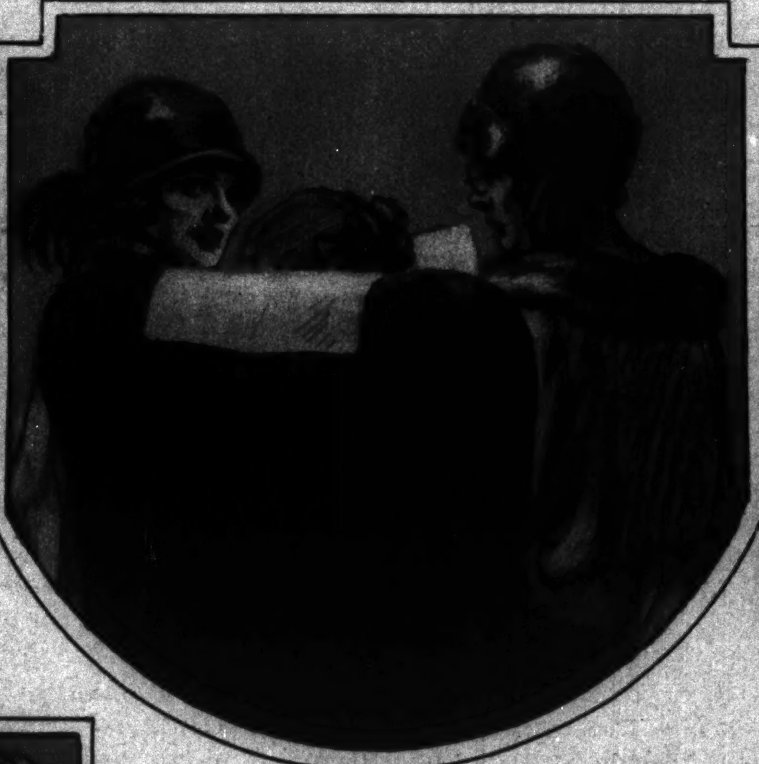


The chance acquaintance. "Eighty dollars a month, my dear, and, would you believe it, she couldn't even poach an egg. And every single thing she touched she broke!"

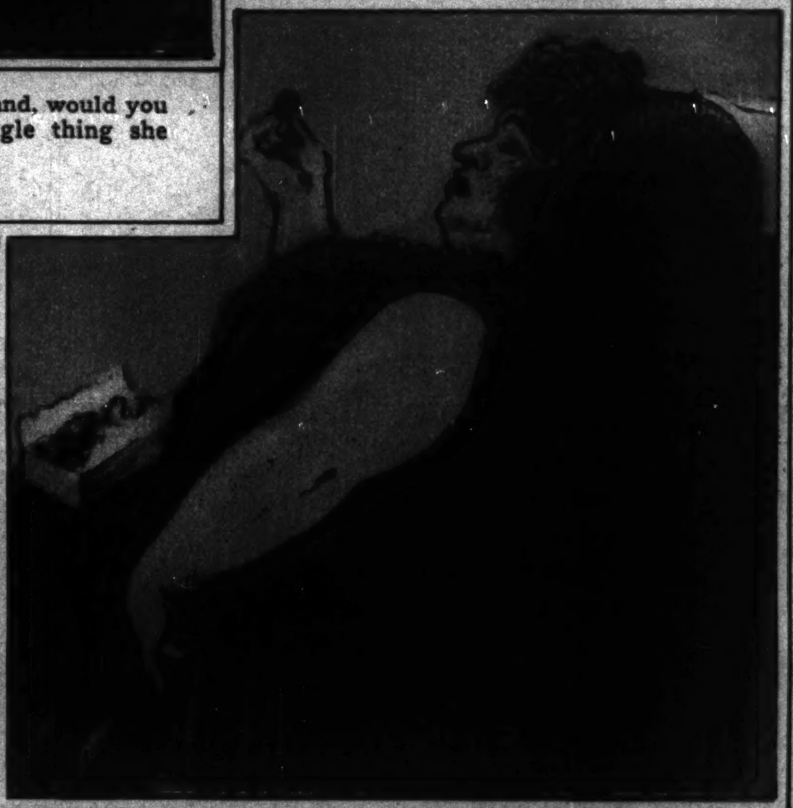
Pullman porter doing his best for a man who refuses to be brushed off.



Two end of the season week-enders. Joe didn't want to accept, but Ida said: "Now, we've got to go just this once. We'll hurt their feelings if we don't." The people at the other end have been saying: "Now, we've got to ask them out just this once—their feelings will be hurt if we dont!" It's going to be a swell week-end.

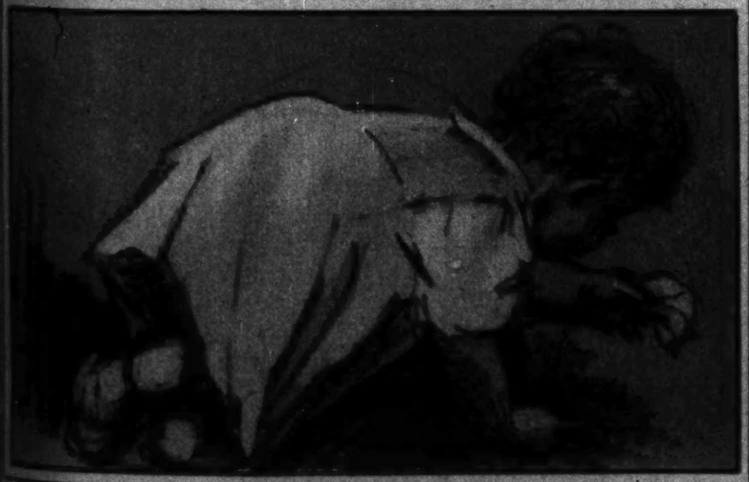


Three finishing school girls parked in a single chair and having a splendid chat. They will tip the porter 5 cents apiece when they reach Pittsfield.

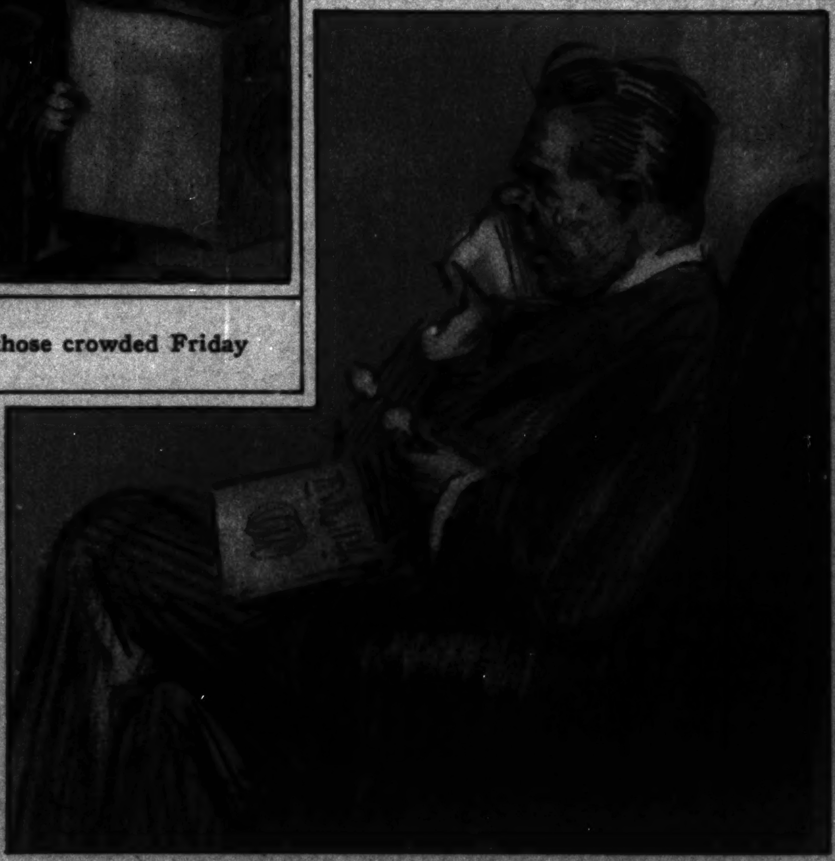


Lady not used to a Pullman making believe she was brought up in a chair car.

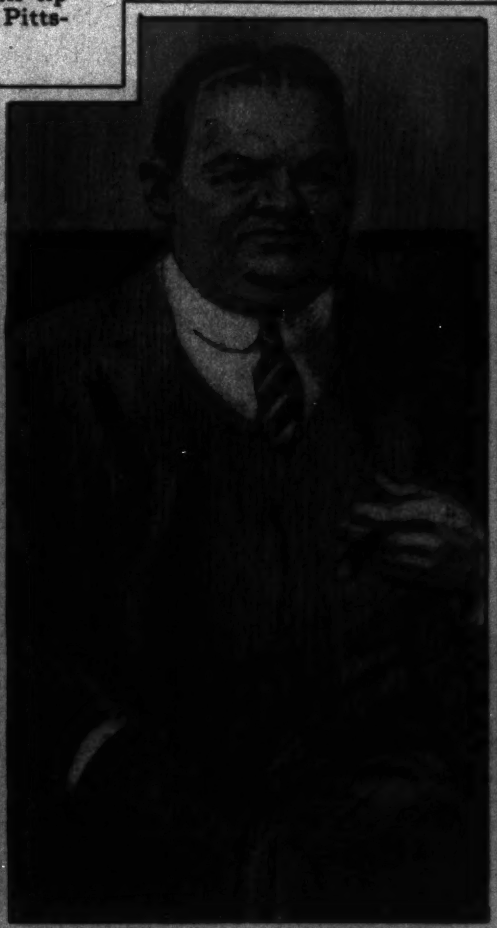
Four very uncongenial occupants of a stateroom on one of those crowded Friday afternoon trains.



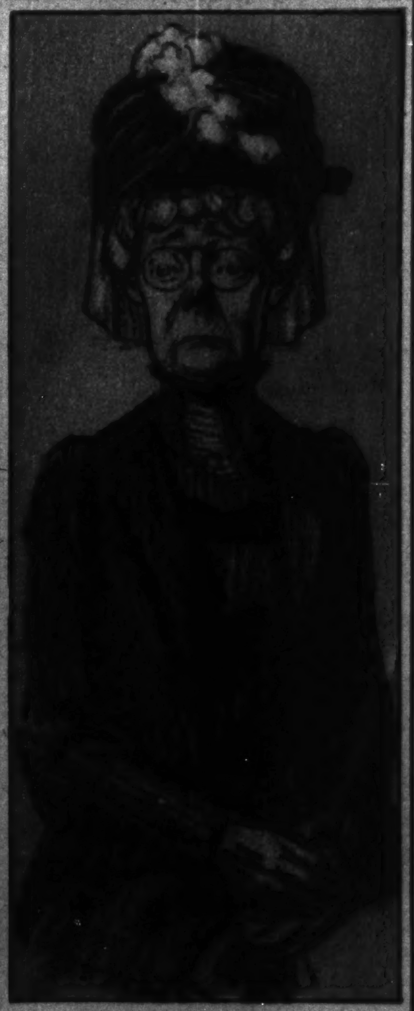
Some one's little darling rollicking around in the aisle.



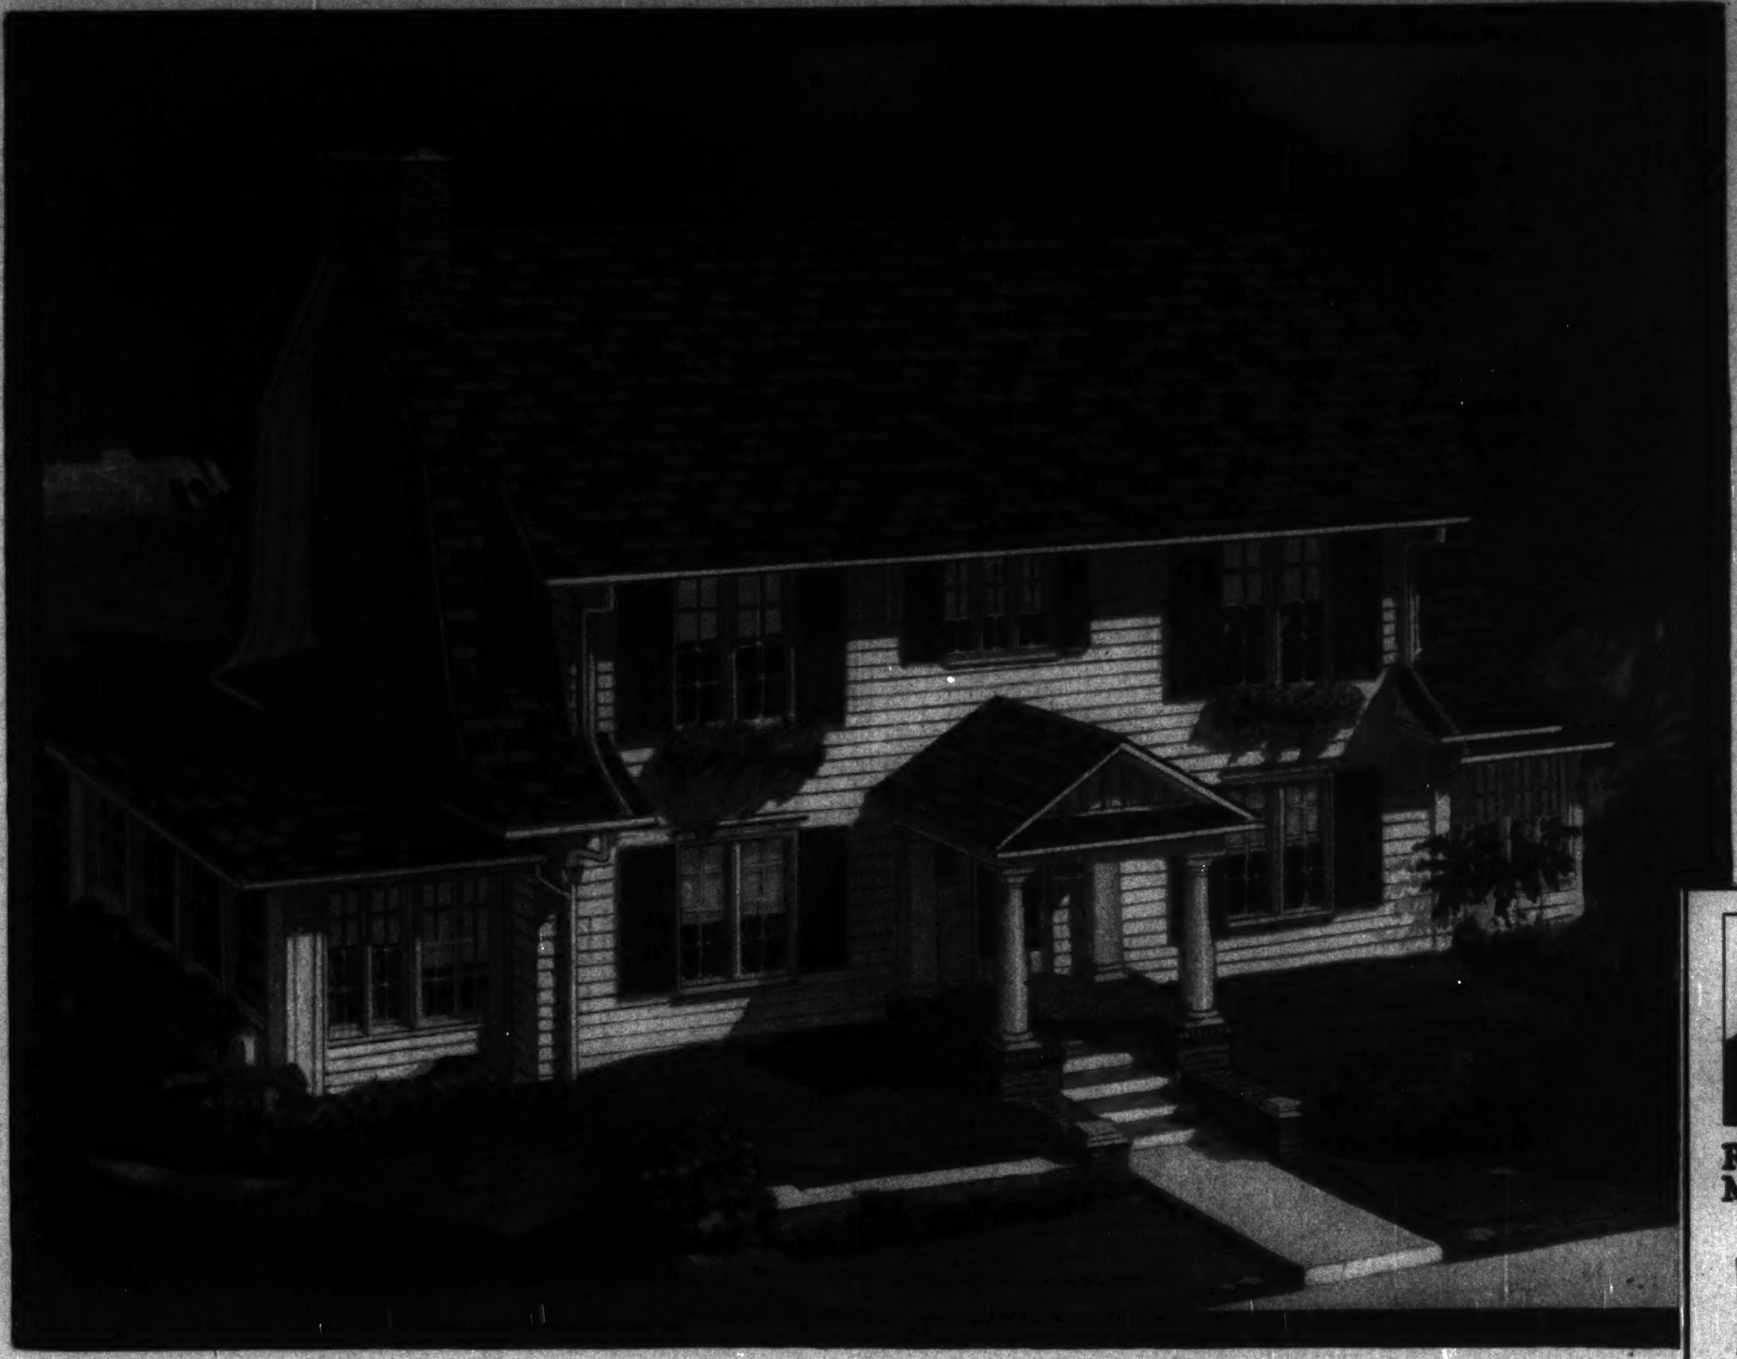
The man with the hay fever. Wait till the little girl with the golden rod gets on at the next stop. Won't they have a lark!



The traveling man in the smoking compartment is waxing loud and long on the effect of a presidential year on the union suit industry. That's his line, and he ought to know.



Miss Elenbogen is one of those timid travelers. She just knows she'll miss connections at Albany—feels it in her bones. Terrible people stare at her in waiting rooms and seem about to speak. More than once she has complained to the station master about it.



One of the many attractive color combinations to be had in Richardson Multicrome Roofs—weathered brown, jade green and tile red.

Note under the microscope how the long fibres of Richardson felt interlock to bind the Viskalt into an enduring weatherproof armor.

Richardson Multicrome Roof Ordinary Roof

[cross sections equally enlarged]

The 50% greater thickness of this roof adds beauty of texture and years of endurance. Closely overlapping slate flakes further protect the sturdy Viskalt - saturated base against weather and fire hazards.

An unusual new roofing color beautifies this Colonial home

A roof of mellow brown, brightened with touches of jade green and tile red, adds a pleasing bit of warm color to this Colonial home.

The most distinctive of these colors—weathered brown—is found only in the Richardson quarries of Georgia. Millions of tiny slate flakes in this rare color not only add new beauty to a roof but seal each shingle permanently against weather and fire hazards. Years of weathering only serve to deepen and enrich their mellow tones.

Architects are especially enthusiastic over the rare color effects made possible by this weathered brown, particularly when it is blended, as it is here, with other Richardson shingles of jade green, and tile red or black pearl.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof

This, however, is but one example of the beauty secured in the Richardson Multicrome Roof. Wholly new, for instance, is the opal effect secured from shingles on which weathered brown and jade green slate flakes are combined in endless variety. And a bronze mosaic effect is similarly formed with weathered brown and tile red. Many other blends are possible—one to please every taste.

The Multicrome Roof is built of Richardson Super-Giant Shingles, extra large, extra heavy—to give greater beauty, longer endurance. The high quality of its inner materials, too, assures lasting beauty for this roof. Its base is sturdy Richardson felt, for fifty years recognized as the best. And the waterproofing is Viskalt—unusually durable because 99.8% pure bitumen, especially vacuum-processed.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof represents the maximum roof value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

Prove the facts yourself

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material and ask to see the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. Also ask him to show you the reasons for their unusual endurance.

TWO NEW YORK NOTABLES in the blue book assemblage were Mrs. Julia Lydig Hoyt and her sister, Mrs. S. J. King. Polo of the international brand is a great women's sport—it develops a fashion parade, with society's bluest bluebloods doing the promenading.

TOO RED EVEN FOR RED RUSSIA, Emma Goldman is a woman without a country. Deported from the United States, she sought refuge in Russia. There her propaganda annoyed the soviet as much as the soviet's iron-handed anarchy disturbed her, and she fled to Germany. Now it is reported she will seek asylum in England.

THE MORRISON HOTEL

Where Guests Pay Less—for Greater Convenience

THE historic corner of Clark and Madison has been for half a century the most central "24-hour" location in Chicago. Here, throughout the years of the city's greatest development, the present and the former Morrison Hotel have afforded to patrons a readier access to offices, theatres, stores and railroad depots—and at lower rates—than any other hotel.

The reason for "Morrison rates" is simple. At this location the store subleases are so valuable that they pay all the rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests. Rooms that would rent elsewhere for $5 or $6 are here rented for $3 or $4.

Even before the present stately structure was opened in 1916, its predecessor (pictured below) had already made the name "Morrison" a household word with habitual travelers throughout America. And, with the erection of the present building, the Terrace Garden, "Chicago's Wonder Restaurant," attained international renown as the leading "dance and dine" rendezvous of the Middle West.

1,054 outside rooms, each with bath, represent the Morrison's present capacity; but pending plans, when completed, will make it the largest hotel on the globe, with 3,400 rooms.

THE GREATEST RUNNER OF ALL TIME, Paavo Nurmi, is still breaking records. Five new world marks were claimed for this flying paper-hanger of Helsingfors after a recent six mile race at Kuopio, in his native Finland. He went 10,000 meters in 30:06 2-5; four miles in 19:18 7-10; five miles in 24:13 2-5; six miles in 29:07 4-5; and in the even half hour he covered 9,957 meters. In the Olympic games Nurmi won the 1,500, 5,000, and 10,000 meter runs. (Photograph from Wide World.)

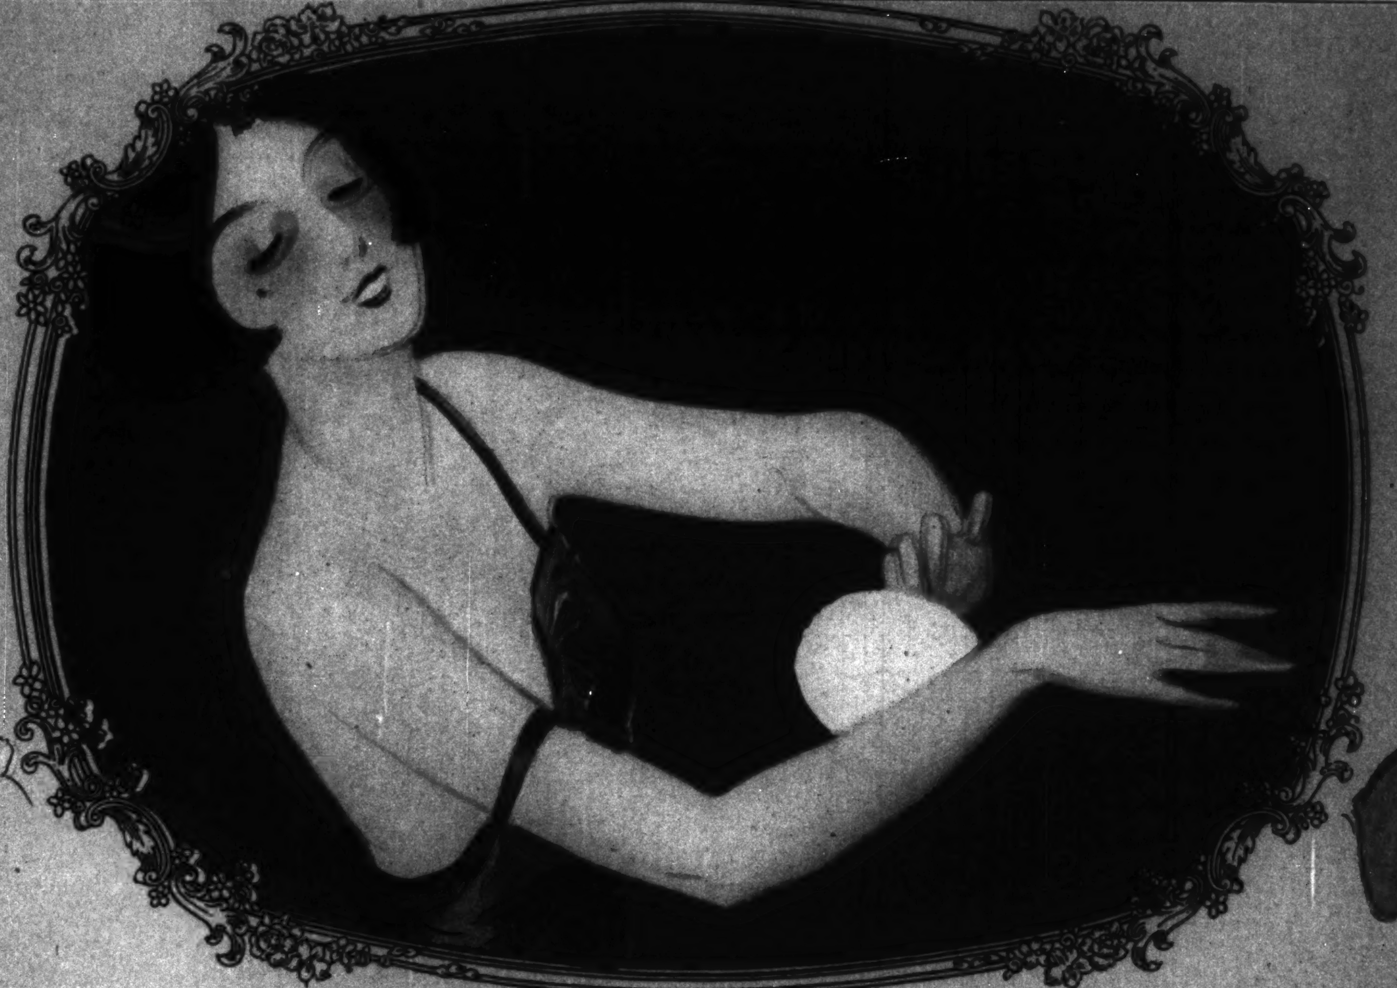
Soothes the skin while preventing odors.

Wonderful for baby—so pure—so gentle on chafed and tender skin.



So safe, clean and sure when used under arms.

An alluring fragrance that becomes part of your charm.

The Gentle Art of Caring for Your Body

—making the skin sweet, fresh, alluring —getting rid of those faint, unpleasant odors

and protecting your health

People give so much attention to the proper care of the heart, the digestive system, the development of their muscles, the care of the complexion.

How about your skin "all over"—the five miles of pores through which your skin breathes, from which those vague, annoying body odors emanate?

Without a healthy, well-kept skin you cannot BE healthy. Unless your skin is kept freshly sweet you cannot LOOK fresh and pink and lovely. MORE than your regular bathing is necessary to prevent those odors and to insure protection against stagnant, clogged pores.

The Finest Habit
You Can Have

The chances are that you do not use enough talc. It is likely, too, that you do not use talc properly. Again—you may not be using the right talc.

After every bath Mavis Talc should be sprinkled in a cool shower over the entire body and rubbed gently until you feel complete comfort and rest. Mavis should be used similarly every time the body gets overheated; especially on chest, neck and arms. This not only freshens and sweetens the skin. It induces relaxation and sleep. It prevents colds by absorbing the last trace of moisture. It prevents formation of the vile film which clogs pores and causes odors.

This Refined Fragrance
—Plus Something Greater

The right talc for your skin is Mavis, which can be used with complete safety even on the delicate skin of a baby. Rubbing it softly over the skin, particularly in places where chafing occurs, you feel it smooth out into a film under your fingers. This film is practically waterproof. It keeps all harsh contact FROM the skin—yet it absorbs the moisture from within. Thus the pores continue to function cleanly.

The delicate fragrance of Mavis does not break down and disappear, as do so many others. On the contrary, the faintly seductive odeur lends its charm so long as the film remains.

The Mavis fragrance is beloved by discriminating seekers of luxury the world over.

But it is because Mavis is GOOD for your skin that it is the largest-selling talc in the world. Buy one of the tall red cans today.

GLORIA GOULD

tells why the care of the skin is vital

"THE WOMEN of the younger set today, strenuous from noon to night and often on to dawn, have simply got to look fresh and lovely, none-the-less.

They never permit the strain of many engagements or the attacks of wind and sun to mar the smooth delicacy of their complexions. Fatigue and exposure can leave no trace on the skin that is cared for by Pond's Two Creams. They are really remarkable."

Gloria Gould

ALTHOUGH Gloria Gould has recently become Mrs. Gloria Gould Bishop, she will still always be, to scores of her friends, to thousands who know her only by her famous name—just Gloria Gould.

The youngest—and many think the loveliest—daughter of one of America's oldest families of great wealth, she commands a unique position in New York's exclusive younger set.

It was in the cream-and-blue drawing room of her sun-flooded apartment in New York's smart East Side, that she consented to give me her views on the care of the skin.

As she sat chatting before me, charming in the quaintness of a panniered robe de style, the simple friendliness of her manner delighted me. But what impressed me more was her vividness, her spontaneous enthusiasm. No wonder, I thought, that when Gloria Gould entertains everybody is caught up in the happy mood created by her joyfulness and humor. And when she takes a lesson in singing, in fencing or in Russian dancing—which she adores—she does it with her whole heart.

"She's the most alive creature," I said to myself. "Even her ivory white skin seems to breathe life." And that plunged me into the interview.

Every woman should guard her beauty

"Mrs. Bishop," I began, "what in your opinion is the most important factor in a woman's looks?"

"There are three things," prompted Gloria Gould, "which I think essential to the woman who wants to keep an important place in the social world. Fine eyes, white teeth and a lovely skin. The latter, by far the most important of the three, luckily, any woman may possess, if only she'll take the right care."

"With the society woman," she continued, "the care of the skin is vital—a duty. But every woman, no matter what her interests, owes it to herself, to her family and friends, to make her appearance express the happiness that's within her. How can it, if her skin is not clear, not glowing with healthful bloom?"

daughter of one of America's wealthiest old families, gives her skin perfect care. On her French dressing table (at the right) stand Pond's Two Creams, used by the women of the younger set to keep their complexions exquisite despite the strain of social life.

Then we spoke of the Two Famous Creams Pond's Laboratories have perfected, whose daily use is such a simple way to guard a lovely skin. Together they provide the balanced care every normal skin should have, a Rejuvenating Cleansing and a Delicate Finish and Protection.

Days and nights crowded with good times bring little lines and dark shadows into very young faces unless care is taken to prevent them. And this is why these younger women—the women of Gloria Gould's set, of the gay younger set everywhere—are turning to Pond's Method of skin care.

For Pond's Two Creams keep them looking fresh and lovely—"they've simply got to, you know," said Gloria Gould—prevent all weariness from showing and guard the satin smoothness of their exquisite complexions.

How the younger set does it

THE first step in the Pond's method followed by the lovely younger women of society is a thorough daily cleansing of the skin with Pond's Cold Cream. This should come after exposure, at the end of a long day or just before retiring.

Smooth the cream over the face and neck, with liberal strokes across any little lines that are beginning to weave their unwelcome pattern on the delicate tissues. Let the pure oil of this cream delve down into the pores and bring up the dust and grime, the powder and rouge that clog them. Wipe it off now, with a soft cloth and instead of being shocked, just rejoice at the black look it gives you! Repeat the process, finishing with a dash of cold water or a brisk rub with a bit of ice.

Your peony-pink skin will make you think your face has never been really clean before! How relaxed it feels, how fresh and invigorated! Supple and flexible now, it has tone and firmness, too, just glows all over with new health!

The second step in the Pond's Method is to smooth over your newly cleansed face a light film of Pond's Vanishing Cream. This you must always do before powdering, never forgetting to do it before going out into the wind, sun, dust or cold.

The purpose of this delicate cream is four-fold—it protects the skin from the weather, gives it a soft, smooth finish and holds rouge and powder evenly and long. And used between the cleansings with Pond's Cold Cream, it freshens and rests the skin, too.

Like Gloria Gould and the other smart young women of the exclusive social set everywhere, you can have an exquisite complexion. Begin today with Pond's Two Creams. At once you'll notice a new freshness, a new smoothness, a lovely lustre. And the daily use of these Two Creams will keep your skin just as exquisite as this for years! With Gloria Gould you'll agree that Pond's Two Creams "are really remarkable!" The Pond's Extract Company.

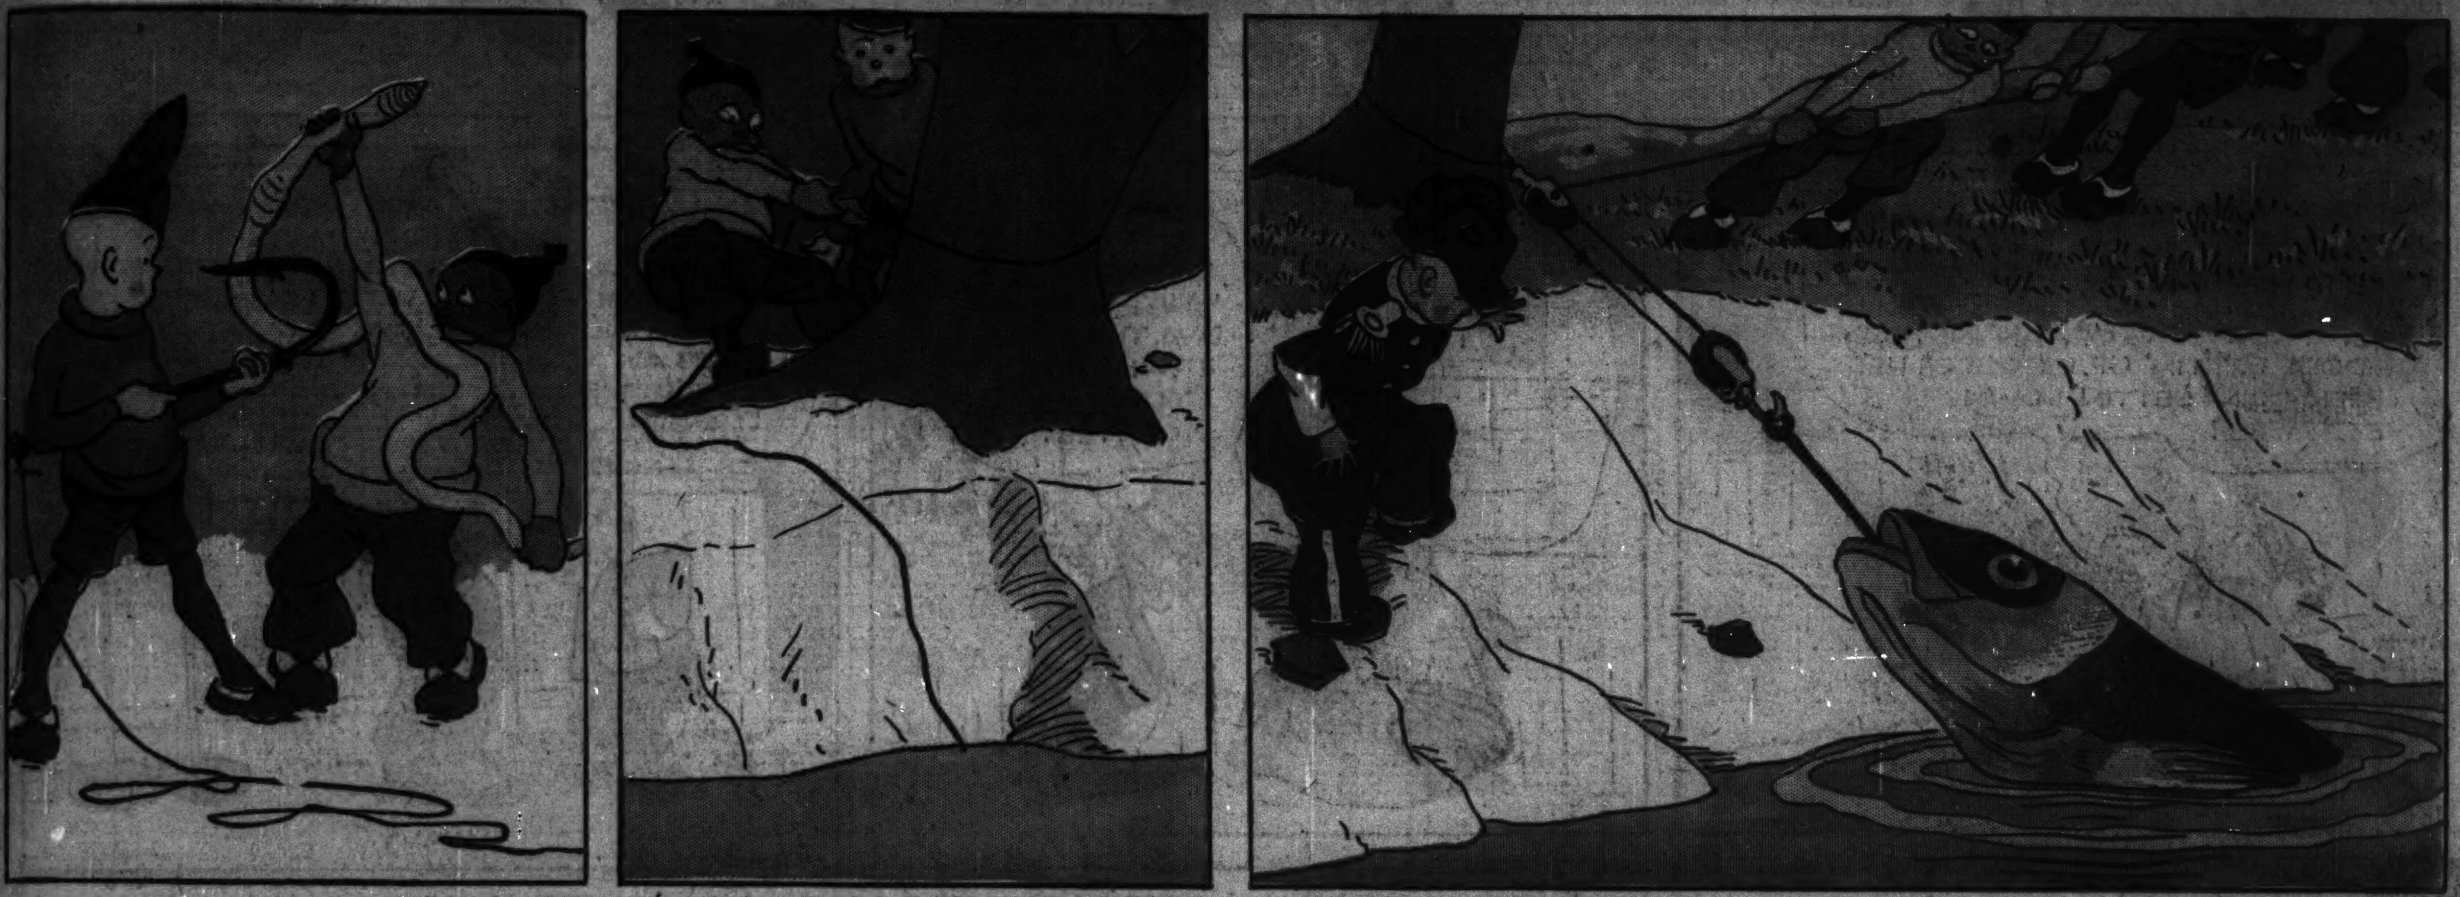
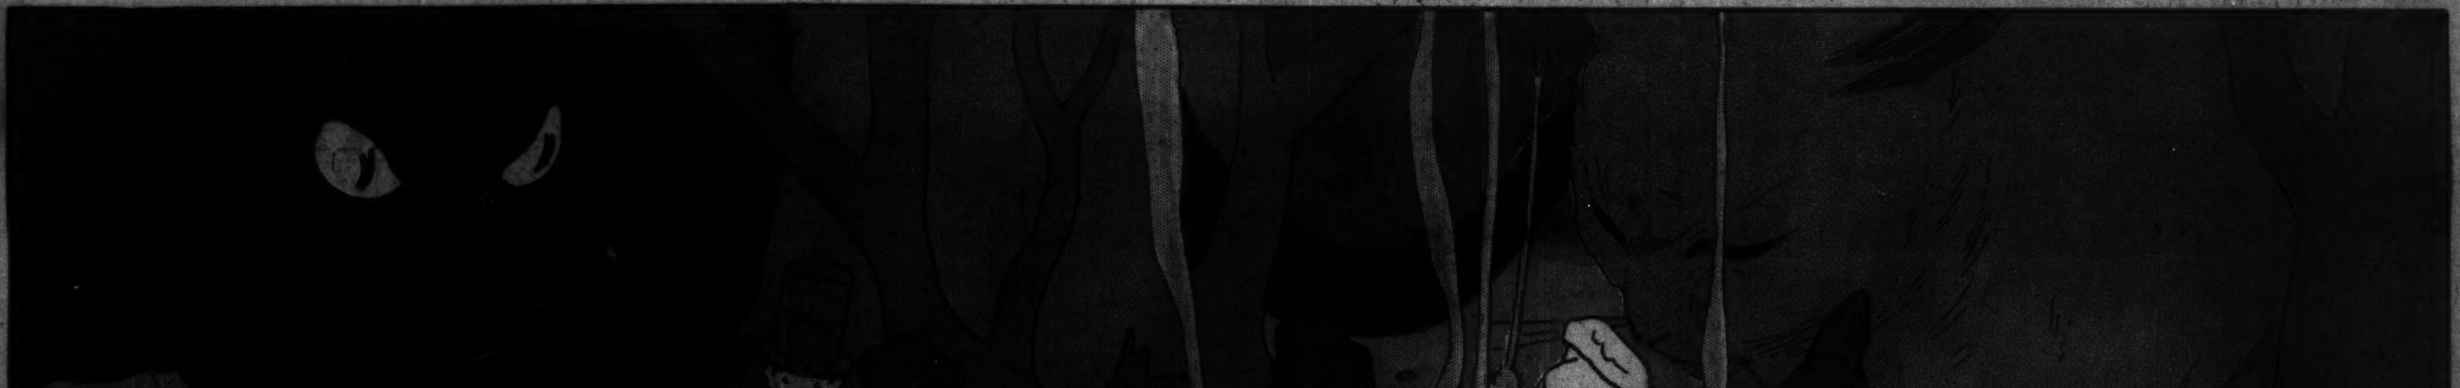
WEENIES.
THE WORLDS SMALLEST PEOPLE
Wm. DONAHEY



There is no use denying the fact—it was a terrible blunder. If the inviting of the guests had been left entirely to the Lady of Fashion, the party probably would have been a success, but that wasn't the case and everyone invited everybody in sight and that's what caused the disaster—but that's getting ahead of the story. It all started when the Dunce and Gogo found a big fish-hook.

They baited it with a fat worm and dropped the hook into a deep hole where big fish had often been seen. It was most fortunate that they had the good sense to tie the line fast to a bush, or they never in the world would have landed the fish. It was a huge perch, and it took all the Teenie Weenies nearly half a day to drag it out of the creek—they had to use a block and tackle to haul it up the bank.



"We'll never be able to eat all this monster," said the General when the fish was safe on shore. "We'd better invite our friends to help us out, for it would be a sin to have this nice fresh fish spoil for lack of mouths." So invitations were broadcast in all directions to a Barbecue and Fish Eat. The fish was much too big to be cooked in the Teenie Weenie kitchen, so a grill was fixed up with wire near the creek, where it was roasted to a turn. A number of birds, mice, rabbits, and squirrels arrived, and everybody seemed to be having a good time until two cats arrived.

Right then and there the trouble started. Five mice left in such a huff they never even said good-by, the rabbits and squirrels hung about for a few minutes and then left in a body, while the birds flew up into the top of a tree and held an indignation meeting. There was nothing the Teenie Weenies could do but be as pleasant to the cats as possible. It wouldn't have been nearly so bad if only one cat had been invited, for one cat is company and two are a fight. The cats glared at one another and soon they were cursing each other in the foulest language and presently the party broke up in a terrible fight.
